EASILY PUT ON OR OFF.

A SPLENDID DINNER FOR HEARTY EATERS

Short ribs of beef, brown gravy

Plain boiled potato Bread

Sweet dill pickles

Apple pie Cheese

Coffee

Put the ribs to boil in just enough water to cover them. Salt, add two pepper pods, one slice of onion and one laurel leaf. Boil slowly until tender. Take up, wipe dry, lay in a baking pan, sift little flour over them and brown in oven. There will be enough fat in the pan for the gravy. Heat it, stir in one heaping tablespoon of flour and stir well until lumps disappear. Turn into this flour and fat one and one-half cups of cold water and allow to boil five minutes.

Place the ribs on a platter, peel the potatoes which have been boiled with their jackets on, place them around the ribs and send the gravy to the table in a gravy boat.

This dinner will be eaten with a relish by every one in the family.

POOR ON $250 A WEEK

Gaekwar of Baroda Cuts Down Son's Allowance at Harvard

Prince Jaisint, the son of the Gaekwar of Baroda, sailed for home after having spent some time at Harvard University, where he had been studying. The Prince did not take a degree, but it was said that he had finished his studies and was going home to take up his position in his fathers' court. It is learned, however, that the young Indian Prince recently had his allowance cut in half and was unable with the smaller amount to "hold his end up" with the millionaire set with which he was associated. The Gaekwar had been allowing his son $500 a week, but when this was cut to $250 the young man decided that he would return to India. The incident is a revelation to a great many people of how expensively one may live at Harvard.

BLOWS ITSELF ALONG

Frenchman's Auto Uses Wind as Motive Power

Bertram De Lesseps, a brother of the famous airman, has his brother's liking for flying. Only he wanted to do his "flying" safely on terra firma, and so he rigged up an aerial auto to do it in.

Except for the general outline, the machine resembles the automobile very little. Instead of gasoline as a motive power, it uses the wind. A "rotary wing" aerial propeller, the shape and curve of which are based upon those of a bird's wing, drive the machine along at a fairly good speed. The propeller is placed a little to one side of the machine's rear so it can be turned towards the wind. The wings are protected at the sides by shield bars.

Propeller on Auto

Not only has it to be blown along roads, up and down hill, but it has been lashed upon a scow which carried a load of 270 tons and it succeeded in propelling the scow at a speed of five miles an hour down stream and two miles and hour up stream. The scow was as manageable as if driven by the ordinary machine propeller, turning, backing and going forward again under perfect control.

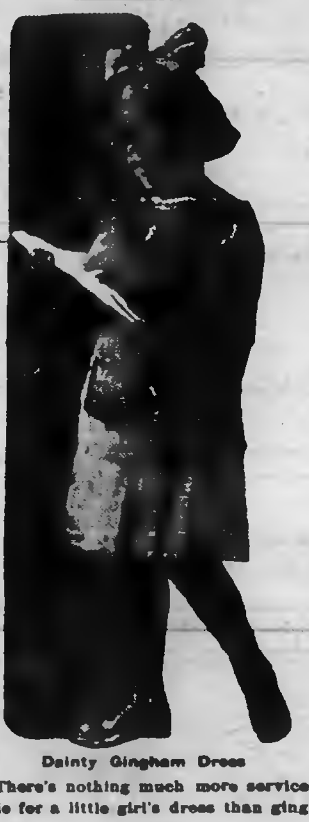
TO CURL FEATHERS

The fashionable ostrich feather, although it is not so tightly curled as the old-fashioned plume, looks even more bedraggled and forlorn when it is out of curl than the old one did. Yet fogs and mists or rains are as frequent as ever, and ostrich feathers are worn at all times of the day and night, regardless of the weather.

There is only one thing to do if you wear ostrich feathers, and that is to learn how to curl them. When the moist hat with feather trimming is removed, put it, if possible, near a fire. Heat often restores a good deal of the lost curl. When this is not possible, let the feather dry thoroughly and then recurl it with the edge of a teaspoon. This is not so sharp as the much-used knife, and is less likely to injure the fibre.

Work with one or two of the fronds of the feather at a time. Catch them between the thumb and the spoon near the stem of the feather and slowly and firmly draw the thumb and the blade along the fronds to the edge. If necessary, go over some of the feathers twice.

It is surprising how rapidly this curling can be done; and if it is carefully done after a little practice the feather will look quite as well as if it had been curled by a professional.



Dainty Gingham Dress

There's nothing much more serviceable for a little girl's dress than gingham. It always looks so fresh and new when crisp and clean.

The striped gingham dress worn by the little miss in the illustration is made in the Norfolk sailor style with black patent leather belt. The fashion is a particularly suitable one for children because it gives them plenty of room in which to exercise and grow.

Plain goods are used for the collar and cuffs, and a chemisette with standing collar completes the garment. The bands down the front of the coat are cut on the bias.

THE WIFE

I am young, O shaggy mountains; I am young and you are old;
You are mighty, brooding pines, and I am small;
And your great, gaunt shadows crush me with a horror still and cold
And your sullen silence holds me like a pall.

Just to-day I went for water to a little silver spring
Where the air was sweet and scarlet berries grew;
And my dreams came flocking homewards and my haunting fears took wing
Till the night crawled forth to meet me. Then I knew.

I am stranger to your silence; I am alien to your might;
I am longing for a little, laughing world
Where the days went dancing past me, for my heart was very light—
And from many friendly hearths the smoke upcurled.

Yet he loves you, lonely mountains, and he says he loves me, too.
And his cabin nestles trusting at your feet;
But my heart is torn with longing for the gentle land I knew—
And the careless hours when life was very sweet.

Will you always frown upon me through the weary, weary years
Till my dream home fades to silence and to night?
I was gay, O brooding mountains, till you taught me pain and tears.
I am alien to your solitude and might.

KEEPING BREAD FRESH

Cold Storage Found to Prevent Staleness for Several Days

For thousands of years mankind has been content with allowing its bread to get stale, and this fact has come to be considered unavoidable. It is the more surprising that researches by Dr. J. R. Katz at the Physical-Chemical Laboratory of the University of Amsterdam, should have shown that there is in point of fact no need for allowing our bread to lose its toothsomeness. When kept either at a very low or very high temperature, bread is in fact preserved "new" for some days at least, staleness being due only to the ordinary temperature of bread storage and consumption.

In Dr. Katz's experiments, bread was kept absolutely new for more than 40 hours at a temperature of 60 degrees centigrade, while at a temperature of 30 to 40 degrees it became only "half stale." At ordinary temperatures it of course grew rapidly stale.

Dr. Katz accordingly recommends keeping the newly baked bread at temperatures of 50 degrees centigrade, and upward, thus keeping the crumb absolutely new, whereas the crust by absorbing water becomes limp and flexible. If the bread be then put back again into the oven for a short time the crust will give up its water, thus becoming hard and crisp as before. An even simpler course is preserving the bread in cold storage rooms kept at sufficiently low temperatures. If these rooms be sufficiently dry, the crust likewise remains hard and crisp so that the bread even after a considerable time is equivalent to new bread.

Apart from its importance to the housewife this process is of the highest economical interest, relieving as it does the baker of the necessity of baking his bread by night.—Scientific American.

Simple Home Remedy

Simple remedies often prove effective if used quickly and correctly. For instance, if you get a bit of dust, an eyelash or any sort of "speck" in your eye try this method. Turn the eye affected toward the nose as far as you can. Pull the eyelid down as far as you can over the eye. Then blow the opposite nostril hard. This will frequently carry the offending particle down through the eye duct into the nose. Do not rub the eye when there is something in it. That merely inflames the eyeball without effecting a remedy. If something lodges in the eyeball this simple method will probably fail. It will then be necessary to secure proper treatment as soon as possible.

IN BAFFIN'S LAND

Baffin's Land, that bleak, rugged wilderness in the Arctic seas, and the Eskimos which inhabit it, was the subject of an illustrated address by Rev. A. M. Fleming, a missionary for some time in that country. He spoke simply as a missionary, not as an explorer. That it is an inhospitable country with nothing to attract the white man or sustain him if he should venture into it, no one could doubt after Mr. Fleming had finished his lecture. It was simply a stretch of land, a wilderness fit for the Eskimo only, a race peculiarly adapted to living there.

There are only two seasons of the year, three months of summer and nine months of winter. The only vegetation is the moss that covers the hills for a few months, a few flowers and some stray shrubs.

The inhabitants, Mr. Fleming said, are a hardy, degraded race, with primitive instincts. Their igloos are full of filth all the year round. They are quite willing to learn and take up almost any religion, contending that their belief is not the only belief. However, the idea that the Eskimo was hostile to the white man was quite true, as most of the whalers and traders had done nothing but injure him; but once he learned that the white race could be friendly, he was the most generous person in the world.

In stature they are small, all of them under four feet ten inches, and have a copper color, Mr. Fleming thinks, to lack of water there more than anything else.

TENNIS.

London, Aug. 1.—An anonymous letter appearing in the Standard today declares that the English competitors in the Davis cup tennis matches were the better all-round players but that the Americans won the trophy because McLoughlin had mastered and concentrated his play on a smashing service, in which any number of English players, could have equally perfected themselves.

"Thus, the cup was won," the letter continues, "by a trick, though a perfectly legitimate trick within the rules, which does not further the best interests of lawn tennis, and unless this smash service is barred, like the spot stroke in billiards, tennis is within measurable distance of death."

BASEBALL

New York, Aug. 1.—Every Nap pitcher carries his own special brand of dirt in his hip pocket when he works at the Polo grounds. There's a good reason for it, too.

The soil in and around the pitcher's box contains some property or other which makes the cover of the ball slipper the moment it becomes slightly damp. This prevents a pitcher getting a good grip on the sphere. The ball becomes hard to handle even when the hand perspires slightly.

Willie Mitchell dug up a pocketful of dirt in front of the Naps' bench and rubbed it on the ball at intervals. Blanding, who pitched Saturday, carried part of Central park to the Polo grounds with him and used it against the Yanks.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Griffith has another southpaw on his staff, Bentley, a star on local sand lots. The Senators' manager has a partiality to southpaws, and now has six either with the team or farmed out.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—In answer to a suggestion by a local newspaper to the Carnegie museum that the baseball uniform and glove of Honus (Hans) Wagner, the great shortstop of the Pittsburgh National league team, should be placed in the museum so that future generations might gaze upon this famous player's suit, Dr. W. J. Holland, director of the museum, has given out a statement. He says:

"There is a reason why the Carnegie institute should accept Wagner's suit and glove, if offered. The trustees, when they selected an inscription for the seal of the institution, chose the words 'Honos alit artes'—'Honor nourishes the arts.'"

RING.

When Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers drew a gate of $29,000 for their recent championship battle, the fact was again strikingly demonstrated that the lightweights of fistiana are the ones in highest favor with lovers of boxing. Of course, there have been greater receipts than $29,000 for a ring battle, but these other record houses were attracted from the country over, while Ritchie and Rivers drew their patronage almost entirely from the territory tributary to San Francisco.

What a brilliant array of champions have reigned in the lightweight class. McAuliffe, Lavigne, Erne, Gans, Nelson, Wolgast, Ritchie—each a champion in every sense of the word.

STUMP BURNER

Bell Shaped Cover With Smoke Outlet Surrounds Stump

For the swift and cleanly extermination of tree stumps the apparatus devised by a man in the State of Washington seems to fill the bill. A bell-shaped metal cover surrounds the stump and around the top of this cover are openings, through which is thrust the burner tube. One opening has a pipe, or smokestack, rising from it, and this carries off the smoke that accumulates under the bell. At the point of the burner tube is a lighting coil that has a tip close to the mouth of the tube. As the gas is forced through the tube it can be automatically lighted from the outside by turning the key that operates the coil. This gives a powerful, roaring flame of intense heat that consumes the stump in short order, the noxious fumes escaping through the smoke stack, which carries them over the workman's head.

WASHING LACE

In Tepid Water With a Pinch of Soda

There are two ways to do everything; the right and the wrong. This applies to washing lace as to anything else.

Lace should be washed in tepid water which contains a very small pinch of soda. It should not be rubbed. Make a lather and dip the flimsy articles up and down in it.

It is a great mistake to iron lace. The wisest method in drying is to lay the collars or ruffles in a clean folded towel. When still a little damp pull the lace, make it into a small, tight roll and pin it. When it is completely dry unfold it. The lace will look almost like new.

FANS LIKE BASE STEALERS

All the Managers Are Out After Speed Merchants

Baseball fans like clever pitching, delight in plenty of slugging, enthuse over sensational fielding, but enjoy no feature of the game more than the art of base-running. Nothing excites the fans more than some bit of daring on the base lines. What could be more thrilling than a cleverly executed steal of home, with the winning run of the game

Speed, properly converted, is the main asset of every successful team and the crying need of every club that is in the race. A team that always needs a bunch of hits to get only a few runs is a club that will not be at all dangerous in the long run. It is the team that is always taking chances on the bases, the club that makes its opportunities, that generally cuts in on the world's series melon. When a baseball club is going badly inject a little speed into the aggregation and it will usually take on renewed life and energy at once.

FORCIBLE FEEDING

The danger of forcible feeding is increased by the accidents liable to accompany the passage of tubes down the nose or throat. In several instances the oesophageal tube was passed into the larynx. Even in cases who did not offer resistance great pain and suffocation was caused by the clumsy use of the nasal tube when it coiled up in the back of the throat or came out of the mouth, and then had to be reinserted several times. The severe choking and vomiting which sometimes accompanied the passage of the tube led to danger from the entrance of food into the larynx.

The injection of food into the lung actually occurred in the case of one unresisting prisoner in whom the operation immediately caused severe choking, and vomiting was followed by persistent coughing. All night the patient could not sleep or lie down on account of great pain in the side of the chest. She was hurriedly released next day, so ill that the authorities discharging her obliged her to sign a statement that she left the prison at her own risk. On her arrival at home she was found to be very ill, suffering from pneumonia and pleurisy due to the food passed into the lung. Being fortunately a young and strong woman, she escaped with her life.

Severn Division.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Port Severn Section—Severn Division, Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 2.00 o'clock p.m., on Monday, August 25th, 1913.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after July 26th at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at the office of the District Engineer, Public Works Department, Midland, Ont., and at the office of the Postmaster, Orillia, Ont.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada, for the sum of $10,000 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

IF GULF STREAM WERE DIVERTED

Would Work a Tremendous Change in Northern and Equatorial Climates

Mr. Carroll Livingstone Riker, the engineer of the Panama Canal, has published a book on the "Power and Control of the Gulf Stream," in which he discusses the problem of preserving to the universe the benevolent warmth of the Gulf Stream and the destruction of the cold of the Arctic. He concludes that a jetty of rocks, loosely thrown together, about 200 miles long across the shoals extending eastward from Newfoundland, near Cape Race, would stop the Labrador Current, whose cold, it has been estimated, is capable of making 2,000,000 tons of ice every second, from running right into the Gulf Stream, whose heat, it has been calculated, is equal to the burning of 2,000,000 tons of coal every minute. They meet now on the Grand Banks, where the water is only about 250 feet deep. The Gulf Stream is split up and spreads out over millions of square leagues of the Atlantic. But, if such a jetty were built, the Labrador Current coming down from the Arctic would be turned eastward, and would be sunk so far when the Gulf Stream met it that the latter warm blue river of the ocean would pass over the great cold river from the North Pole. The warm Gulf Stream would continue in almost undiminished volume to the northward, and the Labrador Current would run a mile deep through the great depths of the Atlantic, making the torrid zone about the equator cooler, while the Gulf Stream would require only three months to melt every inch of ice around the pole. No more icebergs in the steamship lanes, no more fogs about the meeting of the cold and warm currents, storms reduced to a minimum, and the whole of eastern North America a garden of paradise with no great cold or heat, are some of the results Mr. Riker foresees from building the jetty. Cape Hatteras, he believes, would disappear through the increased speed of the Gulf Stream, which he estimates would flow closer to the Jersey coast and incidentally re-deposit along the coast about 6,000,000 acres of land. The melting of the Arctic ice cap, he estimates, would shift the equalising balance of the globe, and the then preponderating weight of the Antarctic ice cap would make what is now the North Pole point shift toward Northern Europe, with the result of producing a nightless summer in the area of Scotland without a dayless winter. Mr. Riker shows that the material for the jetty is ready at hand, that the Labrador Current will itself build up with its sand scoured from its Arctic course, the barrier, to its conflict with the Gulf Stream. Thus, as "Science Siftings" puts it, it would "cost less than $200,000,000 to make Siberia a summer resort, start ice famines in Labrador, give Scotland an all-year summer, with a temperature like Japan's; change the climate of the frigid Atlantic coast of America to one like that of Southern California, melt all the ice on and around the North Pole, and open it to market gardening. To do so will be much cheaper, much easier, and twice as quickly done as to build the Panama Canal."

FROZEN YET ALIVE

Remarkable Experiments That Have Been Made With Fish

Fishes belong to the class of animals that have variable body temperature, depending on the temperature of their environment. In extreme cold they assume a rigid condition, in which all of the vital functions are suspended, while life still remains present. During several months of each year some of the great rivers of Siberia are frozen solid to the bottom, but many of the fishes imprisoned in the ice retain their vitality, and resume their active life when the ice melts in the spring. This fact has suggested experiments in the freezing of live fish for transportation. Many years ago the celebrated physicist Pictet, of Geneva, put fresh water fishes into a tub of water, which he kept liquid at the freezing point for 24 hours and then allowed to freeze slowly into a solid block of ice, which afterward was cooled gradually. When the ice was melted, a month or even two months afterward, the fishes began to swim as briskly as they did before freezing, and showed no symptom of ill health. Similar experiments have recently been made in France. The fishes are placed in water which is kept near the freezing point for a few hours, then at the freezing point for 15 to 18 hours, and finally frozen by immersing the vessel in a freezing mixture, producing a cake of ice a few inches thick, in which the frozen fishes are embedded. This cake is wrapped in cloth and surrounded with a heat-insulating packing, to prevent melting during transportation. It is necessary to thaw the ice very slowly and to keep the water near the freezing point for several hours, in order to preserve the life of the fishes. Even those which do not survive are in a perfect state of preservation.

THE CANADIAN OYSTER

It is Declared to Be the Finest in the World.

It is worthy of note that the Canadian oyster is the finest in the world. And yet Canadians are not making the best of their opportunities in the direction of oyster culture. In a report Earnest Kemp, oyster expert, says on this subject: "Another season has passed and no arrangements have been arrived at with regard to leasing barren bottoms, for the purpose of cultivating oysters, to those persons who would like to venture into this industry. Our oysters and natural beds are slowly but surely decreasing and something must be done to counteract and check the loss sustained. The greatest wonder is that under prevailing circumstances our natural beds have stood the strain so long. The loss is not only from excessive fishing, for when once an area has been raided by the farmers, they utterly destroy the bed for future use. What puzzles me is that while there are so many thousands of acres of useless land under the sea which could be made revenue-producing by royalties from their lease for oyster cultivation, a number of persons anxious to go into the business are deprived of the opportunity of thus making a living or increasing their income, simply for want of an amicable arrangement between the federal and provincial governments. When we look around at all the other countries where oyster cultivation is carried on, and see how their trade is increasing, does it not make us feel as if we are debarred from a privilege that every citizen is justy entitled to?"

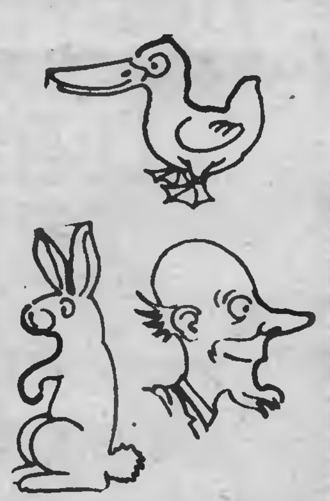
WHAT DO YOU SEE IN A CROOKED LINE?



Here's an idea for entertaining a party of young folks with materials always at hand—pencils and paper. Let each member of the party draw at random on the center of his sheet of paper a short, crooked line. The line should not cross itself at any point. When this has been done all the guests exchange papers and each tries to make a picture on the paper he receives, using the crooked line as part of the outline of his drawing. The pictures shown herewith were made in this way, the original line being distinguished by being made heavier than the rest.

Bladder and Kidney Troubles

Are caused by poisoning impurities which clog the Kidneys; intense pain is the result and sleepless nights follow. The patient becomes annoyed with sharp pains shooting through the back and up the spine. These pains often so violent and acute that the victim suffers the greatest agony and is driven almost to despair. The refuse and sediment which settled in the Kidneys must be removed in order to procure relief.

SANOL, the Kidney Cure, is the only reliable remedy which has a combined effect of acting on the kidneys, and restoring them to their natural condition, and removing Kidney, Bladder and Gall Stones by dissolving same. It cleanses and purifies the system, strengthens and invigorates the Kidneys, and encourages proper filtration. It relieves the pain and gives strength and energy to the body. Price $1.00 per bottle.

A NORTHERN HORROR

Insane From Hunger a Man Killed And Partly Ate Companion

Tortured by the furies of an Alaskan winter, subsisting thirty days on skins of dead animals, and finally driven insane by an eight-day period of starvation, Henry Leclaire, a French trapper, killed and partly ate the body of Len. Lemieux, declared to have been a guide of the Hudson Bay Company, near Mile 53, British Columbia. Such is the tale unfolded in a letter. Leclaire and Lemieux tasted no morsel of any kind for eight days on an extended hunt. In a deserted shack, 75 miles from the settlement, each man waited for the other to sleep, for the killing of one meant food for the other. Lemieux was killed, however, being stabbed in the heart eight times. Twenty-three other wounds were also inflicted. Part of the body was eaten, while Leckwith scratched the story on the cabin with his knife. Leclaire has not been found.

As Children Do

Sometimes when night is creeping down
And all the world is dim,
And he must go to Sleepytown,
You lie down at the side of him
And whisper soothing little things
In childish words, such as your fame
To tell the sound of beetle wings,
And how the firefly gets its flame.

And soon the world grows darker yet
And to the little fellow's eyes
Strange, hidden dangers now beset
The shadow places in the skies;
But you speak low and comforting
And tell him none of them are
But what is kind and good and fair.

Then trembling come his little hands
Out through the dark and find your face,
As though by touch he understands
That he is in the safest place;
And so with fingers on your cheek
He sighs contentedly to sleep—
And you—you may not even speak,
So very, very still you keep.

Some time you, as a little child,
Shall fare into an unknown night
And shall yearn for the stars that smiled
With all their soothing, drowsy light;
And you, as little children do,
May grope out through the darks of space
And sigh in peace to sleep, when you
At last have touched your Father's face.

HEADACHE MEDICINES

Serious Consequences Almost Sure to Follow Constant Taking

The headache medicine habit is a bad one! The powders, tablets and capsules so frequently taken to cure a severe headache often lead to the drug habit. The main argument against using headache medicines is that they harm the blood cells in such a way that they cannot properly carry oxygen to the cells of the body nor can they carry away body wastes. The consequence is self-evident. The body becomes clogged with poison. The individual gets flabby and soft-suboxidized, physically and mentally. The headache which was an occasional visitor becomes a frequent visitor. In stead of being cured by a small dose of headache medicine, it takes a much larger one to dull the pain. However a person may be justified in taking an occasional dose of headache medicine, but in such case the condition should be exceptional. Whenever you find yourself becoming a regular patron of the headache pellet pull yourself up. It's time to take time to find out the cause of the headaches. Remedies that are needed frequently are of little use. It is far better to ascertain the underlying trouble and prevent the need of a cure.

COULD NOT BE KICKED

Williams called at two houses in Ancoats, representing that he was an officer looking for a man who, he stated, had been "drawing a dead man's pension for two years." He was arrested, and an officer told the stipendiary that Williams, after being put in the cells, had to be taken to Ancoats Hospital, but he said he was only shamming. Williams represented that he was suffering from hemorrhage and bled at the mouth, but a doctor at the hospital found the blood had been caused by Williams pricking his nostril with a piece of wire. Williams pleaded that he had no evil design. It was a piece of foolishness for which he ought to be kicked.

The Stipendiary: "I am afraid we are not allowed to sentence you to be kicked."

It was stated that on one occasion Williams, by representing himself to be a doctor, had induced a young lady to marry him.

Removing Stains.

Peach stains can be removed from linen by dampening them, sprinkling them with powdered cream of tartar and bleaching them in the sun.

New High Explosive.

A new English high explosive, said to be twice as powerful as dynamite can be shot full of holes, burned in a fire or pounded with a hammer without danger.

Huge Traffic.

Although New Yorks subways when built were designed to carry only 400,000 passengers a day, they carried an average of 890,000 daily in the last fiscal year.

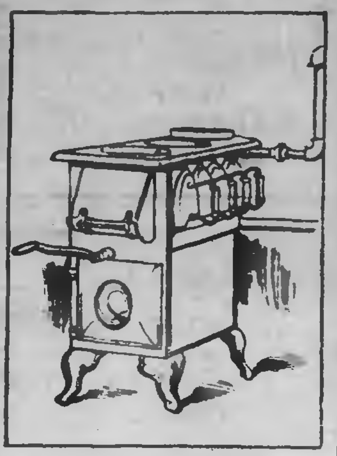
Illuminating the Bait.

A fluid secreted by certain fish caught in Portugal is used by fishermen of that country to make their bait luminous, thereby attracting other fish at night.

STOVE HEATS MANY IRONS

Shelves Along Sides of Fire Box Accomodate Extra Lot

A Kentucky man has designed a stove for laundry purposes that will heat 14 flatirons at once. At the same time he has attached a boiler to it so that water can be heated at the same time the irons are without any waste of heat. The fire box of this stove has heavy cast iron side linings which take up the heat. Along both sides are shelves, each of which holds four eight-pound irons, points up, with their bottoms against the stove and in direct contact with the heated portion. These shelves account for eight of the 14 irons which constitute the heating capacity of the stove, the other six being heated on top in the ordinary way. In front the stove has a drop door, fitted so that no air can get in when it is closed. Altogether this stove appears to be just what is needed in laundries.



HAS WATER BOILER ALSO.

RACE OF PYGMIES INTEREST

In People Recently Discovered in Papua, Scientists See a Connection With the Stone Age.

In a race of pygmies recently discovered in Papua, scientists see another connecting link between the average savage races of today and primitive man of the stone age. Tapiro is the name given to this pygmy race. The men are extremely small but well molded, strong and active. In contrast to the Papuans, they have stocky, well-made calves instead of the thin, straight legs of their neighbors.

Unlike most savages, they do not practice tattooing or cicatrization. Their needs for comfort are few. Each man may carry all his portable property in a sort of haversack, which is slung over his shoulder. This contains his sleeping mat, fire stick, rattan for kindling a flame, tobacco and other odds and ends.

They are remarkably skilful in hewing rough but absolutely balanced canoes from the heavy trunks of trees. The craft are beautifully carved and are propelled by paddles with long shafts and wide blades. Skilful as they are in the making of canoes, their only implements are stone axes and bone knives.

In disposing of their dead they wrap the body in mats and place it in a rude coffin usually constructed of broken canoes. The coffin is raised on a sort of trestle and left until decomposition is complete. The skulls of the dead are kept by their relatives and friends and in a short time become worn smooth from handling.

WOMAN CARRIED LIQUOR IN ARTIFICIAL BUST

Numerous, peculiar, and ingenious have been the methods of secretly getting liquor through to the mining camps of Northern Ontario, but one discovered at South Porcupine, takes the palm for novelty. The authorities acting on information they had received stopped and searched a woman after she had alighted from the train. She was found to be wearing an artificial bust manufactured out of tin or galvanized iron, and containing no less than two gallons of the raw spirit. She also wore a belt containing a further two gallons of liquor. The police confiscated the liquor, but allowed her to go.

HAIR, TEETH, TOES

Chicago Professor Says These in Time Will Disappear

Prof. Frederick Starr, of the Department of Anthropology of the University of Chicago, told the class that some time in the future, hair, teeth and the little toes would be missing from the members of the human race.

"Pre-digested foods, hats and shoes have rendered hair, teeth and the little toe useless," he said. "The time will come when the man, woman or child possessing these will be a curiosity.

"The natural man needs hair as a defence and protection against the struggles of primitive life. We with our hats and our civilisation do not need it. Persons with a scant supply of hair seem to die out among primitive peoples, but in civilisation they increase.

"If teeth and hair and the little toes are to be preserved then it will be necessary for the civilised inhabitants of this world to get back to nature as soon as possible."

Missouri Divorce

A Missouri woman has been granted divorce on the double-barrelled plea that he had failed to support her and that she didn't want his name to appear on her tombstone.

Too Cold in Canada

A mother asked the Highgate magistrate for assistance to get her sixteen-year-old daughter back from Canada, on the ground that it is too cold out there.

Why They Were Absent

Excuses were granted at Clerkenwell County Court in two instances of non-attending jury-men. One of the absentees was on the high seas and the other in a lunatic asylum.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

British Women Teachers

The rulers of the world owe much to British nurses and governesses. They have been beside the Royal youngsters of almost every European country. The Czar walked bareheaded behind the coffin of the English nurse who tended him so carefully in his childhood. An English governess had charge of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, an Irish lady was responsible for much of the earliest education of King Alfonso, the Kaiser is indebted to an English lady for his excellent English, the late King of the Belgians and the late King of Portugal had British governesses. Some of these ladies exercised an almost autocratic rule over their charges.

A French physician, who used to attend the Emperor and the Empress of the French at Biarritz, has related how his British nurse made the Prince Imperial eat spinach, "which he detested," in order to cool his blood. "But the child loved his nurse so devotedly that he always gave way to please her," he states.

"Tomboy" Makes Ideal Mother

The Crown Princess of Sweden, who is a daughter of the Duke of Connaught, is devoted to open-air amusements. She rides and cycles, swims and rows, plays golf, tennis and hockey; and can drive her own motor car.

But she was trained never to forget the first duties of a woman, and is skilled in the gentle pursuits of housewifery. She is able to give the most accomplished nurse or governess "tips" anent the nursery and schoolroom.

As Princess Margaret of Connaught her Royal Highness enjoyed the reputation of being the "tomboy" of the Royal Family, and when she first arrived at the somewhat stiff and formal Court of Sweden she was regarded as something of an enigma. The Princess has since these days found that the Swedes are kinder than their climate, and she is idolized by all sections of the community.

CLEVER FILM ACTOR

This Man Plays Parts on Screens all Over the Country

After all, there's no one quite so interesting and versatile as a character man in a stock company.

William West, for instance, who is one of the best known of the actors in the moving picture business plays almost as many parts as there are days in the year. Sometimes he is a dear old, dreamy musician whose outlook on life is through the windows of an artist's soul.

Sometimes he is a tramp, dirty, poverty-stricken, and grotesque; viewing all things from the standpoint of the hungry under dog.

Occasionally he is just an old man, benign, tottering, and content to live the life of one who has done his work and earned a rest.

William West as a Tramp and—

As Nature Made Him

He says makeup helps him to hide his own personality as well as his looks.

As he makes the face of the old man he is to play and dons the clothes of that particular, he gradually grows into the atmosphere of the part.

When the last touches have been put on his mobile face, the highlights in the character as he proposes to portray it are fixed in his mind.

Housewives Say That

It is a good plan to roll sausages in flour before frying them, as it prevents their bursting.

It is very convenient to have a board sprinkled with kitchen salt at hand when ironing. The salt cleans the irons.

This is a color fastening for printed fabrics. Dissolve about 2 cents worth of sugar of lead in a gallon of cold water. Plunge in the print articles for one hour. Wring out and wash in the usual way. Colors never wash out after.

This saves on the coal bill. A good handful of common washing soda dissolved in a half gallon of warm water and then thrown over the coal and allowed to dry will lengthen the life of the coal by twice and give out just as much heat.

To save herring-boning when making a flannel undergarment first run the seam, then turn down once, but instead of herring-boning it run the seam again. By doing this you will find the stitches will wash into the flannel, and not be seen. It is also much quicker than herring-boning.

New Paste

A paste made from ordinary whiting, applied wet and permitted to dry before it is rubbed off, will remove grease from paint without injuring the latter.

Novel Fire Escape

An Illinois inventor's metal ladder fire escape, which can be unreeled from a window as a person descends, is provided with guides to prevent it swaying dangerously from side to side.

New Motorboat

One of the newest air and water craft is a motorboat fitted with planes which lift it clear of the water when a speed of about 40 miles an hour is attained and carry it through the air at even greater speed.

Tallest Woman Dead

Ella Ewing, "The Missouri Giantess," said to be the tallest woman in the world, who died at Quincy, Ill., recently, at the age of forty years, was 8 feet 2 inches in height and for many years traveled with circuses.

Modern Conveniences

The roof of a large Philadelphia hotel is being equipped with a landing stage for aeroplanes and a course for automobiles, which will be lifted to it by specially designed elevators.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the island of Cirgne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Heligoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

"Not so very long ago I was your prisoner, and when I told you that I would escape, you only laughed. I escaped, and am standing here before you as proof that I can do what I say. Count von Werdenstein, how will you answer for the mass murder that you will be responsible for? We have tried to avoid conflict."

"You speak as if a mighty army and navy were at your elbow! What can you, a single man, do against the force back of me?"

"Then you will not believe me, will not heed the warning I give you? Count, look into your own heart! I, a single man, have the power to send you, with all your force, to the bottom of the sea. I, alone, plead with you to return to your own land and let your armies and navies disband, for if you don't, many will never see their loved ones again." The count was impressed by Napoleon's sad voice, but there were many things to be considered, and, above all else, his own pride. A thousand deaths would be easier to account for than the fact that he, Count von Werdenstein, at the command of a single man in an odd airship, turned homeward and abandoned the invasion of America.

When he spoke, there was bitterness in his voice:

"Mr. Edison, something tells me that you can do as you say. I know that, yet I will forget it until I arrive on American shores; I will not hesitate for a second, I will go forward to win or die. If there is only one chance in a million, I will try it. No shame shall besmirch the name of Werdenstein."

"I am sorry, Count von Werdenstein, but we must defend our country and liberty. I will now remove the flag of truce and return to America and from this second on you can consider me an enemy."

He closed the window, touched a lever and with one mighty beat of the flexible wings the machine ascended at least a hundred feet.

The count looked after Napoleon. His face was pale as he hurriedly descended to the bridge.

The eagle lingered above the right wing of the first line of dreadnoughts. Napoleon could inflict any damage he chose. He could almost count the number of men aboard each vessel. Werdenstein gave hurried orders, and watched eagerly for their execution.

A few minutes later two armored monoplanes glided up from the flagship and turned toward the eagle.

Napoleon must have suspected their intention, for he circled higher and higher up. The bats followed the eagle; each monoplane carried four men, each of whom carried small caliber, mitrailleuse bombs and other ammunition of war.

Still the eagle went higher and higher, hovering above the north wing of the long line of war boats. It was so high now that it appeared only a speck to the naked eye. The planes ascended in a spiral, and they were far behind. The eagle turned and led the two planes along the line, near the flagship. It descended quickly and made a dip similar to the swoop of the eagle on its prey that caused the thousands of spectators to believe it was falling, but before it touched the water it darted forward and skimmed the waves, its great wings touching the water occasionally.

Napoleon watched the enemies who were now above him. One had dropped several bombs, but none had touched the swiftly moving aerodromone. A turn of the wheel caused the eagle to make a circle before the Brigitta, then it went higher and higher until it reached the two monoplanes. Before Napoleon knew what they were about the two planes had opened fire; he was so close to them that the bullets fell on his aerodromone like hail. The result was surprising. The deadly missiles rebounded from the sides without leaving a mark on the glittering body.

Napoleon had cleverly led them directly in front of the flagship, so that the scene was enacted before the eyes of the count and his staff. It was marvelous, the greatest play a man's eyes had ever rested upon.

Napoleon turned to face the ascending bat. The count saw him reach up to a lever that he had not used before. He hesitated for a moment, but when the first bomb was thrown at him he pulled the lever; a flash followed. Zigzag lines of lightning burst forth and the once armored monoplane was shattered into a thousand bits. Its fate seemed to shatter the nerve of the engineer on the other plane, for he turned and raced for the flagship. It was too late. Napoleon pulled the lever again and it followed its comrade into space.

The count was pale; he had been given a terrible example of his enemy's power, still he did not turn back. Orders were flashed to the two boats nearest the eagle to open fire with their heavy guns. Napoleon read the order on his plate and was sad, but he knew that the only way to save the masses from annihilation was by a painful operation.

His right hand was on the lever, the left on the wheel; as the guns below thundered, the bird man was far away, and their shells were wasted. But the next moment brought the avenging answer; lightning after lightning darted toward the two boats, the powder magazines exploded and the dreaded giants were wrecks, sinking. A few minutes later the boats were gone, leaving a mass of floating debris and dead men.

The Count von Werdenstein looked at the scene helplessly. For the first time in his life he realized how puny he was.

He looked for the eagle, but it had disappeared.

Boats were put out at once to rescue those who had not been killed by the explosions; but the experiences of that day had spread terror over the whole fleet and the effect was demoralizing.

The Count von Werdenstein ordered all the commanders to gather at the flagship, for he felt that he had to decide on some action. He paced the bridge of the Brigitta. The navy and army under his command, that he had thought great enough to conquer the whole world, had been defeated by a single man.

When the council of war began the count stood to talk, but before he said a word a message from one of the transport boats was handed him. It read:

"We can see the other boats toward the east, but we cannot communicate with them. They are trying to reach us, but can make no progress. Please send orders."

CHAPTER XI.

Astra and Rositta.

The excitement caused by Napoleon's encounter with the enemy was indescribable. The automatic electrostylograph on board the American Eagle had recorded the action of the fleet and had made a copy of the count's answer to America's desires. The attack on the aerodromone was shown and the subsequent destruction of the monoplanes. Napoleon Edison's name was in large print on every board. The Hourly Stylograph said "God bless our deliverer!" The American's comment was "The hero of America." He was compared to Washington, to Lincoln and many other great American patriots. His name was on the lips of every citizen.

No one watched the bulletboard with such interest and none prayed for Napoleon's success more sincerely than Astra as she sat in her library with the Countess Rosiny.

Astra's kindness toward the countess had not soothed the pain she suffered. She would have preferred a dungeon of ancient times, where she could rave at her and curse her, but she was a patient service agent, and had early learned the art of concealing her feelings.

With passion burning in her heart she was able to respond gracefully to Astra. Even while she watched the conflict of the American Eagle and the European fleet she was scheming. She lived for intrigue. Her soul craved the excitement of battling minds. She considered herself still in the employ of the Count von Werdenstein, so she planned as she thought the count would have demanded.

Santos Duprel came to report the events of the day at the Z ray station, and to put before Astra suggestions for further defense. Napoleon could not come personally, so he sent his trusted assistant.

He was admitted to the library where the countess sat.

Santos Duprel was a pleasant individual, having, as most fat men, a keen sense of humor. He greeted the two beautiful women with a broad smile.

When Rositta retired to the rooms that had been assigned her she sat for a long time motionless, maturing a plan for the benefit of the Count von Werdenstein.

Astra was still at work in the library, completing preparations for the following day's duties as she closed her desk a sigh, a prayer left her lips: "God save our country, and shield Napoleon."

The next morning the admiral of the united navies of America received orders to sail with the fleet toward the enemy. Even the formation of the great squadron was planned in detail.

The Once Armored Monoplane Was Shattered Into a Thousand Bits.

The gray boats steamed toward the east in a broad line; they arrived at the isolation and could see hundreds of men-of-war before them, flying the flags of almost every European nation, but no sound penetrated the invisible ray that stretched before them.

The Count von Werdenstein was in despair. He and all his boats had been imprisoned between two Z rays for a week. He had held councils of war and the quickest boats and air crafts were sent out to break through the lines of resistance. He was ready to retire to Europe.

The word retreat did not seem so shameful as it had.

They had not seen the eagle during this time, but the arrival of the obsolete men-of-war told the count that some preparation had been made by his enemy to end this terrible state of affairs.

The eagle's appearance was reported early one morning. It came majestically sliding downward from a great height, flying the beautiful tricolor flag of liberty. This time Santos was at the wheel. Napoleon and a woman stood behind him.

The bird flew directly to the flagship. Not even the flag of truce was shown. When it reached the Brigitta the eagle dropped down toward the count, who stood on the bridge. His face was pale and careworn, and his eyes spoke of many sleepless nights.

"Brigitta, ahoy!" shouted Napoleon through the speaking tube. "A message for the commander." He dropped a large sealed letter at the count's feet. The eagle then turned and disappeared in the clouds toward the west.

Thought and care had been put into the message. It was a great document in itself, but its greatest beauty was in its expression of brotherly love, in its magnanimity in extending mercy to the enemy.

Rositta was present when that document was read finally. She was one of the last to touch it before it was carefully wrapped in the silk covers, it was she who placed the great seal on the imposing envelope.

The count took the message and retired into his cabin, where nobody dared disturb him. He cut the envelope, unfolded the silk wrapping and began to read. It was a long, concise resume of the present state of affairs; the chancellor was touched by the kindness of his enemies. Notwithstanding the degrading defeat, he knew now that the loss would not be as great as he feared.

The document decided upon the following:

1. The whole navy of the confederate European mights shall be delivered into the hands of Admiral John Earle, the American commander, who will see that all men and officers are safely returned to European ports.

2. The war vessels shall be the property of the United Republics of America, in consideration of which the said United Republics of America will pay a sum of money to be decided upon; however, not less than one-third of the actual value involved.

3. The European armies shall be immediately disarmed and the men in service shall be returned to their homes.

4. No other force, save for policing and a number of bodyguards for the reigning rulers, shall be allowed to exist in any of the countries. The United Republics of America will see that this item, in particular, is enforced.

5. The United Republics of America will open its ports to all foreign commerce, will give free entrance to all European products, and also insures free exportation into Europe for American products.

6. The oriental foes on the eastern hemisphere will be treated with when a final settlement is agreed upon, but until that time the isolation in Pacific waters will be maintained.

7. Peace shall reign over the earth; national differences shall be settled before an international committee that will make its headquarters in Washington, the capital of the United Republics of America.

8. Any further points that may arise in the course of events will be decided upon after the final settlement with the rulers of all the countries.

When the count turned over the last page a tiny slip of paper fell to the floor. He picked it up and glanced at the words that were written and not typed, as was the rest of the message. It was a writing that he knew well.

"Don't hesitate! Accept the treaty! The future rests in the aerodromone, the secret of which will be delivered to you, sooner or later. I have kept my contract; will talk of my reward when circumstances permit."

This was not signed, but it was not necessary.

"And I," murmured the count, after a moment, "I never thought of Rositta. what a wonderful, clever woman she is. But what will be her price? What is the difference," sighed the man who had suffered so much the last few days. "The next time we meet it will be in the air."

He regained his calmness, finished the paper and refolded it. He placed Rositta's message in his pocketbook.

Twenty-four hours were given for consideration. He called his admirals together at four o'clock that afternoon. The council sat until late that night. When the admirals and captains left for their respective boats they were depressed. The world seemed to have reached the millennium.

One thing they were certain of. That was that they did not know how they would earn a living when released from military duty.

When Napoleon came for the answer, he received the original document signed by the commander in chief and all the commanders of the respective nations of the European confederacy.

When the American Eagle appeared for the first time above the capital its mission was to announce that peace on earth would be established.

CHAPTER XII.

Casting the Net.

Six months had passed. The captured army and navy had been sent home to Europe and disarmed. The various monarchs had raged at the Count von Werdenstein for acceding to the terms of the agreement submitted by the United Republics, but the people were happy.

The United Republics of America offered a large tract of land in the interior of Brazil, Venezuela and Colombia for emigration purposes. Drainage and irrigation had been so perfected that those great plateaus were habitable and supplied the richest agricultural districts in the world.

A meeting had been called to formulate the rules of peace. Napoleon, with full sanction and authorization of Congress, made short work of the agreement with the orientals. He appeared above the Island Empire and announced the ultimatum: that he would blow up every man-of-war unless they were turned over to the United Republics of America peacefully, in which case the latter would pay one-third the value of the monsters. The orientals had been prepared for this action and agreed to the terms. China, the young Oriental Republic, followed Japan's example.

Christmas was nearing. The war vessels of the world were harbored in the ports of the Americans and turned over to the Navy Department, with the command that they be used for commercial purposes.

The disarmament went on all over the world. When Christmas day dawned, peace reigned. Not Christian peace, but a peace begotten of fear.

The 24th of December found the American Continent open to everyone.

Napoleon Edison, on account of the service he had rendered his country, had been appointed president of the world peace committee.

His mother's illness had caused him anxiety. He spoke of it to Astra one day while the Countess Rosiny was near. The beautiful Rositta had undergone a great change. She was believed to be a thorough American in spirit, and had thus gained the confidence of the people surrounding Astra.

She begged Astra and Napoleon to let her go and comfort Mrs. Edison. They consented, glad to have her go to the island of Cirgne, even though the secrets of the aerodromone were there, to be a companion to Mrs. Edison.

Astra said it would be very lonely without her, and Napoleon solved the problem in a way that pleased the countess the most.

"I will take you to Cirgne in the Eagle and send you back in a few days by Santos, and you can thus divide your time between Astra and my mother."

She could hardly repress her triumphant joy.

She won the mother's sympathy at once. Her pleasant companionship was a relief to the stately matron, as save the servants there were no other women on the island. It was she who watched over the precious plant during the long and repeated absences of Napoleon.

Notwithstanding the difference in their ages, they became good friends. Rositta was anxious to see the manufacturing plant, where the aerodromones were made, but she was not permitted to enter the workshop, as she had failed to obtain Napoleon's permission to do so. He had promised to return for her within a few days, or to send Santos. One balmy morning the two women were enjoying the sea breeze on the porch, when they saw the aerodromone approaching from the east. The great bird settled in its hangar gracefully. The two women went down the path to meet, as they supposed, Napoleon. But it was Santos Duprel, bringing two letters, one from Napoleon to his mother and the other from Astra to the countess.

Santos' honest eyes glowed when he saw Rositta, who took pains to give him a friendly glance as she shook hands.

Her letter said that Santos and the Hawk were at her disposal, and that Astra would be glad to see her again as soon as Mrs. Edison's condition permitted her to leave. She also invited Mrs. Edison to come to the capital, but the mother knew that her son depended on her presence on the island, so declined.

Rositta expressed deep disappointment when Mrs. Edison gave her reasons for not going back with Santos and the Hawk, but the chance to talk to Santos on the return trip suited her best. After some hesitation she decided to make a flying trip to Washington the next day, assuring Mrs. Edison that she would stay only a day.

Santos received instructions to be ready to leave early in the morning. The little, round fellow was elated when he thought of the three hours alone with Rositta.

His nights, since he had met Astra and Rositta, were restless. Rositta's many kindnesses especially gave him food for thought. He paid more attention to matters of dress; he shaved his round, ruddy face every day. He even used perfume.

IN THE CANOE

Where the canoe first came into being is a hard thing to say. It is almost as old as anything used by civilized man. We find them in use in almost every country where the primitive man is still to be found. In the far north you will find the Indian with his canoe, or if you go to Central Africa you still find the canoe. It seems to have been the first method of travel that man invented. Although the modern canoe has very few points that are the same as the old style canoe, yet in principle it is the same. Canada is the home of the canoe if we take the birch bark as the father of all American canoes and eastern Canada is the home of the new style canoe. Without doubt the two best known makes in Canada are the Chestnut and the Peterborough. It is almost impossible to give any man instructions in canoeing, other than to tell him to get a first-class man to go out with him. A few general rules can be given, but all canoemen are not agreed on these. The paddle should be the height of the user, say the Cree Indians, and about seven inches wide. Another thing that the Crees claim is that a man can paddle much farther if he does not bend his elbows and swings his paddle from the shoulders. Mr. B. C. Hall, the well-known racer, always bends the elbow on the recover and does not dig with the paddle, a great fault of many racers. Mr. Hall's advice to the beginner is: "First, learn to handle a paddle right and use it slowly until you are able to use it no other way than the right way; then try to get speed."

WEIGH YOUNG STOCK

Use of Scales Will Determine Rate of Growth and Gain.

The best and practically the only way one can tell whether his animals are making proper gains or not is by the use of scales. A friend of mine who gave me the data used here tried this on a colt last year. The colt weighed 130 pounds when foaled and was weighed every week for the first six months, with the following results: Three and three-fourths pounds average daily gain first month, three and one-fourth pounds average daily gain second month, three pounds average daily gain third and fourth months, two and one-half pounds average daily gain the fifth and sixth months. At ten months the colt weighed 870 pounds and had made a daily gain of about two and one-fourth pounds, which is very good for a grade Percheron.

The colt was allowed all the whole oats and bran it would clean up until five months old. Her mother was worked nearly every day, and the colt nourished four times a day from eight o'clock in the morning to five o'clock in the afternoon. At night both mare and colt were turned out to pasture.

The winter ration consisted of a mixture of five pounds of whole oats, two pounds of shelled corn, and five quarts of skim-milk daily. A small amount of silage and mixed hay for roughage were also fed.

From the observations made by this man it will be seen that the average farm colt should make a daily gain of at least two pounds per day. Also, that good colts can be raised when the mares are working. From previous experience in using scales in feeding, this farmer says that a colt should weigh at ten months one-half of its weight at maturity.—W. A. Dorke.

BOXERS IN TRAINING

Their Leisure Time Is Passed in Many Ways

Professional boxers have varied and peculiar ways about training, and their leisure time is passed in many different ways. While the system of training for a boxing contest is practically the same, each has a somewhat different method of conditioning and different ways of passing their spare time around a training camp. The conscientious trainer has little time for anything else outside of the hard, monotonous grind, and if there is weight to make it is still a harder task. The old-timers seldom had an audience during their training stunts and for a contest, while the modern boxers take from four or five days to two or three weeks. It depends entirely upon their condition, the circumstances under which they are to box, and the weather. The less work, of course, leaves more time for pleasure and rest. The knuckle fighters were placed in the hands of a competent trainer, and he alone was responsible for the physical condition of the fighter and his word was law at all times. The old-timers seldom had an audience during their training stunts, and you had to be close to the fighter or manager to even get a peep, for the training was done in private and the camp doings was a secret. Many of the old-timers trained at road houses far from the end of a car line and a visit meant a long walk, unless you were fortunate enough to own, borrow or hire a horse and rig.

Don't let anybody tell you that training faithfully for a fight is a pleasure. There are few fighters that like that part of it.

NORWEGIAN SOLDIERS MUTINY

Think the Officers in Charge are Too Severe

Serious tumults are reported among the Norwegian soldiers at different drill grounds in Norway. Several soldiers protested a change of guard at Oerstadmoen, and made a demonstration against a major, and later there were demonstrations at the Steinkjaer drill-ground, where 1,500 soldiers were on drill. They considered that two soldiers were too severely punished, and some of the Young Socialist party prepared a flag with the following inscription: "In the name of justice we demand the liberation of the prisoners."

About 500 soldiers gathered round this banner and stormed the cells. The guards fixed bayonets, but the mutineers finally succeeded in liberating the prisoners by force. Colonel Aavatsmark, who is the President of the Military Committee of Parliament, tried to calm the mutineers, but was received with laughter. Several tumults took place at the largest drill-ground of Norway—Gardermoen. The soldiers considered a [illegible] too severely punished [illegible] at the guards, who had to withdraw. The prisoners were liberated.

Anemic Mothers Here is Relief!

You Can Enrich Your Worn-Out Blood and Quickly Renew Your Health With Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a Real Cure

"I can't remember any time during the past twenty years when my heart wasn't aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to my head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Spry, of Putnam P. O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terrible, and going upstairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. I tell you how I feel to-day and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made. I feel strong enough now to work like a man, as for going upstairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as any person ought, and as for dizziness which used to frighten me so much, it had entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a wonderful medicine. They helped me, and I know every woman that uses them will have comfort and good health.

CITY AND DISTRICT

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS.

Bowling Tournament.

The annual bowling tournament at the Peterborough Bowling Green will be held on Monday. There is a large list of entries. It will be remembered that last year the tournament was called off on account of the death of a member, Dr. Marshall.

Local Men Go Fishing.

Messrs. Dunc. Johnston and R. J. Sturgeon went afishing yesterday to Jubilee Point. They secured the services of James Howard of Hiawatha, better known among fishermen, as the "Moose." They captured seven fine bass and one big lunge. The biggest bass weighed 5 lbs. 13 ounces.

Robt. Strain Blacklisted.

At yesterday's police court, Robt. Strain was charged with supplying Arthur Kennedy, a blacklister with intoxicants. Strain pleaded guilty and was fined $25. Strain, on evidence given by Detective Meagher, was put on the blacklist again.

The Printers' Picnic To-day.

All those who intend taking in the Printers' picnic to Victoria Park and Jubilee Point to-day, are reminded that only the boats of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company have been chartered for the occasion by the committee. There are other boats leaving the George street wharf at the same time, but none of these are connected with the picnic. All those who wish to take in the Printers' Picnic must embark on the steamer "Stoney Lake."

Another Local Post Office.

Cottagers at Chemong Park have always been compelled, in the past, to go for their mail to the village postoffice. To obviate this difficulty, Mr. Andy Jobe, the popular Chemong postmaster interviewed Mr. Burnham. As a result, a Government post office box has been placed in the park for mailing letters, and cottagers can now get their letters at Jobe's store. The thoughtful act of Mr. Burnham has become a great boon to the Chemong cottagers.

Yesterday's Drunks.

At yesterday's court, with Magistrates Dumble and Rush presiding, R. Meehan pleaded guilty to having been drunk and pleaded "For God's sake give me a chance and I'll take the pleadge." He comes from Cobourg. He was fined $2, to be paid in 10 days, and told by the magistrate if he jumped town within the 10 days they would not send after him. Walter Agers pleaded guilty to him. Walter Agers pleaded guilty to first offense and was let go.

Liquor by Mail ? ? ?

Robt. S. Irwin, a blacklister, said he had not felt well of late, and sent to Hastings for some whiskey. He got the liquor on Thursday from that village. He lives at 28 LaFayette Ave. He pleaded guilty to having been drunk. A friend named Thos. Moore of Hastings got g him the liquor. The bottle of whiskey was sent by mail and he got it through the post office. It was a $1 bottle. Irwin was remanded for a week to see if the air at Castle Nesbitt will refreshen his memory as to where he got the whisky.

Acrobatic Diving Stunt.

Yesterday morning two local men, brothers by first name respectively Donald and Jack, set out in a gasoline launch. In Little Lake the engine gave a tired sigh and stopped Jack "cranked" the engine. The crank handle, by accident fell overboard in 20 feet of water. Don peeled off his clothes and dived. He dove once, twice and thrice without success. His fourth dive found the handle. Those in the boat, as he was under water, saw his feet coming to the surface. They feared an accident, but Don had caught the crank between his feet and brought it up after a turn 20 feet below the surface.

Former Local Man's Luck.

Mr. Bert Guy, of Chicago, who some 16 years ago left for Chicago and who has there made a little better than good, has been spending a few days at Carney's hotel, Young's Point with his friend, Mr. R. C. Houck, of 207 Wood street, Pittsburg. These fishermen left yesterday for their respective homes. Whilst out at Clear Lake, Mr. Guy captured eleven maskinonge and bass to a number that strained the fishing laws of Ontario. One lunge weighed 18½ pounds, two turned the scales at 11 pounds. In addition he caught still fishing: 1 tomato can, 2 slabs and 337 tons of weeds. Mr. Houcks' record was one maskinonge of 16 pounds and 37 bass. In addition to this the man from the smoky city, landed a pair of lumbermen's discarded trousers, 2 shingles, 314 tons of weeds and a rare reputation for fish stories.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Lindsay's water has passed a very high test by the public analyst.

The 57th Regiment Band, under Mr. Gliddon gave a splendid musical program last night, before an immense audience in Victoria Park.

The funeral of the late Henry Bacon will take place this afternoon, from his late residence, Wescott street to the Little Lake cemetery.

The Oriental Hotel yesterday installed a new $600 National Cash Register. This register is the last word in such machines.

All roads lead to George street wharf to-day, where the steamer Stoney Lake will convey the Printers on their annual picnic. Come with the boys and have a real good time. Boat leaves at 1.30.

Last night about 10 o'clock, the water was shut off from the pumping station. Enquiries by The Times elicited the information that a break had been discovered, but was not located.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TRAIN BOYS TO FIGHT

Source of Strength Evolution Not Revolution, Says Rev. W. Heeney

"Awake, My Country, and Arm," was the warlike pronouncement of Rev. William Bertal Heeney, of St. Luke's Church, Winnipeg, at a meeting of the Overseas Club, in that city. At the outset, Rev. Mr. Heeney said that he was always glad of the opportunity of speaking before the members of any organization which had as its object the stimulating of the imperial spirit. He confessed that he had been somewhat puzzled to discover the origin of that intangible force known as national sentiment; it was certainly not deliberately created by man, and he had come to the conclusion, after some thought, that one of the greatest factors in the fostering of the British imperial spirit had been the long time of great statesmen, who had had the genius to catch the spirit of the age and turn it to account. "We have been accused," continued Mr. Heeney, "of over conservatism, but I am inclined to think that in that has been the great strength of the British empire; it has been formed by evolution rather than by revolution. An imperial spirit is at the present time sweeping the empire, and it is our duty to incorporate it in our national life. The time for British expansion has passed—it came to an end with the close of the South African war. But the era of expansion for other nations has just begun. The hope of Germany, for instance, lies in the possible failure of the people of the British empire to develop what they already possess. Germany is ready to strike if we fail to foster the imperial spirit. Our direct and immediate duty is to provide for the empire's defence. On the high seas we must be supreme. We are trusting in a father's greatness here in Canada. Let us build up an empire which shall care not for race or creed, but only for the freedom of every man. I believe that every man should be able to shoulder a gun. Every boy wants to be a soldier at some time or another; then let us train our boys to fight for the preservation of our empire's greatness. I seem to see in my imagination an empire that shall have one citizenship, one commerce, one army and one navy."

PORTABLE REFRIGERATOR

Ice Compartment in Top and Water Reservoir Below

An ingenious invention in the form of a portable refrigerating case is this longitudinal receptacle which has a drawer running its length. Above this drawer is another, smaller drawer, designed to contain cracked ice, preferably sprinkled with rock salt. At the bottom of the box is a water reservoir, and when the receptacle is closed a nipple from the icebox registers with an opening in the reservoir and the melted ice runs into the latter. In a refrigerator like this articles may be kept ice cold for hours at a time, and it is especially convenient to carry ice-cream, or similar perishable things for long distances. There is a handle at the top, and when the case is closed it resembles a long grip more than anything else.

WHY HE FLIES LOW

An Interesting Chat With a Famous Aviator.

"Why do you always fly so low?" I asked Captain Thomas S. Baldwin.

At my question the sixty-year-old sky pilot laughed good-naturedly. Then drawing me aside he whispered: "My boy, it is because I am afraid—afraid. I don't want to be a dead hero. This martyr game doesn't appeal to me."

"Well," I went on, "how do you know when you are up high enough?"

"See this lump in my throat?" he explained, placing his finger on his Adam's apple; "well, when that gets into my mouth I know it's time to come down. That's my barometer—and it never fails me,' he added.

Captain Baldwin says he is known to more heathen than all the missionaries in the world. He has been going up into the air for the amusement and edification of millions of people in all corners of the world for more than forty years. He invented and demonstrated the first parachute. He has been blown over mountain ranges and out to sea. He has traveled all over the Far East, visiting Japan, China, Siam and India, first with a dirigible and later with his biplane, the "Red Devil."

The "Old man of the Air" is the most popular aviator in the game. He is frankly a showman. He assumes no airs. He built the first all-steel biplane in the world. Mostly he flies for a living. Sometimes he goes up for the pure joy of the thing.

SILK ROBES FOR MEN

How Lady Opera Singer Would Brighten a Dreary World

Fraulein Frieda Hempel, one of the most prominent singers in Germany, has started a campaign for the beautifying of the male sex. She wants all men to garb themselves handsomely, each according to his esthetic whim and personal character; and she wants them in particular to wear historically consecrated costumes, brilliant colors and gems, and to curl their hair or wear it long. Silk and satin in rich colors, she says, would cost no more than the present ridiculous dress; and feathered hats are no dearer than stove-pipes, upon which Fraulein Hempel casts ridicule. She has drawn up a programme showing how men in the different professions should dress.

Doctors should be clean-shaven, and wear short-armed jackets; their clothes should be colored an agreeable rose; and their linen trousers should be laced crossways. Judges should wear red robes with square, silver patches. Their collars should be white and embroidered with gold frogs. They should wear masks of red velvet and carry sticks shaped like swords. Policemen should wear blue coats, white buckskin trousers, and red boots. Their horses should be picturesquely and splendidly saddled and bridled. If foot policemen they should wear sombreros, and in other respects be garbed like Roman lictors.

Fraulein Hempel says that she got these ideas from the fact that she is never attracted by men except when she sees them richly garbed on the stage.

WHEN BUYING MEAT

Some Points to Remember About the Healthy Article

When buying meat it is important to remember that the meat inspector is likely to have a rather lower standard than that set by the fastidious housewife. Also that animals may have been out of condition or actually diseased. In such cases the meat has a dark, dry appearance and is flabby; the fat has a reddish and oily look, and frequently a disagreeable fœtid odor.

Red meat should look bright, have a clear, cherry-red hue, be firm yet elastic, moist but not wet, and have a fresh not disagreeable odor. In well-fed cattle the muscles are slightly interspersed with fat, so that the meat has a marbled appearance. The fat, which may vary in color, from an almost pure white to a nice yellow, should be firm and dry, be slightly greasy to the touch, and have a fresh suety flavor. In well-fed, healthy cattle the kidneys, heart, etc., are covered with firm fat. In young cattle the fat is light in color; it darkens with age, and is also of a richer red in stall-fed cattle.

In white meat the flesh is firm and close knit, fresh looking but not wet. It is pale in color, not marbled (though certain cuts of pork may be streaked with fat), and the fat firm and white or light yellow.

Pigs are liable to pass on many serious disease germs, notably the germs of consumption. For these reasons pork should always be very thoroughly cooked.

BENSFORT WINS WATCH

The Globe says is true, and we have no reason to doubt it. The Globe's warning in this respect was to him the greatest shock received for some time. Separate schools have been wonderfully improved of late years, and the argument in favor of public schools, as the argument for anything else, rests on their equality or superiority and when the public school ceases to be the equal of its rivals its day will pass. It may become a school for those who could not do better, but not a school for those who could start life under more favorable auspices. "We cannot suffer this degradation of any branch of the public service," exclaimed the speaker. "We must wake up; trustees, people and teachers alike. The most valuable of all our popular assets is our school. The best educated, the best trained boys and girls get the best positions everywhere. We all know and many of us have had an unfortunate occasion to feel that our capabilities have been almost destroyed through lack of opportunities at school. The very minute the graduates of our schools cease to command the leading positions in all walks of life the people will see those positions passing into the hands of those trained elsewhere." Canada will pass into the power and control of those best equipped for the work of government. When I was a lad, the speaker said, the great event of the year was the exhibition or prize day. It stood for all that was best and most inspiring in the life of the community. We must all try to revive that sort of thing. We must bend our energies to the acquirement of knowledge and of well trained minds if we are to preserve our freedom and our happiness. Education is open to all, or should be, and should be regarded as the greatest prize a child can look forward to and amid the clash of politics or the threats of war we should not forget that there is something vastly superior to both and that it is the foundation of our strength and liberty and control.

GERMANY TO HAVE FIRST REAL IRON-CLAD OF THE AIR

Hanoverian Engineer Invents Airship Consisting of Steel Tubes--While England Sleeps

Berlin, Aug 2.— Thanks to the unusual slowness of the English Government, which at first seemed inclined to buy a German inventor's wonderful dirigible under the very nose of the German authorties, but later appeared to forget all about the matter, Germany will shortly possess the first ironclad of the air, an invention of the Hanoverian Engineer Herr Gustay Unger, of which his excellency von Iebuhr, the expert of the bunderat said that if it hits a church tower, the tower will give way first.

Outwardly the vessel looks like a Zeppelin, expert but the wooden cabin, with bows like those of an old East Indiaman, runs the whole length of the vessel. also that there are no box like rudders, and the vessel has six screws, two on each side and one each at the bow and stern. Inside the vessel shows a complete difference. the frame work being of steel tubes carried from stern to bow the lowest framing the keel of the cabin. The tubes are brought together parabolically at the stern and the bow, and end in nickel sheet steel caps.

Gas balloonets are arranged in three sets of seven tubes lying parallel to the lenght of the ship instead of transversely, as in the Zeppelins, in addition to two globular gas balloonets inserted in the stern and the bow.

Some Persons "Flinch" When Truth Hunts Them

"If any man is able to convince me, and show me that I do not think or act right, I will gladly change for I seek the truth, by which no man was ever injured." — Marcus Aurelius. Roman Emperor.

Some shrink and try to close their eyes and ears to the haunting fact that the little 1 1-2 to 3 grains of CAFFEINE in every average cup of tea or coffee is the demon which relentlessly pursues and starts various ailments, such as biliousness, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, bowel trouble, heart failure and a long string of aches and ails, takin~ one form in one person and another in another.

The effect of repeated doses of tea or coffee on those who are susceptible to caffeine poisoning, is so complex that it is difficult to fortell where its hurt will be most serious; in Heart, Head, Eyes, Nerves, or where.

The stroke of trouble will come somewhere if the daily doses are persisted in.

Of course if anyone prefers to treat his body in that way it is useless to suggest relief.

Let him "follow the trail" until badly wounded.

Some go so far they can't get back to health. Others quit the foolish, losing game before fixed chronic disease sets in.

There is a mighty army of sensible ones, however, who have bravely tested the truth with their own bodies to see whether or not it was the truth that tea and coffee caused their ailments.

It's an easy test. QUIT TEA AND COFFEE ABSOLUTELY FOR 10 DAYS. Take Postum hot and well-made and keep track of the change toward health day by day.

It's the most exquisite pleasure in the world to be perfectly well with all the delicate and beautifully adjusted machinery of the body working in harmony, not interfered with by drugs, one of the most insidious and deceptive of which is caffeine in tea and coffee.

This is TRUTH.

Meet it bravely with head up and a hearty handclasp.

Truth thus made welcome will prove your best friend.

These are facts without regard to our own opinion or to whether or not you use Postum.

However, it is well to consider that famous food-drink because it supplies a hot beverage of deep seal-brown color, which turns to the rich, golden-brown when cream is added.

It has a snappy flavor, but there is no "sting" in it no caffeine or other drug of any sort. It is skilfully manufactured of wheat and a trace of New Orleans molasses.

It comes in two forms, One called Regular Postum, must be boiled full 15 minutes.

The other, Instant Postum, is in powder form, and a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water makes the beverage instantly. Grocers keep both kinds.

CLERICAL PRETENSION IN QUEBEC

The following has been sent The Times from Montreal, with a request that it be published. This we cheerfully do:

No sounder statement of our law has been made. But L'Action Sociale calls this "an astonishing statement," expresses the belief that even in the United States no judicial tribunal would so intervene between the penitent and the confessor, and mourns over the fact that "in our Catholic Province, abused of liberalism," legislators and Catholic judges can be found to do so. The writer says that by this extraordinary law the priest ceases before the electors to be a priest, a minister of God and of the Church. "Before this suffrage and its pretended liberty the priest loses the authority of his mission, he is no more than an ordinary citizen."

That is exactly what our law and the whole genius of Democracy declares. Even the King is an ordinary citizen—in a sense that he is subject to the law—not for his restraint but far the freedom of the people in the mass. The judge is subject to the law which he himself administers. No priest, however sure he may be of his Divine calling, can neglect the fact that he is a fallible man. He cannot be permitted to consider himself above the law. He must not drag his spiritual function into public affairs and presume to assert that his mere opinion must be superior to the joint opinion of the whole people as expressed on the statute-book. Divine revelation is not denied to all men but those who have been ordained. Conscience is not an ecclesiastical monopoly.

When L'Action Sociale declares that the elector according to this "monstrous law," is subject to no athority, not even the Divine authority, it confounds the Church with Divinity itself and wholly neglects the free conscience of a free man. But, says the writer, the Church is "a perfect society" and therefore independent. In the eyes of the early fathers over a thousand years ago possibly the Church appeared to be "a perfect society," but to modern eyes it is a despotism, even though a benign one. The assumption by the clergy of a Divine right to force under spiritual penalty the action of the faithful is always questionable. According to this assumption the faithful are not free agents. They have no more opinion or no more weight than the retainers of a feudal Baron in the middle ages. Some persons declare that feudalism was a perfect system of government. Possibly the Barons, Knights and Esquires thought so, but the retainers objected and objected until feudalism was a tattered and outworn garment which was left on the dust piles ages ago.

Even when the Church was supreme in all countries its authority was often questioned, and rightly so. The prisoner of the Vatican is a prisoner, not because of a diabolical perversity of the human race, but because ordinary men have rights which the Church was too ready to neglect and even flout. Ultramontanism dreams of a co-ordinated and supreme authority over all states and societies—a Divine authority weilded by fallible and often imperious men. It is a dream of Barbarossa's time, not of the Twentieth Century.

"To say that the Church," says L'Action Sociale, "has the right to speak to an elector in his private life, but not in his public life, or to say that the Church can impose upon him commands for his private life, but must limit itself to humble counsels in all that touches his public life as an elector, a candidate or a member of Parliament, is to usurp for the elector a power of a liberty which no Catholic can legitimately have, and is to deny to the Church an essential power of its mission which it does not hold from men, but of God. To reserve to the man, individual or government, absolute unlimited sovereignity, is to leave the Church only the role of subject; to deny the Church its essential condition as a perfect and independent society in order to make it answerable to the State."

That is exactly the aim and object of British law, made clear in the Act of Settlement and in a hundred other less definite, but more important ways. The freedom of the Church in Quebec has been since 1763 definitely subjected by treaty to the laws of Great Britain. The judgment of Mr. Justice Taschereau in 1877 and of Judge Letellier in 1913 may be objectionable to the Ultramontanes, but they are sound in British law, and with full accord with British traditions of liberty.

Those who might vote against local option in Baie St. Paul were threatened by the parish priest with exclusion from the sacraments and were warned that they would not be eligible for absolution. This threat was deemed by Judge Letellier to be "intimidation" within the meaning of the statute and the by-law was quashed. In criticizing the opinion of the judge, L'Action Sociale of Quebec is much disturbed by the following paragraph which fully translated, appears in the written judgment: "The clergyman like any other person is permitted to take all legitimate means to pursuade the electors, such as by remonstrance or by denunciation of drunkards and drunkenness. He is permitted to make retreats, to have eloquent speakers, to expose the opposing arguments with vigor. But he is not permitted to make use of his authority before the faithful to condemn from the altar, under pain of mortal sin, to threaten with the refusal of absolution and to put these threats into effect at the confessional."

STUDENTS WERE DROWNED

PETERBOROUGH WITHOUT ANY PROTECTION RE FIRE FIEND

Unique Condition of Danger Sustained by Break of Absolete and Unused Valve--Man Buried in Trench Delays Work

On Saturday the City of Peterborough was absolutely at the mercy of the fire fiend. Fortunately the little god who looks after drunken sailors and cities with inadequate water supply was in good humor and no fires occurred.

As noted in our issue of Saturday, the local citizen who wanted at 10 o'clock Friday night to take a bath or a drink of water, drew a blank when he turned his water taps. The water was off all that night and Saturday. The Times has more than once called attention to the city to the fact that a subsidiary main pipe is required to meet just such emergencies. We were given to understand on legal authority, on Saturday, that had a fire or fires occurred, no insurance could have been collected for fire losses. On the other hand, one of our reporters was given to understand by several leading local fire insurance agents, that the temporary lack of protection would not invalidate fire policies. So take your choice when experts disagree!

How It Occurred.

A times reporter on Saturday afternoon went out to the scene of the accident, just west of the Water works pumping house. Here he met Mr. A. G. Fawcett, superintending engineer of the Water works. That gentleman had a staff of six men working in and about a trench about 10 feet long. Mr. Fawcett must be credited with doing all that lay in his power to make the work progress. However, it was a hot day. His explanation was that a disused valve on a 16 inch main, away north of the present power house in front of the old pumping station, had separated from the main. This allowed air to enter the present one pipe (for 22,000 people) and thus ended the ability of the present power house to pump water to the city.

The old pipe leading to the defunct oower house was, on Saturday cut of. The 16 inch valve was brought to the trench in front of the present power house and attached.

A Cause For Delay.

One cause of this long delay was due to a workman named James Curran being buried in the trench by a bank that caved in. The unfortunate man was rescued with difficulty, after being buried to his neck. He was seriously bruised and had to go home.

MAGISTRATES DECISION FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

A somewhat sensational scene was enacted at Saturday's police court. It seems that a man named McIlmoyle had charged his wife with stealing his furniture. Mr. Gordon acted for the plaintiff and Mr. Ruddy for the defendant. Mr. Ruddy claimed that the bringing of the charge was "a scandalous thing." Mr. Gordon claimed that as Mr. Dumble had given advice to Mrs. McIlmoyle about taking the furniture, though no charge had been made for his advice, the case should be tried by two other magistrates. The magistrate said he wanted to save both parties law costs and dismissed the case. Mr. Gordon said, "That woman is a thief and we want her tried for theft. She has stolen from her husband before, once taking $3,000." The magistrate, however, would not consent to two other magistrates trying the case.

Mr. Gordon said I will write the Attorney-General about your ruling. Mr. Ruddy's client was discharged.

TEARS WELL IN COL. AULL'S EYES WHEN HE SAYS HE'LL STAND BY SON

Actions of Bride's Relatives Anger Father Who Scouts Idea of Divorce--Will be no Scandal Connected With His Name--Son Committed for Trial Next Week

Cobourg, Aug. 2.—The little court room in the town hall here was crowded to the doors this morning, all anxious to get a glimpse of Robert Aull and his father, and hear the romantic details of the runaway marriage of the boy now charged with fraud to the extent of nearly $100.

Col. Aull, the boy's father, arrived on the midnight flyer from St. Louis and immediately consulted his son's solicitor at his office. There the two remained till the early hours of the morning discussing the details of the charge.

The colonel, although not exactly elated over his son's hasty marriage stated to the press before the police court hearing this morning, that if the marriage were a legal one, he would be the last one to attempt to annul it. In angry tones he expressed his opinions of the actions of his daughter-in-law's relations.

Asked if he had met the bride's father, he said "No, and he has got to come to me and bring my daughter-in-law with him.

The colonel scouted the idea of a divorce. "There's going to be no divorce scandal connected with the name Aull," he declared vehemently. He made diligent enquiries on every side as to the social standing of his son's bride, "If Miss Reid is as beautiful and accomplished as I am told she is, I will welcome her into the family: I'll be a real daddy to her all right."

As to the present fraud charge hanging over the boy he treats it as a joke, declaring that Albertini, proprietors of the Arlington Hotel, to whom the boy gave the cheque, was an old friend of his whom he met while on the board of directors of the last world's fair in St. Louis.

Tears welled into the stately old colonel's eyes as he greeted his son in the jail this morning. He succeeded in having the trial postponed an hour in order to further consult with T. F. Hall, the son's solicitor.

Seated beside his father at the centre table, Robert Aull listened to the charge, "that he did by false pretences with intent to defrad R. D. Albertini, obtain from him $15 by giving him a cheque for $94.06 on the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis." Under advice from counsel, Aull refused to elect or plead.

ADDS NEW WORDS TO THE DICTIONARY

Washington, D.C., Aug. 2.—Headquarters of the National American Woman Suffrage Association seethed with indignation today when officers and members learned that Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, their most bitter opponent in Congress, had fired another broadside into their camp last night from the pulpit of a local church. In addition to criticising the "cause" in vigorous terms, Mr. Heflin also gave his definition of suffragets and their male supporters.

Here it is:

"Suffregets—Unmarried female fanatics.

"Suffragetaers—Unhappy, discontented married women.

"Suffragetors—The male suffraget. A feeble-minded, suffrotescent creature."

Mr. Heflin explained that the word "Suffrotescent" was his own coinage. He said that he believed that "woodenheaded" could be substituted for it without any loss in meaning.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Unsettled and a little cooler.

PETES OUT CLASSED THE TELEPHONE CITY BUNCH

On Saturday Riverside Park saw a huge crowd of baseball fans and fanettes. The grand stand was more than half filled, and the west stand was about all taken up. A good snappy game was played but the visitors are not in the Petes' class.

One sensational single handed catch was made by Peggy Swartz. A swift fly was passing his over his right shoulder. Peggy's right hand was injured, but this did not stop his connection with the [illegible] reached his left hand [illegible] shoulder, caught and [illegible] Fox also did some [illegible]

PINE TAR CORDIAL

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaprilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store, we make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 392 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

BRITISH SONG BIRDS MAY BECOME PESTS

Two Harmful Varieties, the Skylark and Tit, Being Brought to Canada

"Leave nature alone or there may be trouble." This is the opinion of a writer, commenting on the introduction into British Columbia of British song birds.

It was with the best intentions that the sparrow was introduced into Canada, in the hope that it would assist in keeping down the insect pests so harmful to agriculture, but as soon as the bird found that a diet of grain was better worth having, it abondoned its former habits and quickly proved once again the truth of the old adage that the cure is often worse than the disease.

Among the birds being sent out from England are the skylark and the tit, both very attractive and desirable birds from many points of view, but not altogether blameless in their habits. The lark is an inveterate destroyer of the clover "leys" in winter. In an agricultural section of British Columbia it is conceivable that the experience of the British farmer would be repeated and if the birds increased there as they probably would at a greater rate than in Britain, their introduction might prove to be nothing short of disastrous.

Far more serious might be the establishment of the tit family in a district where fruit is grown. The tit is an inveterate destroyer of fruit buds, and is not even satisfied to stop at that. In England the great and blue tits make sad havoc in the orchards when the pears and apples begin to ripen, it being their tiresome habit to peck small holes near the stalk of the fruit, so that decay immediately sets in and the fruit is useless for marketing. The amount of damage that a single family of tits can cause—and they invariably forage in companies—is extraordinary, for the birds are not content to finish the fruit they have begun, but spend their whole time in "sampling," so that in a very short time half an orchard may be ruined.

Lavigne's Sad Fate

George Lavigne, known in the ring as "Kid Lavigne," and the "Saginaw Kid," one-time champion lightweight of the world and one of the gamest boys that ever rubbed his feet in rosin, has been put away in a sanatorium near Detroit and will probably end his days in that retreat. The kid's mind has failed.

RUSTY FIREIRONS

If fireirons have become rusty, take half an ounce of camphor, and dissolve it in a pound of lard, over a gentle heat. Stir in enough powdered blacklead to give the mixture an iron color. Rub well into the fireirons, cover with a thick layer, and leave until the following day. Wipe off with an old linen rag, rub with fine emery-paper, and then polish with a woollen rag.

Bombs of Deadly Gas

Bombs which liberate a deadly gas on bursting have been supplied to the French police for use against criminals who barricade themselves in buildings.

Aeroplane Flight

The first aeroplane flight from Berlin to St. Petersburg was accomplished by a German, who covered the 1000 miles in 30 hours of actual flying.

Life Story of Captain Scott

The late Captain Robert Falcon Scott, R. N., C. V. O., the leader of the British Antarctic expedition, was born at Devonport, the famous naval station on the south coast of England, on June 6, 1868. He was the son of the late John Edward Scott of Devonport. He was educated at Stabbington House, Fareham. He entered the British navy at the age of fourteen, and five years later became a lieutenant on the Rover and later on the Amphion. In 1898 he was promoted to be torpedo lieutenant of the flagship Majestic of the channel squadron. In 1899 he was made first lieutenant and in the following year he was gazetted commander.

First Expedition

In 1901 he was chosen to lead the British expedition to the Antarctic, which occupied him until 1904, at the close of which he was made captain and a companion of the Victorian Order, as a token of King Edward's appreciation of his services in exploration and scientific research. He was also elected a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. The medals of the Royal Geographical Society the Scottish Royal Geographical Society and the American, Swedish, Danish Philadelphia and Antwerp Geographical Societies were also conferred on him for this expedition, and the universities of Manchester and Cambridge conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

Shackleton With Him Once

Capt. Scott's earlier attempt at polar exploration was made on the ship Discovery, a Dundee wooden boat of 700 tons, liberally financed by the British government. One of the officers under Capt. Scott in this expedition was Lieut. Shackleton, R. N. R., now Sir Ernest Shackleton, whose experiences with that expedition paved the way for his "Farthest South" expedition five years later. He explored more than 400 miles of the Great Antarctic Barrier, a wider stretch than any other Antarctic explorer.

Sailing from New Zealand on Christmas Eve, 1901, the Discovery ran down to the Great Antarctic Barrier, which Borchgrevink's expedition had noted thirty miles south of where it was recorded by the Ross expedition in 1842. Scott confirmed Borchgrevink's findings, but Scott discovered, where Ross had noted only an "appearance," a wide stretch of country, which he named King Edward VII. Land.

Went South on Sledges

The Discovery was laid up in McMurdo Sound, in latitude 77 degrees east, and exploration was started on sledges. The outward journey of 380 miles to latitude 82 degrees and 17 minutes south, occupied fifty-nine days. A little further south two peaks, Mount Markham and Mount Longstaff, named after the chief promoters of the expedition, were sighted. On Nov. 30, Capt. Scott discovered a distance of 300 miles westward from the ship, reaching latitude 77 degrees 59 minutes south, and longitude 146 degrees 33 minutes east.

On Christmas Day, Capt. Scott returned to the Discovery, and on Jan. 5th, 1904, the Terra Nova, the ship with which Capt. Scott made his last Antarctic expedition, arrived, with orders for an immediate return, even at the cost of abandoning the Discovery. The expedition ship, however, broke loose from the ice on Feb. 16th, and Capt. Scott had the satisfaction of taking her home in good order.

In 1908 Capt. Scott married Miss Kathleen Bruce, daughter of the late Canon Lloyd Bruce. He was the author of "The Voyage of the Discovery," published in 1905. He was a member of the Naval and Military and the Marlborough Clubs, and lived at 174 Buckingham Palace road, S. W., London.

AN AMUSING FAN

Eyes Roll in Face as it is Waved Back and Forth

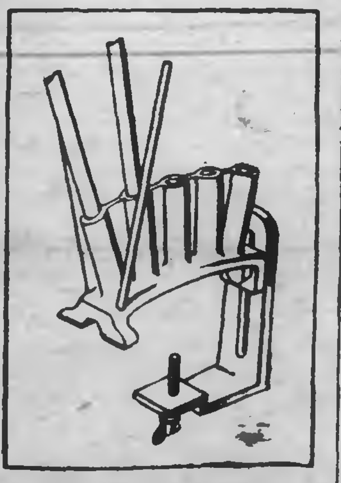
This is not the open season for fans, but that designed by a New York man is interesting and unusual enough for comment. It is a fan bearing a man's or woman's face with the eyes so arranged that they roll about as it is operated. The face is stamped on the main portion of the fan and is provided with eye openings. Pivoted to the back is a triangular piece of cardboard with eyes on it that register with the openings already mentioned. As this movable strip is shoved from side to side the eyes appear to roll about in the head, producing a weird and laughable effect. Or the flap can remain centered and the motion of the fan will cause it to recede and advance, making the eyes fade away, as if closing, or become prominent, as if just opening.

EYES ON MOVABLE STRIP

FLAG HOLDER FOR AUTO

Clamps on Car and Has Row of Sockets on Upper Portion

For members of motor clubs making runs or any other automobilists who may like to carry flags on their cars, a Montana man has devised an effective flag-holder. The support proper consists of an arched base of metal with a row of sockets spread fan-shaped above it. This base is adjustably mounted in a depending foot that has a thumbscrew in the offshoot that comes under it and can be clamped on any part of the car that offers a projection for it. The flag staffs set firmly in the sockets and cannot blow off, no matter how fast the car may go. Either a single flag or a variety of them can be used with this attachment. As this support can be moved up and down in the slot in the vertical section of the foot, it can be adjusted to fit any size car.



FLAGS CANNOT BLOW OFF.

POLAR TRAGEDIES

Sir John Franklin, of the English navy, in 1845-1848, seeking the northwest passage, lost his ships, the Erebus and the Terror, off King William Land and starved and froze to death with 128 men, forming the crews of both ships.

Captain George Washington De Long, U.S. navy, in 1879-1881, seeking the North Pole, lost his vessel, the Jeannette, off Siberia and then perished near the mouth of the Lena river with twenty of his thirty-two men.

Lieutenant Adolphus Washington Greely, U.S.A., in 1881-1884, in polar research around Lady Franklin Bay, was not found by relief ships and lost eighteen of his twenty-four men by starvation and disease at a winter hut at Cape Sabine.

Salomon Auguste Andree, of Sweden, in 1897, seeking passage to the North Pole by balloon, disappeared into the north from Spitzbergen and was lost, with two companions.

Mylius Erichsen, of Denmark, in 1907, charted the northeast corner of Greenland and perished with two companions while trying to get back to his base of supplies.

Captain Robert Falcon Scott and four companions, after visiting the South Pole in January, 1912, perished in a blizzard while returning north in March, 1912, within eleven miles from One Ton Depot. They had run out of fuel and provisions.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In the Town of Colebrook, over 100 of the 2000 inhabitants have had their appendixes remohed. This proportion is so great as to suggest that another luxury is fast becoming a necessity.

A wedding which will not figure in the society column will be the wedding of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans down Panama way in October. This is a wedding which will not soon be followed by a divorce.

The Government has awarded the contract for the construction of the big Levis dry-dock, thus removing a long standing difficulty with which standing dificulty with which the late Government neglected to deal. Toe new dry-dock means much to the all-Canadian water-route.

The fighting in the Balkans, the Tripoli trouble, the blood-letting in Mexico, the unrest in China, and the vigilant manner in which France and Germany are watching one another, all go to disprove the Laurier contention that the days of wars and emergencies has long gone by.

THE WELLAND CANAL

The construction of the first sections of the enlarged Welland canal will be proceeded with immediately and the contract to build the first section has been awarded at a price of $3,500,000. It provides for the construction of the first few miles of the canal from the Lake Ontario end and in a short time tenders for other sections of the canal, which will have a depth of 24 feet, will be called.

This announcement has much significance for the Canadian people of the East and West. The completion of this work will allow the largest lake boats to reach the great St. Lawrence waterway with full grain cargo from the West. The Canadian people in the past have had reason to grumble of the fact that much of the Canadian grain transport has been diverted through American channels. In the future they may expect that a through Canadian route will enable Canada to get her due share of her own trade.

THE BALKAN SITUATION

It is not the Turkish raid into Bulgaria—for which the European powers will make Turkey pay—that is the most important move in the Balkans, but the steady pressure exerted by Roumania upon Servia, Greece and Bulgaria, virtually compelling a cessation of hostilities and opening the way for peace. Thus far the action of Roumania has been entirely consistent with the high character of her venerable king. Roumania has field an impartial sword to preapparently brought into the vent the subjugation of any of the former allies by any other, and, if possible, to restore the unity of feeling and purpose by organizing their league. which they were animated when

What payment does Roumania require for this service? The question is justifiable in view of the selfishness that frequently degrades international politics. All the more gratifying that Roumania adds nothing to the 25 year old debt that in her belief Bulgaria owes. It would be easy for Roumania, with her army in actual occupation to annex all the territory inside a line from Rustchuk to Varna, thus gaining a frontier that geographers might consider natural. But Roumania is content with the satisfaction of her original claim, covering the comparatively small strip from Turtukai to Baltchik. Her sole aim has been to secure Silistria as a frontier defence in place of having that fortress frowning as a perpetual menace on her southern border.

While Roumania's conciliatory influence has been immediately successful with Servia, it may not for a little time be perfectly effectual with Greece. The massacres of Greeks in Macedonia by the retreating Bulgarians have madden the whole Greek people, and the army is the more eager for further fighting because its advance has been an unbroken course of victory. But wisdom counsels restraint and the early conclusion of peace. There is no excuse for delay. Roumania offers neutral ground for a conference by inviting representatives of the combatants to meet at Bucharest. That offer ought to be accepted and the conference begun without the waste of a single day

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed-up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wassen, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

THE RIFLE RANGE.

Editor Morning Times.

Saw in your Tuesday morning's paper an article referring to my recent letter regarding the danger at the rifle range. It says that the new rifle range is dult protected, which information you claim you received from undeniable authority.

Will you kindly interview your authority and inform him that his statements are not correct. Proper precautions to avoid danger travelling on the public highway, has not been taken.

THOS. E. SARGENT.

Otonabee, July 31st.

Reply.—Our authority is that issued by Mr. D. Walker, Adjutant of the 57th Regiment, in which he says:

"1. The senior officer present at the ranges at any rifle practice is responsible for the conduct of shooting unless another officer has been specially detailed for that duty.

2. No man will be allowed to shoot at the ranges unless he has had previous practice at range shooting, or unless he has been given a certificate from the sargeant instructor of musketry at the miniature ranges.

3. Sargeant Instructor Dunkley will be at the miniature ranges in the armories on Tuesday and Friday evenings at 8.30 to give instruction in rifle practice."

OPEN THE WINDOWS

Fresh Air the Best Tonic for That Tired Feeling

Cool, fresh air stimulates the brain. A warm room, above normal temperature, in which several persons have breathed the air over and over deadens the intelligence and mental activity just as it tires the physical body.

A class of children who have been growing duller and duller in mental comprehension in several successive classes can be stirred and awakened in five minutes if the teacher knows the cause of their mind weariness.

Fresh air from the open windows and brisk exercise in this new life giving ozone will make new children of them.

Men and women who are closely housed in an illy-ventilated workshop, factory or store lose mental "snappiness" as the day wears on because the air supply is not sufficient. A woman who spends the greater part of her time housed up in a warm building or room gets the same brain tired, listless look.

A student who is obliged to use his brain at night and feels the first signs of drowsiness creeping over him, invariably turns to the window for his salvation. He opens it wide lets his room get cool and well-filled with fresh air, fills up his lungs and then goes to work again. His brain is awake again. The cool, fresh air has revived it.

If your brain feels tired and doesn't work as well as usual, size up the air supply; see if the windows are open.

RACE OF PYGMIES INTEREST

In People Recently Discovered in Papua, Scientists See a Connection With the Stone Age.

In a race of pygmies recently discovered in Papua, scientists see another connecting link between the average savage races of today and primitive man of the stone age. Tapiro is the name given to this pygmy race. The men are extremely small but well molded, strong and active. In contrast to the Papuans, they have stocky, well-made calves instead of the thin, straight legs of their neighbors.

Unlike most savages, they do not practice tattooing or cicatrization. Their needs for comfort are few. Each man may carry all his portable property in a sort of haversack, which is slung over his shoulder. This contains his sleeping mat, fire stick, rattan for kindling a flame, tobacco and other odds and ends.

They are remarkably skilful in hewing rough but absolutely balanced canoes from the heavy trunks of trees. The craft are beautifully carved and are propelled by paddles with long shafts and wide blades. Skilful as they are in the making of canoes, their only implements are stone axes and bone knives.

In disposing of their dead they wrap the body in mats and place it in a rude coffin usually constructed of broken canoes. The coffin is raised on a sort of trestle and left until decomposition is complete. The skulls of the dead are kept by their relatives and friends and in a short time become worn smooth from handling.

WOMEN AS SPIES

They Are Useful in Obtaining Valuable Information

Not long ago an engineer in the English army was sentenced to four years' imprisonment for having betrayed naval secrets. Accidentally meeting a woman whom he had known casually years before, he was led to speak of his life in the service, and unwittingly to give her the clue to certain naval plans. These she is supposed to have sold to a foreign government.

About four years ago a case was recorded in Shoeburyness, where headquarters were opened, ostensibly for the study of languages. Under this pretext people came and went more or less constantly without attracting much attention. Meantime, a young German lady made periodical visits to Shoeburyness, where she formed the acquaintance of a young naval officer. He had not been more than a week or two in her company when he began to suspect her interest in his department. Afterwards it dedeveloped that she was employed by the Secret Service of Germany.

Princess Mary's Touch of Blue

As a rule Princess Mary has a touch of blue somewhere about her toilette. It may be only a tiny enamel brooch—for she is not yet permitted to wear jewels—it may be a blue ribbon, but it is there to repeat the color of her eyes. The Queen herself is a great lover of turquoise. The various gifts Queen Mary selected for her daughter while visiting the mills and potteries of Staffordshire are all blue.

From Carpenter to Mayor

Alderman Edward Thomas, of Cardiff, Wales, better known in Welsh national and literary circles by his bardic name of "Cochfarf," who died recently aged 59, knew no word of English till he was thirteen or fourteen years of age. Having served an apprenticeship as a carpenter, he went to Cardiff nearly forty years ago. When in reminiscent mood he would recall that his first job there was in the Council Chamber at the old Town Hall in St. Mary's street, the chamber in which he afterwards sat as a councillor and for a year as mayor.

Objected to Oath

A cadet charged at Kalgoorlie Police Court, Western Australia, with refusing to take the oath of allegiance, pleaded that he was prepared to serve, but that he had conscientious objections to the oath because the Act provided that he might be ordered out in the event of civil strife.

The young man, who is connected with the Social Democratic Federation, was sentenced to a month's imprisonment.

IN BAFFIN'S LAND

Baffin's Land, that bleak, rugged wilderness in the Arctic seas, and the Eskimos which inhabit it, was the subject of an illustrated address by Rev. A. M. Fleming, a missionary for some time in that country. He spoke simply as a missionary, not as an explorer. That it is an inhospitable country with nothing to attract the white man or sustain him if he should venture into it, no one could doubt after Mr. Fleming had finished his lecture. It was simply a stretch of land, a wilderness fit for the Eskimo only, a race peculiarly adapted to living there.

There are only two seasons of the year, three months of summer and nine months of winter. The only vegetation is the moss that covers the hills for a few months, a few flowers and some stray shrubs.

The inhabitants, Mr. Fleming said, are a hardy, degraded race, with primitive instincts. Their igloos are full of filth all the year round. They are quite willing to learn and take up almost any religion, contending that their belief is not the only belief. However, the idea that the Eskimo was hostile to the white man was quite true, as most of the whalers and traders had done nothing but injure him; but once he learned that the white race could be friendly, he was the most generous person in the world.

In stature they are small, all of them under four feet ten inches, and have a copper color, Mr. Fleming thinks, to lack of water there more than anything else.

FISHERIES OF CANADA

Dominion Has Most Extensive Fisheries in the World—Commercial Food Fishes

Canada possesses the most extensive fisheries in the world. The waters in and around the Dominion contain the principal commercial food fishes in greater abundance than the waters of any other part of the world. The fertility of Canadian waters is shown by the fact that apart from salmon, all the lobsters, herring, mackerel and sardines, nearly all the haddock, and many of the cod, hake and pollock landed in Canada are taken from within our territorial waters. The coast line of the Atlantic provinces, from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle, without taking into account the lesserbays and indentations, measures over 5,000 miles; and along this great stretch are to be found innumerable natural harbors and coves, in many of which valuable fish are taken in considerable quantities with little effort.

On the Pacific coast, the province of British Columbia, owing to its immense number of islands, bays and fiords, which form safe and easily accessible harbors, has a sea-washed shore of 7,000 miles. Along this shore and within the limits of the territorial waters, there are fish and mammals in greater abundance, probably, than anywhere else in the whole world.

In addition to this salt-water fishing area, we have in our numerous lakes no less than 220,000 square miles of fresh water, abundantly stocked with many species of excellent food fishes. In this connection, it may be pointed out that the area of the distinctly Canadian waters of what are known as the Great Lakes—Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario—forms only one-fifth part of the total area of the larger fresh-water lakes of Canada.

The total marketed value of all kinds of fish, fish products and marine animals taken by Canadian fishermen in both the sea and inland fisheries, during the last fiscal year amounted to $34,667,872.

HANDY ELECTRIC STOVE

New Invention Also Has Fireless Cooker Attachment

A combination electric stove and fireless cooker has been patented by a Western man. It is said to use electric heat only and to give off practically no heat in a room. The stove is in upright form and the cooker has an opening into the oven instead of at the top. The oven is made of heavy sheet copper with joints double seamed and soldered outside and the heat from the current is applied directly to the radiator in the oven. It is claimed that in 15 to 30 minutes enough heat can be accumulated in this radiator to cook for half a day. In a small home, a stove of this type would be ideal, both because of being fireless and because it does not give off so much heat that a small kitchen is made almost suffocating.

YET THEY WANT TO VOTE

They stood outside the busy shop,
And gazed at things displayed:
At hats and gowns and lingerie,
For widow, wife and maid.
"A pretty thing," he said at last,
And pointed at a hat.
"A pretty thing!" she quick returned,
"Why no one's wearing that!"

He remained discreetly silent,
Till he saw a tailored suit.
"There!" he cried, "is a corker;
That's what I call a beaut!"
She turned on him a glance of scorn,
A glance that crushed him flat;
And the verdict that she uttered was:
"They all are wearing that!"

TURF.

London, Aug. 2.—A record price of $250,000 was paid today for the horse Prince Palatine, winner of the Ascot Gold cup, by J. B. Joel, the South African millionaire sportsman.

A proviso was made by his former owner, T. Pilkington, that the horse should not leave Great Britain.

ATHLETICS.

New York, Aug. 2.—The officials of the Amateur Athletic Union have received an invitation from the Stockholm Athletic Club of Sweden to enter an American team of athletes in the "Old Boys'" games to be held at Stockholm early in September. A minimum age limit has been set on competitors of 35 years, with the exception of football players, who will be allowed to enter if they are 30 years or older.

The events programmed included sprints and distance runs, weight competitions, pentathlon, consisting of five events: 400 and 1500-metre team races, 21-mile cycle race, 3000-metre cross-country race, modern tenthalon consisting of shooting and swimming events and association football.

The competition is open to all amateur athletes of the world, who are eligible under the age regulations. According to the officials of the A. A. U. there is little likelihood of America being represented by a team at this unique athletic carnival. A number of European entries are assured, according to report from Stockholm. The idea may also be adopted in this country next year, since there are a number of former athletes eligible under the age rule as laid down by the Stockholm club.

BASEBALL

Chicago, Aug. 2.—An "unwritten law" promulgated by umpires under which they declare out a batter who slides into first base was upheld by President Shivington, of the American Association.

"There is no time gained by sliding and in the case of first base, where the base runner does not have to dodge a touch, the only reason for the slide is to raise a dust that will hide the play from the empire," said Mr. Chivington.

HERRMANN RAPS RULING

Cincinnati, Aug. 2. — Chairman August Herrmann, of the National Baseball Commission, in discussing the "unwritten law" of calling a player out who slides into first base, which was upheld by President Thomas Chivington, of the American Association, to-day, said it not only was preposterous but directly contrary to the rule covering the point.

"A player is allowed to reach any base by running, walking, jumping, or in any other manner, as long as he remains within the lines prescribed," said Mr. Herrmann. "This is laid down in the rules of the game, and no umpire, president of a league, or any one else has any right to change this rule."

Chicago, Aug. 2.—"Lefty" Liefield, former Cub pitcher, who was sold to Atlanta and refused to report, has been sold to San Francisco, of the Pacific Coast League, by the Cub management.

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 2.—Pleading guilty to using obscene language during the fourth inning of Sunday's game in the police court today, cost Catcher Joe of the Atlanta club $5, which he paid immediately. Dunn's arrest was caused by a spectator. He was taken to jail immediately.

RING.

Robert Edgren, the celebrated authority on boxing says: About every ten years there is an entire change in the popular styles of boxing.

Fifty-three years ago, in 1860, Tom Sayers of England, and Heenan of America, fought for the world's heavyweight championship in England. It was a battle between a very clever English boxer of the old school and a younger, stronger, better conditioned American with less science. When Sayers was being beaten the crowd rushed into the ring and pulled down the ropes so that the referee was compelled to call the bout a draw. Two world's championship belts were made and one was presented to the English champion, who announced his retirement from the ring. Heenan should have had the other, but he never got it, for the donor had neglected to pay for it and the sheriff seized the belt at the instance of the maker.

That fight emphasized the importance of size and strength, and for a number of years men of great height and weight were considered the only proper candidates for heavyweight honors.

Jem Mace came along about ten years later, and in 1862 beat Tom King for the championship. Mace was a small heavyweight. He was marvelously fast and clever. He stood up straight and boxed scientifically. He was the founder of a school of boxing that turned out many famous men. Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Hall, Paddy Slavin and scores of other very clever big men being his pupils.

In 1872 Mace fought Joe Coburn, a big, husky American, for the championship. The result was a draw, under circumstances somewhat like those of the Heenan-Sayers battle. The influence of Mace was felt for at least ten years more, and Jem himself boxed in the ring until he was nearly seventy years of age.

The Mace style of fighting was jarred out of favor in 1882, when John L. Sullivan defeated Paddy Ryan in a bout for the championship of America. Everything now was Sullivanesque. John L. travelled about knocking out all comers in four-round fights. His great strength and ferocity made him the terror of the heavyweights. He was a rushing, mauling fighter with a terrific right hand punch that flattened all opponents as long as John L. retained his vigor. Sullivan was the model for all boxers. He was champion when the London prize ring rules, with bare fist combats, went out of favor and the milder golve fights under Marquis of Queenberry style of fighting was the only proper style.

Curiously enought the Sullivan period came to an end in ten years, for in 1892 Sullivan met Jim Corbett.

LOST OVER LONDON

Modern Phase of the Perils of a Great City—Airmen Was Mixed

A French aviator, M. Manio, who lost his way while flying from Sittingbourne to Hendon, was observed by thousands of Londoners as he circled above the city endeavoring to get his bearings. He had crossed the channel to Margate and was continuing his flight but found the atmosphere so thick with fog that he became confused and was directly over the city before he realized it. After circling two or three times over the Bank of England, he flew east till he struck the open country and alighted safely.

Cleaning Copper Kettles

Copper kettles soon become discolored when they have been in use for any length of time. Try cleaning them in the following way and you will get a beautiful polish: Dip a piece of lemon-rind into a little salt, and rub this well all over the surface of the kettle. Wipe it quickly off and polish with a dry chamois leather.

Pyorrhoea is the frequent cause of loss of teeth by grown persons. Decay is the usual cause of such loss in children. Pyorrhœa needs the most careful home treatment and the best care of a competent dentist.

THE FOOL WITH THE GUN

Hunters of the old school never mistook and shot and killed their companions and friends for wild animals. In the old days hunters were so careful in the woods that they didn't even kill their dogs; in the days when dogs were used to chase deer and bay bears it would have broken the old hunter's heart to have killed one of his dogs. Hunters of the old school were careful to get the game in the clear before they fired.

They did not shoot at sounds and shaking bushes. They never mistook a man or a dog for an animal of the woods.

Wild animals do not as a rule make any noise while moving about in the woods; they move silently and slyly; it is a defensive trait with them. The elephant's tread is lighter than a man's. A man may scent a cougar but he cannot hear him. The deer is noisy only when he is startled. Bears of ponderous build will as a rule sneak through the woods and make less noise than a man would make on a heavy carpet. The limbs and muscles of wild animals are not rigid; they are supple. A fox can caper over a hill covered with dry, crisp leaves and make less noise than the average man would make on a dirt road.

The frequency of "accidental" hunting murders has kept many a man out of the woods who would like to live another year. The popularity of deer and moose hunting has made it a most deadly pastime, seemingly.

The black powder cartridge was and is to-day deadly enough in the hands of the man who can mistake a canvas coat for a deer's hide. In such hands the smokeless, small bore rifle would not be more deadly. So whether the careless hunter kills a man with one bullet or another, it makes but little difference as long as the man is killed.—Rod and Gun.

DISAPPOINTING CRICKET

The Season Spoiled in England by Bad Weather and Weak Teams

This year's cricket season in the Old Country was one of the most disappointing within the memory of followers of the game, although at the outset the prospect was one of exceptional interest. The institution of the three-sided test contests, and the meteoric rise of Warwickshire to the championship last season, led enthusiasts to hope for exciting times; but the dismal weather spoiled everything. In addition to this most important feature, the sporting interest in the Test matches was sadly discounted by the disappointing composition of the Australian and South African teams. The unfortunate squabble in the Australian cricket world robbed the team of several of the Commonwealth's most prominent cricketers, while the South African team was weakened by circumstances over which the management had no control. The result was that the latter team's matches failed to arouse any interest, as it was soon apparent that their eleven was below the strength of several of first-class English counties, while the Australians, though certainly a better combination were not up to the form expected.

FRANCE'S PRESIDENT

Not Chosen Directly by the People and Has Little Real Power

From the point of view of salary and other emoluments the Presidency of the French Republic is the most desirable position in the world, since the President is entitled to a salary of $120,000 a year, and expenses amounting to as much more. He is the master of great patronage, and is always able to well provide for his family and personal friends. Also it is his duty to form cabinets. Nevertheless, the President of France is in many respects a figurehead, the real power being the Premier, or chief of the cabinet. The people of France recognizing the fact, decline to get excited about the President's election. If they were permitted to do the electing the citizens of France might show more interest in it, but, seeing that the chambers are the real electors the people of France are able to preserve a detached attitude. They are neither greatly enthusiastic nor very critical of the choice of the chambers but having a president elected for them, they treat him with all the respect elsewhere accorded to crowned heads.

In France there is no public campaigning for the presidency; no mass

COULD NOT BE KICKED

Williams called at two houses in Ancoats, representing that he was an officer looking for a man who, he stated, had been "drawing a dead man's pension for two years." He was arrested, and an officer told the stipendiary that Williams, after being put in the cells, had to be taken to Ancoats Hospital, but, he said, he was only shamming. Williams represented that he was suffering from hemorrhage and bled at the mouth, but a doctor at the hospital found the blood had been caused by Williams pricking his nostril with a piece of wire. Williams pleaded that he had no evil design. It was a piece of foolishness for which he ought to be kicked.

The Stipendiary: "I am afraid we are not allowed to sentence you to be kicked."

It was stated that on one occasion Williams, by representing himself to be a doctor, had induced a young lady to marry him.

MR. WILL CROOKS

Labor Orator on Duty to Nation Wife, and Home

Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., speaking in England, gave utterance to the following original aphorisms among others:

Some people's conception of manhood is that a man should be master in his own house. But I say that a man should never be master in his own house. Marriage is a partnership, and don't you forget it.

The man who thinks that the "I don't-care-for-anyone attitude is the manly attitude will live long enough to realise that no one cares for him.

There are no clever people nowadays, except those between the age of eighteen and twenty-four. They know absolutely everything they do.

The foundation of the British Empire exist in the homes of the toilers of the nation, and you and I are bound to try to make those homes reasonably and sensibly happy.

"What a fool I should look," says the average husband when told that he should behave as well towards his wife after marriage as before it. "Why, it would look as if I was courting." My answer to him is: My dear chap, you could never look a bigger fool than you did when you were courting.

So long as the ordinary man sublets his responsibilities so long will the present deplorable state of things continue to exist.

I want you to leave off apologising for being working man. Let the people who don't work do the apologising.

TWO STRANGE MURDERS

Trials of Mother Who Killed Daughter and Son Who Shot Father

A tragic story of the murder of a beautiful young woman by her mother, was told to a jury at Rouen, France, the outcome of the trial being that the unnatural parent was sentenced to death.

The victim, Marie Gauthier, aged twenty, was insured for $1,000, and it was to obtain the insurance money that her mother, a widow of forty-one, who kept a small grocer's store at Bouelles, strangled her, and then placed the corpse in an outhouse in a hanging position as if the girl had committed suicide.

Throughout the trial the widow maintained that she was innocent, but the evidence was overwhelming. The two little brothers of the murdered village belle testified against their mother, and related how, during the night of the crime, they heard their sister repeatedly call out, "Mamma, mind, you are strangling me."

When the body was discovered Mme. Gauthier explained that her daughter had committed suicide, and that she had been very melancholy for some time. This was proved to be untrue, for the girl was to be married shortly, and had told all her friends joyfully of her betrothal.

While Mme. Gauthier's trial was proceeding at Rouen the jurymen of the Allier Department were considering the case of a son who murdered his father. They were in a lenient mood, and the patricide was sentenced to only one year's imprisonment. Yet the circumstances of the crime were appalling.

Louis Auclair, a youth of nineteen was trying to break open the desk in which the father kept his savings, when M. Auclair, sen., unexpectedly arrived and caught his son by the collar. They struggled, and to free himself the son seized a revolver and shot his father dead.

AMATEUR STANDARDS

Should Canadian Authorities Not Rule Out Certain Contestants?

Canada has the strictest ruling on amateur standard of any in the world. In fact it is so strict that the Olympic people, to avoid trouble for themselves, adopted the Canadian ruling which was quite a compliment to our authorities. But in spite of the fact that our athletics are held with such an iron hand, the powers that be do not exert any severity when accepting entries from the United States to any of our Canadian meets. They take without question the status of the men as put forward by the American bodies and yearly see our men discouraged by defeat from men, who practically do nothing but follow athletics as a means of getting an easy livelihood. Our men are practically untrained, there are no facilities provided for proper practice and if a hard working athlete who needs every dollar he can earn to make end meet, accepts anything in the nature of an honorarium, he is at once relegated to the pro. class. Each year raw untrained men, without coaching are pitted against men who are carefully handled and coached throughout the spring, summer, fall and winter and then the cry goes up that our Canadian athletes are of no account. This impression is fostered by the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union which looks to the attraction of American athletes to swell the gate receipts, provide amusements for spectators and forget that their primary duty is to strengthen amateurism and foster Canadian athletics. It is well known that the men who carry the colors of American clubs to victory are not of the wealthy class and the mere fact that these men do nothing but compete and train all year seems strong enough to place them under suspicion and in Canada would mean suspension. To do what these athletes do, would mean the existence of a private income of no small dimensions, but evidently the United States authorities are complacent when athletes are winning points for the big clubs—Winnipeg Free Press.

NEW RANGE FINDER

Will Counteract the Rolling and Pitching of a Battleship

H.M.S. Orion is putting to test a new form of range-finder to be used in the firing of her 13.5 in. guns. This consists of a gyroscopic mounting upon which a range-finder is carried. The object is to counteract the rolling and pitching of the battleship in a rough sea, and enable the range to be found more correctly.

The new range-finder is placed in fire-control stations at the top of tripod masts, from which guns are trained and fired by electrical connections with the barbettes; and it has been highly successful when tested on shore. During the gun trials conditions will be extremely severe, on account of the intense vibration to which the apex of the tripod masts will be subjected.

Can You Grasp It?

A recently adopted unit of astronomical measurement is equal to 1,000,000 times the distance between the sun and the earth.

Tests by French naval officers have indicated that the waves in wireless telegraphy travel at a rate of nearly 100,000 miles a second.

CARRIED IN KNAPSACKS

Four Soldiers Can Handle Complete New Wireless Telegraphy Outfit

The British War Office has appointed a committee to consider the application of the recent remarkable developments in wireless telegraphy to the needs of the army. The Chairman of the committee is Sir Henry Norman, the author and traveller. A complete wireless installation which can be carried in the knapsacks of four men is the latest development of radio-telegraphy adopted by the British army. A "knapsack station" has a range of about ten miles. It is carried in knapsacks strapped on the backs of soldiers, four men each carrying a load of twenty pounds. The mast is about thirty feet in height, of extremely light though rigid construction, being made chiefly of aluminum in tube form.

Dog Duty in Ireland

The number of dogs registered in Ireland in 1911 totalled 521,898. The dog licence duty received amounted to $260,945—$23,575 from the towns and $238,370 from country districts.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Two Residences, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, August 25, 1913, for the above mentioned Residences on the Experimental Farm Grounds, Ottawa, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order.

Bladder and Kidney Troubles

Are caused by poisoning impurities which clog the Kidneys; intense pain is the result and sleepless nights follow. The patient becomes annoyed with sharp pains shooting through the back and up the spine. These pains often so violent and acute that the victim suffers the greatest agony and is driven almost to despair. The refuse and sediment which settled in the Kidneys must be removed in order to procure relief.

SANOL, the Kidney Cure, is the only reliable remedy which has a combined effect of acting on the kidneys, and restoring them to their natural condition, and removing Kidney, Bladder and Gall Stones by dissolving same. It cleanses and purifies the system, strengthens and invigorates the Kidneys, and encourages proper filtration. It relieves the pain and gives streth and energy to the body. Price $1.50 per bottle.

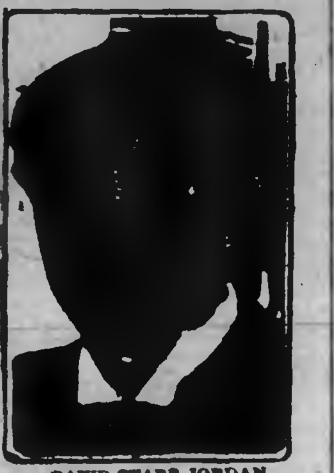
ALFRED THE GREAT A COMMON ANCESTOR

Strange Compilation of Facts Which go to Show How Many and How Few Were Our Forefathers

By a thousand strains the ancestry of each of us leads back to Alfred the Great, declares David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford University of California.

Over and over again in any line of ancestry strains of blood have crossed and the same person, and therefore, the whole of a person's ancestry, would be found in different places in the individual pedigree. This happens dozens of times in all family histories.

That something of this sort must occur is evident from the fact that the child of to-day must have had at the time of Alfred the Great an ancestry of 870,672,000,000 persons. In the time of William the Conqueror (30 generations) this number reaches [illegible]. This is shown by ordinary process of computation, two parents, four grandparents, eight great-grandparents and so on.



DAVID STARR JORDAN

As the aggregate of Englishmen in Alfred's time, or even in William's, was but a very small fraction of these numbers, most of these ancestors must have been repeated many times in the calculation. Each person who leaves descendants is a link in the great chain of life, or rather in life's network.

It is certain that the blood of each person in Alfred's time who left capable descendants is represented in every family in England of strict English descent. In other words, almost every Englishman is descended from Alfred the Great, as, very likely, also, from the peasant woman whose pancakes Alfred is reputed to have allowed to burn.

Moreover, there are few, if any, who do not share the blood of William the Conqueror and most ancestral lines, if they could be traced, would go back to him by a hundred different strains.

FERTILE TERRITORY ALONG HUDSON'S BAY

Settlers to Clear and Drain It are Needed—Much National Wealth in Patricia District

J. B. Tyrrell who explored the District of Patricia on the Hudson Bay slope says in that portion of Ontario there are tens of thousands of acres of fine light clay. It only needs the entry of settlers to drain and clear it to make a fine agricultural country. There is a great deal of swamp, but though the country appears to be flat there is really a very good slope, and it could easily be drained and made most habitable. That it is fertile is shown by the fact that at most of the Hudson Bay posts they grow all their garden vegetables with ease, though, of course, there has not been as yet any real attempt at agriculture. Mr. Tyrrell went on to say that the climate, so far as he could ascertain would in no way be a drawback to the district as an agricultural country. The winters are not so severe as those of Northern Saskatchewan and the summers were also temperate and very pleasant. On coming close to the bay, however, the cold winds influence the growth, though the land is good, and he believed that the agricultural value of this section would depend on its production of grass and fodder. This section has for years been the feeding grounds for vast herds of deer, elk, cariboo, and all kinds of game, making it a regular sportsman's paradise, and the large numbers of them warrant them proof against extinction. From a mining standpoint, there are large areas underlain with greenstones and other Keewatin rocks, and though there was not time for the party to investigate these, it is known that nearly everywhere these Keewatin rocks have been found they have proved to be mineral bearing. Most of the country supports a short growth of spruce and tamarack, but the mercantile timber is almost wholly confined to the banks of the stream where natural drainage has been afforded to the swampy country.

SWORDS FOR KAISER'S SONS

War Lord's Militant Messages on the Steel

An ancient custom has been revived by the German Emperor, who has presented his sons with swords. On the blades are inscribed the dates when they began their military or naval duties.

On the sword given to the Crown Prince are engraved words which may be translated, "Ready at all times for the glory of the Empire." The sword of Prince Eitel Fritz has the motto, "Fearless and true." Prince Oscar's blade is inscribed, "Faithful and steadfast."

The naval cutlass presented to Prince Adalbert has a double inscription, on the one side, "Full steam ahead" and on the other, "Thy strength belongs to the Fatherland."

BILLIONS OF BIRDS IN PIGEON FLIGHT

The world is indebted to John James Audubon, the great naturalist, for what is perhaps the best account of the passenger pigeon ever written. And his truthfulness and scientific accuracy make it a story to be accepted at its face value. He relates that in the Autumn of 1813 he left his house at Henderson, on the banks of the Ohio, to go to Louisville. In passing over the Barrens a few miles from Hardensburgh he observed pigeons flying from the north-east to the south-west, in greater numbers than he had ever seen before. After they had been passing for about an hour he dismounted, seating himself on an eminence and made a dot with a pencil for every flock that passed. In a short time he found that he was putting down dots at the rate of 163 in twenty-one minutes. He resumed his journey and still pigeons came; the light of day was darkened as if by a solar eclipse. Like a torrent, and with the roar of distant thunder, they gathered in a solid mass, darting forward with the wings of the wind in undulating and angular lines, descending and sweeping close to the earth, then mounting perpendicularly so as to resemble a vast column, and when high in the air once more, wheeling and twisting within their continued lines, which then resembled the coils of a gigantic serpent.

Billions of Birds

For fifty-five miles Audubon traveled on to Louisville, with the pigeons still flying overhead, the flight continuing for three days. Each flock followed exactly the course of its predecessor. If the first flock had swooped nearer the ground or swerved aside the next flock did the same. Audubon made an attempt to calculate the numbers of pigeons that flew past in that memorable flight, and if he did not succeed he made the most scientific effort to do so that is recorded. He estimated that the pigeons flew in columns about a mile wide, on an average, though later on he expressed the opinion that his estimate was unduly conservative. He also calculated the rate of flight to be sixty miles an hour. On this basis the birds passing in three hours would cover an area of 180 square miles, and counting two pigeons to a square yard the total would work out at about a billion and a quarter. How many there would be in a three-days' flight can thus be calculated by anyone who will not fear to look the result in the face.

Audubon made further investigations and calculations of the passenger pigeon. For example, he estimated that as each pigeon consumed half a pint of food a day the billion and a quarter birds in the three-hour flight would consume 9,000,000 bushels in a single day. At this rate the birds he saw in those three days would consume the total grain crop of Canada in less than a week. As a matter of fact, while the passenger pigeons ate grain most of their food grew wild, and they were no such blight to agriculture as might be supposed, although the pigeoners, a class of hunter that grew up when the flocks were greatest, represented themselves as public benefactors when they slaughtered the birds wholesale. There was a famous roosting place of the passenger pigeons upon the Green River, which Audubon visited. He estimated that the forest where the birds passed the night was forty miles long and three miles wide.

Fattening Hogs on Pigeons

On one of his visits he reached the roosting grounds two hours before sunset, and a fortnight after the birds had established themselves. There were crowds of hunters waiting for the birds to return from their foraging excursions, among them a farmer who had driven a herd of 300 hogs more than a hundred miles in order to fatten on the pigeons that would be slain. The forest itself looked as though a hurricane had visited it. Trees two feet in diameter had been broken down by the sheer weight of the roosting birds. Great branches everywhere had fallen. When the pigeons began to return the noise of their wings was such that the report of a gun could not be heard a few feet away. The hunters dared not venture into the woods for fear of being killed by falling limbs, broken off by the birds. Waiting on the edge of the wood, they killed them by the thousand, plucked and salted them on the ground, and loaded up great wagons with the meat, which was later shipped away. In the last great killing in Michigan in 1878 three hundred tons of dressed birds were shipped out. Even against this wholesale slaughter the birds made headway, until the pigeoners called upon the telegraph to assist them. By this means the hunters informed each other of the approach and progress of flights, with the result that the pigeons would be followed for hundreds of miles and billions of them killed. These methods, continued for a few years, led to the absolute extermination of the birds.

EELS AS FOOD

The Scottish refusal to regard eels as food may possibly have a further explanation than instinctive repugnance to the snake-like appearance of the fish. Dean Ramsay, speaking of the horror of swine formerly general in Scotland, recalls hearing an old Scottish gentleman gravely ask, "Were not swine forbidden under the law and cursed under the Gospel?" Now, one finds many Scots at any rate who refuse to touch shellfish of any kind, as crabs or lobsters, as well as eels. All this looks very like obedience to the prohibition in Leviticus of "all that have not fins and scales in the seas and in the rivers." For the eel's scales are not apparent and its fins inconspicuous.

Saving the Soap

To economise on shaving soap a New Yorker has invented a plate to hold a cake of soap in a cup above the level of water and lather.

A Light Automobile

With a body of wickerwork and driven by an aerial propeller, a new English automobile is so light that it can be picked up by two men.

Purify the Air

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

MATCHING A SLEEVE INTO THE ARMHOLE

Two Plans Can be Followed, Both Will Give Satisfaction If Proper Care is Used

"Is there any rule which may be depended on for putting sleeves into a waist correctly?"

The question is asked as often as there are seconds in a minute, by women who try to do their own sewing. Unless you know how to put a sleeve into a waist it is one of the most baffling bits of work in the dressmaking art. Fortunately there is a general rule which usually works successfully if carefully followed. In fact, there are two good rules.

The average, normal-sized armhole measures from 14½ to 15½ inches. For this sized armhole the point for the front or inside seam of a sleeve is 2⅝ inches towards the front, measuring from the under-arm seam of the waist toward the front. Pin the seam to the armhole at that point, then measure from the under-arm seam of the waist towards the front 4½ inches and pin the sleeve in at that point. Then measure again from the under-arm seam of the waist up towards the back 3½ inches and pin the sleeve there. Between the 4½ and 3½ points the sleeve is basted plain into the armhole, and the waist should be held towards you during this basting to preserve the curves.

Holding the sleeve next to you, gather the remaining edge and baste into the armhole, distributing whatever gathers there may be, with perfect evenness.

The second rule is to crease the waist, on a warp thread, close to the armhole, beginning at the shoulder seam and extending to a short distance below the bottom of the armhole. Then crease on a warp thread, close to the bottom of the armhole letting this crease cross by the first one. At the intersection of these creased lines make a third crease diagonally up to the armhole. Pin the inside seam of the sleeve at the point where the creased line touches the armhole. Follow the other measurements for basting the sleeve in.

To make a sleeve set right across the top, after it is stitched in and the seam finished, turn the seam towards the shoulder seam, and where there is a lining tack the seam edge to the lining for a distance of two or three inches across the top. Where there is no lining stitch it on the machine.

THE OLD PLUG HORSE

Don't make fun of the plug. He may be slow and awkward and never get to the stable until dark, but he is the fellow who in the end will bring home the coin, says Bert Walker. The plug horse that pulls the harvester all day in the field puts more money in the bank for the honest farmer than a race horse that goes out and turns a half in 0:50 flat and then loafs for two weeks waiting for another race to be matched. The old plug goes out in sunshine and storm and pulls in a few dollars every week, but the race-horse waits for the day when the track is good and then generally loses more than he wins. Just so with the man. Pin your faith to the plug who keeps eternally at it; the fellow who gets up every morning and does so much and is ready to do it again next day. He lays up more shining dollars in the bank than the swift sport who lays around all summer waiting for luck to come along and turn a stream of silver into his pocket. One cackling Plymouth Rock hen is worth a dozen screaming eagles when it comes to paying off the mortgage. The plug is the fellow who steadies the ship and acts as ballast when the boat begins to rock. The plug is the fellow who lives contentedly and long, and when he passes away the local papers say, "He leaves his family in comfortable circumstances."

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath
and Dean Hoard

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the island of Cirvne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra

It dazzled him to think of the trip to the capital with the countess for company.

Early in the dewy morning Santos brought the Hawk to the cottage and waited for Rositta.

A little later the wonderful machine leaped into the air and up and forward with mighty flaps of the glittering wings.

Countess Rosiny rose and went slowly forward to the man who was directing the flight of the great bird; the brain of the mechanism.

She leaned over the railing that separated the cabin from the steering wheel and the various levers. "How high are we now, Mr. Duprel?" she asked.

Santos looked at the aerograph: "2,537 feet, countess. Do you want to go higher?"

"Oh, yes!"

The Hawk darted up; a turn of the wheel worked the wings, and electric sparks were seen in a steady stream.

"What a wonderful machine this is!" whispered the countess in Santos' ear. He had mastered his timidity and, for the first time, turned to look at her. Her brilliant eyes melted into the light blue, round eyes of Santos.

"Yes, it is," he said simply.

"Are we going still higher?" she asked in a breathless tone.

Santos looked hurriedly at the aerograph and saw that it showed 16,000 feet. In his nervousness he had gone higher than he intended, so he hastily changed the direction. It was bitterly cold for a short time, but the wings soon generated enough heat to warm the cabin; in fact, it was too warm, and Santos opened the air condenser that let in the fresh, pure air of that altitude, where it is clear and intoxicating in its sweetness.

"How much I admire men like you, Mr. Duprel. You have conquered the air!" whispered the countess to the good boy who had succumbed to her charms.

"Countess, you are too good to me; you are the sweetest, dearest woman I have ever met," stuttered the bird man. He was still more dazed when she placed her dainty, dimpled hand on the steering wheel where it touched his.

"Where does this machine get the tremendous power that enables it to fly with such velocity?" questioned Rositta.

"Electricity," was all the little man said; then he smiled at his fair passenger, whose hand still rested on the wheel, touching his.

"Electricity?" She looked around at the simple machinery in sight. "How do you generate it?"

Santos laughed at the shrewd question. "We don't. At least, not much of it." Then he suddenly closed his mouth like one who has realized he is saying too much.

The clever woman read his thoughts. She was quiet for a short time, then her hand released the wheel and fell in her lap. She sighed deeply.

"Are you happy, Mr. Duprel?" was her sudden question.

Santos was so surprised that he gave an involuntary pull at the wheel that took them from their course. "Why do you ask this question, countess?"

"Because a man like you ought to be very happy."

"A poor, lonesome fellow, such as me?"

"Are you lonely? I would have supposed that a genius, who could conquer the air and save his country, couldn't be lonely."

Santos Duprel put on the automatic lock and let the wheel go. His instinct was aroused; something told him that this beautiful woman was playing with him, and he, the brave Santos Duprel, turned toward the bewitching enemy with eyes lit up.

"Countess Rosiny! Why are you playing with me? I am not a great man. I am not an inventor and conqueror; I am only a simple workman trying to give my best to my master. Should you tell all this to him, to Napoleon Edison, it would be well placed, but why do you speak to me this way?"

The countess looked at him as if fascinated by his outburst. Tears appeared in her eyes.

"Mr. Duprel! Have I wounded you? I am all alone, with no one to care for me. You have been so kind to me that I have, ever since Helgoland, looked on you as my best friend. Can I help it if my loneliness has—" she did not finish her sentence, but fell to sobbing hysterically and poor Santos' heart was softened.

"Can you pardon me, Mr. Duprel? Will you still be my friend, my kind-hearted friend?" She offered both her hands to the unhappy man.

The control signal rang. Santos jumped to the wheel. He was excited, but automatically slackened the Hawk's pace. It almost fell downward and with a graceful curve settled on the roof of the Crystal Palace.

Astra was awaiting Rositta's arrival, and Santos watched the two women as they walked toward the elevator that took them down to their rooms. "At eleven tomorrow night," called Rositta, with a friendly wave of her hand.

Santos felt the encouragement in her manner and happily took the Hawk to its resting-place.

CHAPTER XIII.

Letters From Europe.

The Countess Rosiny was surprised to find a number of letters awaiting her, all bearing European postmarks.

"How did they reach me?" she asked Astra.

"Napoleon told the Count von Werdenstein that you are my guest, and he also made arrangements to have your property interests protected."

"Mr. Edison is very kind." She looked at Astra. "Do you know, I sometimes envy you."

Astra raised her eyebrows questioningly.

"My dear, I do; you are so good and noble that Mr. Edison cannot help loving you as he loves goodness itself through you."

Astra sighed: "Then you love Napoleon, Rositta?"

"I love him, indeed," she replied laughingly. "And were I as good as you are, I would take up the glove and fight for the prize. But I—my heart was poisoned long ago. I do not inspire pure love." Her voice sounded somewhat bitter

"Dear sister," said Astra, putting her arm around Rositta, "I cannot believe that you are not as good as you appear, for I do not believe I could love you as I do if you were not good and true."

Astra left to preside at the Educational Society of Independent Women of America. "We shall have luncheon together at two o'clock, and then we will have a ride with Napoleon," she said as she left.

Rositta hurriedly went to her own rooms, taking the letters she had received. One was in Count von Werdenstein's handwriting. She locked her door carefully, then opened the letters one by one, leaving the count's until the last.

There were reports from her agents, a check from her banker, a sad sonnet from a former captain of the Royal Guard, one of her most steadfast admirers, but none were of great importance. She glanced through them and then opened the one that most interested her:

"My Dear Countess:—I was pleased with the news that I received through Edison that you are safe and well. The political situation has received a tremendous shaking up, but the people are happy and preparations are under way to restore the same good order that we enjoyed in former days; but no more militarism.

"I think the European peoples will soon be as rich as our American brothers. We expect them to teach us the latest methods of finance, etc. We will gladly welcome every opportunity to learn from them.

"A bit of news: The Princedom of Schomburg Lithow is in great sorrow. It has lost the last member of its reigning family. I am telling you this, as I know you always liked the jovial young Prince Otto, who died without issue.

"European monarchs were much surprised at the American defense, but they had to accept what I had to offer them. Now in their disaster they are bonded together.

"I will be glad to hear further from you. You know that I have always taken keen interest in your movements.

"With the best wishes.—Count von Werdenstein."

Rositta glanced once more through the letter, interpreting it.

"He has received my message. They want to restore the old order. They are anxious to get the secret of the aerodromone, for which they offer me the Princedom Schomburg Lithow All European monarchs are in the pact."

She answered the count's letter, then left it and her reply open on her desk, to be read by anyone who might wish

She dressed and went to Astra's boudoir. Together they entered the dining-room in time to see Napoleon and Ambrosio Hale enter from the other door.

Napoleon's eyes rested with appreciation on the picture the two presented.

Mr. Hale greeted them effusively, then turned to the countess, whose charms were, in many respects, even more fascinating than the President's.

A ride on horseback was scheduled for the afternoon; that old, invigorating sport still held its charm, as all were accomplished horsemen.

The days were still short, and they had to hurry homeward, as they wished to reach the capital before sunset. Napoleon, who knew the country best, led them through a short cut, a meadow nestling between two deep forests, and thus to a shorter road.

By the time they reached the first suburb it had begun to grow dark.

They had to cross the town to reach the Crystal Palace. As they passed under the first street lamp two men who were standing on the corner, near an automobile, peered closely at them. One of the men grasped the other by the arm and said: "Come." They jumped into the car and it shot forward, turning the nearest corner, and raced toward the north, to the heart of the city. At the new congressional building they stopped and beckoned to a man who seemed to await them.

"I tell you, Mozrak, they will pass this corner," said one of the men impatiently.

"But I would prefer to stand farther down, where there is a greater crowd," said the man who had been waiting.

"What do you want with the crowd?"

"To help me escape," was the laconic answer of the man called Mozrak.

"Just as you please," assented the man in the car. "Select your own place."

The automobile with the three men went farther, where the streets and elevated sidewalks were crowded with people. Mozrak looked around and back, as if he expected to see some one he knew.

"Here!" The man at the wheel obeyed. "Wait for me at the next corner, with everything in readiness, and when I jump into the car you are to let her out." Mozrak left the automobile and threaded his way through the crowd. The big car turned the corner indicated and stopped. Mozrak walked far enough to get its bearings, then returned to the center of the block. His hand strayed toward his hip pocket, rested there for a second and then he stood watching the passing throng.

In the meantime the four on horseback neared the building in a slow trot; as they reached the busier streets their horses fell into a walk.

Napoleon rode on Astra's left and they were closely followed by Rositta and Hale. They passed the building and were nearing the place where Mozrak leaned against a lamp post, smoking contentedly. He saw the coming quartet, and took a deep breath. When they had reached the center of the block, near where he stood, his right hand went into his hip pocket. Just as the four on horseback reached him he jumped toward Astra with leveled arm, and the glint of an automatic pistol was seen.

The pistol was pointed at Astra, whose horse made a nervous jump when the man came forward. Before the man could pull the trigger Napoleon's whip hissed through the air, hitting him squarely in the face. The pistol exploded; the bullet grazed Napoleon's right shoulder, and before the fellow could make another attempt to shoot he was seized by two onlookers and his pistol was knocked from his grasp. He was dazed by a blow and stood looking at them blankly.

Astra fainted, but many kind and willing arms were there to prevent her falling from her horse.

Rositta, who just a few minutes before was so full of joy, looked at the scene shudderingly.

Napoleon, like a god of revenge, stood over the man. She could see blood oozing from his right coat sleeve, but that blood was not the cause of her pale, terror-stricken face. It was the face of the assassin that had startled her. She knew that face.

The police restored order, but before Napoleon let the shaking would-be assassin go he spoke to him in a stern, low voice:

"Who are you?"

"Nikolay Mozrak."

"A Russian?"

The pale man simply bowed.

"Who sent you to commit this most miserable deed?" And he shook the man as a storm shakes a withered leaf.

"It was my fate; I had to do it," the man answered calmly.

"Miserable cur!" said Napoleon, and tossed the man into the arms of the waiting guard, then turned toward Astra.

Her eyes met those of Napoleon, apprehensively.

"You are hurt!" she whispered, pointing toward his hand.

"It must be a mere scratch, as I have not felt it."

The return to the palace was a silent one. Napoleon submitted to the doctor's treatment, but his wound was slight, and when it was properly dressed he returned to the drawing-room, where Hale was doing his best to drive away the oppression caused by the accident.

Astra had regained her composure; her only fear was that Napoleon's wound might be dangerous, but when she knew its insignificance she felt better.

Not so the Countess Rosiny. The color had left her cheeks, and she sat gazing into space. A face danced before her eyes, the face of the anarchist. They tried in vain to reassure her, but it was impossible.

It took all her will power to force a smile to her pale lips when Napoleon returned and still more to utter the words: "I am glad you were not badly hurt."

During a lull in the conversation she asked: "What is the name of that man?"

"He said it was Nikolay Mozrak," answered Napoleon.

"Nikolay Mozrak," she repeated slowly.

"A Russian," added Napoleon.

Then Mr. Hale turned the conversation into other channels.

Napoleon could not but notice that after he had told the name of the assassin the countess had partly regained her composure.

At eleven o'clock Rositta was on the roof of the Crystal Palace, waiting for the Hawk. Astra and Napoleon had come up to see her off. Napoleon helped her into the machine, where a tall stranger stood at the wheel. The bird rose and took its direction and sailed off toward the west.

Rositta went to the aerial chauffeur and spoke, but he signaled back that he could not hear or talk.

She returned to the comfortable bench and tried to think: "Does Napoleon suspect something? No, it cannot be, or he must be a wizard." With this she lay down and in a few minutes was sleeping like an innocent baby in a cradle.

CHAPTER XIV.

The New Cirynith Deposit.

The fact that Rositta found a stranger in the aerodromone, instead of Santos Duprel, was not the result of any suspicion on Napoleon's part. Santos had received a more important order.

The substance "cirynith," that wonderful, glittering element that combined all the qualities of glass and rubber, that was a thousand times stronger than steel, lighter than aluminum and absolutely indestructible, was very scarce. The volcanic island of Ciryne, where Napoleon had discovered the precious metal, was rapidly becoming depleted of the material with which to build aerodromones, and as Napoleon's plans for the future were based on cirynith, he must look for other sources of supply. He felt convinced that this metal must be in other places, and whenever he had time he flew over countries where he suspected its existence.

A wonderful instrument, similar to a spectroscope, was of great assistance to him in his searches. He had found some trace of cirynith in the volcanic regions in Italy, but not sufficient for his purposes, so he went farther.

Immediately upon Santos' return from Ciryne with Rositta he had been dispatched upon this search, and Napoleon himself started out the next morning. His wound was so slight that it did not interfere with his movements, and he started early, flying toward Italy. He went slowly along the western coast of that boot-like peninsula, searching diligently, but without results.

Santos was looking through the Alps. The poor fellow labored under great difficulties. His mind was not clear enough to work on the delicate radioscope. Rositta had robbed him of his peace and he dreamed more than he watched the changing colors of the little instrument.

The radioscope suddenly began to show interesting colors and recalled him from his dreams. The tiny plate that was framed in platinum glowed greenly; it was like a pale emerald, and growing more intense at every stroke of the great bird's wings.

Santos looked around. He saw a splendid picture: Toward the right great forests stretched, then came a few volcano peaks, with ancient ruins on top, and beyond all this spread a long, silver lake.

Before him was a mighty plain in the center of which stood a tremendous pyramid with the top as flat and level as though it had been sliced off with a knife.

The radioscope showed plainly that this pyramidlike hill was rich in the precious cirynith. Santos was so excited that he forgot even Rositta for a while. The plateau and the whole pyramid was barren of human beings, so he descended.

It had been thousands of years since the volcano had been active, and the lava composition was full of the crystals that produce cirynith. Santos gathered some in a small box and then began to figure out his geographical situation. He found that he was near the town Kis-cell, County Suemeg. "I am in Hungary," he muttered. "And this is a richer deposit of cirynith than the master ever expected to find."

He went up high in the air and adjusting the electro-stylograph, with which all the aerodromones were equipped, he began to send out calls for Napoleon.

In a few minutes the connection was established and Santos told Napoleon of his discovery.

A REVOLVING HOUSE

You Can Regulate Wind and Shade According to Desire

The newest things in summer houses and outdoor sleeping shelters are the revolving kind. These are made easily.

Design the sort of summer house you want, only don't attach it permanently to the foundations. Build a platform of good stout timber on the usual foundations. Fasten a steel rod at least an inch in diameter in the center. The rod can be as long as desired.

Get a dozen or more substantially built steel casters and attach them to the bottom of the house. In the center of the house fasten a block to the floor and pierce the block to receive the steel bolt.

The idea is that the open part of the house can be revolved so as to catch the breeze or avoid it. Also the occupants can get a change of scenery, as often as they like.

If the casters are well made and the platform on which they run smoothed properly, the house is easily revolved.

PARIS POLICE METHODS

Criminal Has Small Chance of Escape Once Trail is Taken

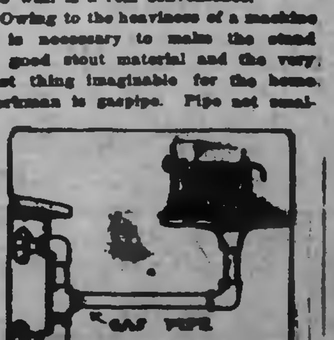
The Parisian police department is the admiration of the world when it really busies itself to obtain information. While it takes some time to set the machinery of justice in motion, once the department gets after a thief it keeps up until somebody is arrested.

A new system of using the bicycle in conjunction with the automobile has recently been developed. A squad of policemen are started out on a chase for a thief in an auto. When they reach a point where the trail divides a man is set on the new trail on a bicycle. Provision is made for carrying bicycles on the rear of the automobile, the hangers adopted having accommodations for as many as three machines.

TYPEWRITER STAND MADE OF GAS PIPE

A typewriter is an unsightly thing to have about a room and a typewriter table takes up much space. Therefore a device that will permit the typewriter being provided with a swinging stand that can be attached to a wall or desk or close up against the wall is a real convenience.

Owing to the heaviness of a machine it is necessary to make the stand of good stout material and the very best thing imaginable for the home workman is gaspipe. Pipe not smaller than three-quarter inch should be used. Three three-inch flanges, a T joint and three elbow joints with necessary lengths of pipe and wooden seat for the machine are all that are necessary. The pipe should be screwed into the joints far enough to permit it to turn at least once without weakening the fastening.



The general pattern of the stand is shown in the sketch. The fastening should be done with at least four long, heavy screws [illegible] care should be taken that the screws go [illegible] place of anchoring it the stand is fastened to the wall. The whole stand should be painted.

Men Who Don't Exercise

SUFFER FROM INDIGESTION, HEADACHES, POOR APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous, as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens of Woodstock.

In his convincing letter, Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, langour and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits, there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Richardson, and son, Stanley, returned on Saturday to their home at 144 Rubidge street after a three months' trip to England. They visited in Liverpool, London, Tunbridge Wells, Brighton, Hastings, Windsor and other points.

Laziest Local Man up Again.

John Sweeney, who is supposed to be the laziest man in the city, and was charged with vagrancy a week ago and with not supporting his family, was up again on Saturday. He was let go on suspended sentence with the certain promise of a six months' meal ticket on Central Prison, if he comes up again.

Found Loaded Winchester.

Lindsay Post: Thursday Chief Chilton came across a loaded Winchester and a session of the police court was held to see what was to be done with the capture. The Winchester was in a "half shot" condition, and was not "discharged" by the magistrate. On the contrary a fine of $2.00, without trimmings was imposed on the Toronto vag.

Saturday's Dust.

The streets of Peterborough on Saturday, during the water famine, resembled a sand storm in the desert. The air was semi-opaque with clouds of dust. During the afternoon however, Ald. Gillespie and Mayor Bradburn used the fire engine which Chief Howard had placed over the creek at Brock and Aylmer streets, to fill the water carts, and thus allayed the dust nuisance.

When the Lights Went Out.

As the Stoney Lake ploughed her way homewards on Saturday night with the Typos' picnic, the lights were out and all went merry as a wedding bell, possibly getting ready for the wedding march. Some joker switched on the lights suddenly. It is estimated that 83 manly hands suddenly released the hands of as many dainty ladies' and that 47 manly arms suddenly untwined from as many slender waists.

Credit to Whom Credit, Etc.

It was P. C. Sills, who discovered the fire in the rear of Charlotte street, early Friday morning and while the nightwatchman sent in the alarm P. C. Sills was endeavoring to extinguish the blaze. In this he was only partly successful on account of the quantity of small pieces of light wood. As he ran to the street to send in the alarm, that had been accomplished. This is the report made by P. C. Sills to the Police Chief.

Liquor Seized at Haliburton.

Minden Echo: Quite a stir has been caused by the seizure at the express office at Haliburton of several shipments of liquor consigned to various parties in and around town. The seizures were made by a county constable, he acting on his own initiation and apparently without any information against the parties interfered with, as no summonses for any of them has been issued. At that time of writing some of it is still held and part of it has been returned to owners, also without any hearing before a magistrate.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

"Dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return," was fully in evidence in Peterborough, when we had the water famine.

If the winners in the "little tots' race" at the printers' picnic, will call at the Times' office, they can secure the prizes not already given.

Hereafter, by a suggestion made on Saturday by Police Magistrate Dumble, local undertakers will be required to notify the City Clerk concerning all deaths they are connected with.

COSTS MAN $8.50 TO BE A TWIN

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—It cost either Frank or Harry Swartz, 19 years old, $8.50 to be the twin of the other yesterday, when Magistrate Morris fined them both that amount because he couldn't tell which had been guilty of flirting in the park.

Complaints have been made of a young man of certain description whose actions with girls in the vicinity of Horticultural hall have offended the informers. With the description Long, a park guard, went looking for the man it fitted and found two of him. The only difference between Frank and Harry's dress and appearance was that one of them wore white socks and the other lavender.

HOW TO LOSE YOUR TAN, FRECKLES OR WRINKLES

(From Woman's Tribune.)

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

LEPROSY ON THE INCREASE ALL OVER UNITED STATES

Prominent Speaker Complains That Country Has Not Done Enough to Combat the Disease

Chautauqua, Aug. 2.—In a lecture here recently W. M. Danner, secretary of the International and Interdenominational Mission to Lepers in India and the East, declared that the number of lepers in the United States is rapidly increasing, and that the government is not taking proper care of these people.

"We find lepers in 17 states of this country. It has been necessary to establish an official colony in both Massachusetts and Louisiana, and a hospital in San Francisco," said Mr. Danner. "Leprosy is very considerably on the increase in the United States. Perhaps there is more in Texas than any other state."

NOT COMBATING DISEASE.

"This disease is no small matter, and the United States has not done its share to care for its portion of the million people who have leprosy. They often get as bad treatment here as in China or other Oriental countries. For nearly two weeks one man was shipped back and forth between two states; the authorities in neither place offered him any care and the result was he was left to die in a freight car," continued the speaker.

"If the lepers were animals, the federal government would go out of its way to care for them, but they are people, so we can not even get an appropriation for them.

"This disease is but slightly contageous. However, if we are to stamp it out, the people affected with it must be segregated. Missionaries have worked for years among these people and have not taken the disease, but they know how to take the proper precautions.

"There is no reason why the children of lepers need have the same disease. All that is necessary is to separate them from their parents when they are young.

"There is no real cure for the disease. However, there is a new remedy that may prove to be success, but it has not been given a thorough test as yet. Several people seem to have gotten well but you cannot tell for several years, as the disease may lay dormant for some time and then come out again."

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

LIONS, BADGERS; DINGOES, FERRETS, CRANES FOR ZOO

Whole Menageria Arrived Safe and Sound From Dublin Gardens--Provided Entertainment for Whole Steamer on Voyage Over--In Temporary Quarters Now

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Two South African lions, two Australian dingoes, two English and very belligerent badgers, a couple of ferrets and two South African cranes arrived at the Riverdale Zoo this morning none the worse for their long trip across the Atlantic from the Zoological Gardens at Dublin, Ireland, in exchange for some Canadian beavers which Mr. Daniel Lamb, purchased from the Provincial Government and presented to the Toronto Zoo for this purpose.

The animals are in the very best of conditions after their travels, having spent the time on the way just as their various fancies dictated; the badgers, to the edification of the crew and passengers of the C.P.R. liner Montcalm, on which they came over, fighting continually and the lion cubs sleeping peacefully in the sunny side of their cage. A special keeper from the Dublin Zoo came out with them, feeding and tending them all the way. The lion cubs are only six months old, but according to the superintendent of the Riverdale Park, they are remarkably fine animals.

HOW TO LIVE LONG

Frederic Harrison's Golden Rules—People Eat Too Much

Five golden rules of health were given recently by Mr. Frederic Harrison, author, critic, bibliophile, ex-professor, barrister, historian, traveller, and amateur gardener, on his eighty-first birthday, celebrated at his home at Hawkhurst, Kent:

(1) Abstain from tobacco, spirits, made dishes, and all such dreadful things. I am satisfied with a little bit of mutton and rice pudding.

(2) Rise from a meal with an appetite. I believe people eat too much.

(3) Walk every day for two hours. This I am going to do as soon as I get through a pile of letters and telegrams from Florence and Rome. I am too old to play at tennis, and golf is too slow.

(4) Sleep eight hours. People cannot sleep who smoke themselves black in the face, eat too much, and have not walked enough.

(5) More important than all—be content with what you have got. Take things quietly.

Beautiful Hands

An excellent lotion for whitening and softening the hands is made of equal parts of pure olive oil and glycerine, beaten together and perfumed with oil of violets. Where glycerine is objected to, a paste made of 2 oz. of sweet almonds may be used instead of the lotion. Place the ingredients in a jar in a saucepan of boiling water, and let them melt together. Stir until well mixed and when cold put the paste and apply it as often as necessary to the hands or smear it inside the sleeping gloves.

MEAT ON THE FARM

More Important That Animals be Healthy Than Extremely Fat

There are a few essential points that should be observed in selecting animals to butcher on the farm. The first consideration should be given to the matter of health in the animals to be used for food. No matter how fat an animal may be nor how perfect its form, if it is not in perfect health the best quality of meat cannot be obtained. If the animal is suffering from fever or from any serious derangement of the system the flesh will not be wholesome food. Flesh from animals that have been ill before slaughter is not likely to cure well, and is very difficult to keep after curing. Bruises, broken limbs or like accidents all have the same effect on meat as illness, and unless the animal can be dressed immediately after such accidents, it is best not to use the meat for food. This would be true especially if there has been a rise in temperature of two or more degrees. Such a rise in temperature just previous to slaughter is likely to result in stringy, gluey meat, and create a tendency to sour in curing. Animals that are in poor flesh will not yield first-class meat. While the texture may not be bad in such meat it is essential that a reasonable amount of fat be present to give juiciness and flavor to the flesh. The presence of large amounts of fat is not essential and, in fact, it is often wasteful. It is far more important that the animal be in good health than that it be extremely fat.—Andrew Boss.

EVERY LITTLE MOVEMENT

In Some Kinds of Business It Has a Cost That's all Its Own

In a large publishing house in Chicago which mails annually millions of circulars, form letters and sample copies the saving of even a single motion in the process of folding, enclosing or addressing means an economy, says a writer in Business, that is well worth thinking about.

When this idea first occurred to an officer of the company he devoted several weeks to a careful and analytical study of the work of the mailing department. The girls who folded and sealed the letters had formerly been allowed to arrange their work to suit themselves. A very little observation of their methods showed that there was much room for improvement.

Experiments were made to determine, in just what order each movement should be made in folding the letter and enclosure, picking them up and inserting them in the envelope. Crude as the first attempt [illegible] was, it immediately increased the output of a girl. Further study revealed ways not only of eliminating many motions but of shortening the distance traveled by the hands in the motions that remained.

Finally a plan was devised for arranging and handling the envelopes and their enclosures so that each hand at the completion of one motion, was in the proper position to begin immediately the next motion. The final motion—that of throwing the filled envelope upon a pile—was entirely eliminated by placing a large basket upon the floor directly under the point where the enclosures were inserted in the envelope.

When the enclosures were once inside the girl simply let go of the envelope and it fell into the basket, gravity doing the work formerly done by the girl. After the girls had been taught the new methods of filling envelopes, their output was nearly four times as great as it had been when they were doing their work haphazard in any way that happened to occur to them.

Fashion in China

The Chinese have always had a "philosophy of clothes;" their garments are symbols. Consequently, if a Chinaman is a revolutionist, and wishes to express his frankest criticism of the old regime and to indicate that he is open as day to all the influences of the west, he cuts off his queue, steps into a little tailor's shop and orders a straw hat, a celluloid collar and a pair of cuffs, colored socks, a safety razor and a pair of American boots. These modes of Europe are China's "dernier cri." So much so that the "tailors' shops producing crude semi-foreign apparel," which here (according to the British consular reports) "spring up in almost every important street," are inundated with orders to supply "outward manifestations of a progressive spirit," and the local agents of British sewing machines are not able to supply fast enough the machines required to keep pace with the demand.

STEAMER BREAKS OUT OF LOCK. RUNS AMUCK IN WELLAND CANAL

Dives Through Gate Into Lower Level and Then Crashes Into Stone Pier to Avoid a Collision

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 4.—One of the most peculiar accidents in the history of the Welland Canal occurred about 2.30 Saturday afternoon, when the steel steamer Lehigh, took a dive from the level of lock 23 to that of lock 22, a distance of 14 feet. The Lehigh, loaded with coal from Loraine for Montreal, was entering lock 23 at an unusually high speed, and before the efforts to check her were of any avail she crashed into the two foot gates, smashing the top of each gate about half-way down.

The force of water in the level behind her then carried the steamer over the lower half of the gates and into the level fourteen feet below, bow first. As she took the plunge her bow was submerged for some time, and she shipped considerable water. As she rose the force of water caught her again and swept her full speed down the level below towards lock 22, from which the steamer Fairmount, was just emerging. The captain of the Lehigh in order to avoid a collision with the Fairmount, ran his steamer into the stone abutment of lock 22 and stove a large hole in her bow below the water line.

The Lehigh began to fill and sink, but the pumps were set to work, along with a pump loaned by the canal officials, and with these they have been able to keep the steamer afloat. One of the buckets of her wheel was knocked off in the plunge over the lock gates and she was otherwise damaged. She is owned by the Anchor Line of Buffalo. She is too heavily laden to get into the dock at Port Dalhousie, and an effort will be made to patch her up and get her either to the dock at Kingston, or Montreal.

Repairs were made to the lock, two new gates being set in, and navigation was resumed at 8.30 Sunday morning.

TORONTO BOY MET DEATH IN BAY WHEN HIS CANOE OVERTURNED

Accident Occured at Hanlan's Point, In View of Many Spectators--Italian Lad Drowned

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Clarence J. Grant, of 25 Balmoral avenue, was drowned yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock, when he and a companion upset in a canoe near Eddie Durnan's boathouse at Hanlan's Point. The young fellows were paddling leisurely along, when the wash from a motor launch threw them into the water. Grant was unable to swim, and sank instantly. His friend grasped the canoe and held on for an instant, then struck out for shore. He was a very weak swimmer, and some people on the dock pulled him out in a very exhausted condition.

Owing to the rain and wind, the water was very murky, and it was 25 minutes before the police located the body of Grant. In the meantime the life-savers were summoned, and they were ready with the pulmotor, but although they worked for over an hour, there was no sign of life.

The boys hired the canoe from Mr. Durnan, and had been but a few moments on the water when the accident happened. Several persons witnessed the accident, but were powerless to render assistance. An inquest will not be held.

Tony Walce, a 15-year-old Italian lad, living at 140 William street, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the bay, near the foot of Simcoe street.

With a number of other lads he was bathing and walked out farther than he should have. His companions were unable to rescue him but ran for help. In about an hour's time the body was recovered by Mait Aykroyd, and taken to the Morgue.

BOWLERS HOLD BIG TOURNAMENT

Local Bowlers in Successful Event and Officers Elected

The annual bowling tournament of the Central Ontario Bowling Association took place yesterday on the fine lawns of the local bowling club. The grounds were decorated with flags and a large tent erected on the tennis courts adjoining gave the place a very attractive appearance. There were a very large number of clubs from the district present. The bowling began shortly after 9 o'clock and was continued during the afternoon and evening.

Mr. J. H. Renwick, the Association's efficient secretary, was chief promotor of the tournament, and to his labor is largely due the great success of the meeting.

The winners in the morning games were.

TRAMPS ARRESTED, WITH CHILDREN, IN SMITH

Yesterday afternoon His Honor Judge Edmison, County Magistrate, held court. It seems that the good folks of Smith had been annoyed by a man, Martin Orton, who came here from Oshawa with his wife and three children, had been camping out on the roadway. Constable Archie Moore went out and arrested Orton. He was tried on a charge of vagrancy and remanded until to-morrow, to allow enquiries to be made. Mr. Goodwill took charge of the children and sent them to the Shelter. Mrs. Orton, who is in a delicate condition went to the shelter, and was allowed to stay there to look after her children.

SAD DROWNING AT FENELON FALLS

Young Man Loses His Life While Bathing

Special to The Times.

Fenelon Falls, Aug. 4.—Yesterday morning there was a very sad drowning accident here, by which a young man named Daniel Doherty, about 21 years of age, lost his life. It appears that the deceased and a companion named Thomas Littleton, accompanied by a younger brother of the latter, went out in a canoe. They landed on a pier in Cameron's Lake, opposite the new saw mill and went in bathing. After staying in the water some time, they sat on the pier for about half an hour and decided to go in again. It is presumed they got chilled while on the pier. At all events while swimming to the next pier nearer shore Doherty said to Littleton who was ahead. "You had better come back to me, Tom; I don't think I can make it."

Littleton grabbed him just as he went down, but he took him down with him. When they came to the surface again the younger lad arrived with the canoe and he grabbed Doherty, but he pulled him out of the canoe, upsetting it and also took him down. When they rose again Tom has somewhat recovered, and Doherty again caught him and once again they disappeared. When the latter did not rise. The other two managed to make the shore in an exhausted condition.

The alarm was given and Alex. McFee hurried to the spot, dove down, and got Doherty in about 10 feet of water. Four doctors who were speedily summoned, worked over the deceased for about two hours, but without avail.

Doherty's father met an accidental death eight or nine years ago. and the young man was the chief support of his mother and a young sister, for whom great sympathy is felt.

NEW WEST WARD SCHOOL VISITED

Fine New Building is Now Almost Completed

Out in the western part of the city is rapidly approaching completion of the West Ward School. The site of this school has been admirably chosen both for hygenic and moral purposes. The school is surrounded by acres of woodland and rolling hills. As one stands at one of the modern windows. that let light plentifully into this grand building, one can hear the merry tinkle of the cow bell. Pupils attending this school will be segregated from the temptations of city life.

A Times reporter yesterday went out to see the school, which will be completed by Sept. 1st. Our scribe entered by the basement. This is furnished with concrete floors. Here are big rooms for Domestic Science, Manual Training, Kindergarten, etc., all well lighted and splendidly planned. In the basement are lavatories for boys and girls, separated by the boiler room.

It might be mentioned incidentally that a modern ventilation system, supplied by electrically driven fans supplies fresh air to the building. Above the basement all the floors are of splendidly blended maple. Between the rough lower floor, and its top layer is a thickness of Neposit flooring felt to deaden sound. The doorframes are of handsome Norway pine lumber and present a most attractive appearance. The stairways throughout the building are wide and the steps are easy to scale. There are 12 fine class rooms on the upper floors that will provide accommodation for children many years from now in that part of the city. There are also rooms for the teachers and handy cloak rooms. The halls are wide and airy. The lighting system is the last word in such provision. Mr. W. Langford, the contractor yesterday assured our reporter that the whole building will be completed by Sept. 1st. The upper floor is now finished. Mr. Langford has certainly turned out a well finished and conscientiously completed job.

BASEBALL

At Guelph yesterday before large crowds of fans, both morning and afternoon, when two games were pulled off, the Petes lost the first by the score of 4—1. The second game the Petes went after Berlin in the right way and laid it to them by the score of 6—0.

Stan. Cresswell opened the pitching for the Petes in the first game and Berlin hit him for several runs. The balance of the game was air tight. The second game speaks for itself—6 to 0, with Tracey in the box.

MR. MOORE CRITIZES OUR REPORT--ANSWERED

Mr. W. H. Moore, Water Commissioner, called at The Times yesterday and pointed out that we were in error in stating that the city was entirely without fire protection last Saturday. Mr. Moore is right in one sense, as the steam fire engine was available and "chemicals" were in possession of the brigade. What The Times had reference to, as every one knows, was the break down of the water works. A steam engine would be of little service except in localities near the Little Lake, the river or the creek.

In the olden days, before our water works was installed, tanks were located at street corners, in close proximity, to furnish water for the engine; but when the water works was organized these tanks were filled in. Hence the steam engine would not be of much service in case of conflagration in many parts of the city.

MRS. AMY D. WINSHIP

This remarkable old lady is believed to be the oldest "college girl" on record. She is 82 years old and for the past three years has been a student at the University of Wisconsin. She likes college life and declares she will continue to study at the University till she is ninety. In the meantime she hopes to take several degrees. Mrs. Winship has been a believer in votes for women for 65 years.

TO CURE LEAD POISONING CASES

Discovery Made in St. Louis Which Promises to Rob Bichloride of Mercury of Its Terrors

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—A discovery of great importance, promising to rob bichloride of mercury of its terror, has been made in St. Louis following recent suicides and accidental deaths due to this poison, and the almost total helplessness of physicians. Also the way has been paved forthe curing of 60,000 men who each year in the United States are poisoned by lead.

Dr. Frank L. Horse, of this city assisted by G.O. Wilhite, has found that the action of bichloride of mercury can be arrested after its quick assimilation by the body; that the poison probably can be dissembled and then eliminated, probably in a different form.

Starting on the theory opposite that of cataphoresis, in which galvanic electricity drives metal chemicals, such as arsenic, in the way cancer is treated, through the flesh from a positive to a negative pole, an attempt was made to force out the mercury in the same way that electro-plating is done.

A cat was obtained, its back shaven and bichloride of mercury forced into its stomach. One and one-half grains were given at a time, 24 hours apart, until three grains were in its system. This is estimated to be equal to fifty grains in a human being, while ten grains inevitably kills. The cat was fed with milk three or four times a day. A bath was arranged and the cat put on a copper platin the bottom of the tub and an electrode placed on its back. Six dry cells were used.

500 PERSONS LOCKED UP

Karlsruhe, Aug. 4.—A conductor of a train going from Heidelberg to Mannheim was arrested charged with keeping over 500 people prisoners at the Mannheim station against their protest.

He would not let them disembark "until her royal highness, the grand duchess, who was on the train, had driven off in her coach."

COUNCIL PASSES BYLAW RESTRICTING WEST CITY

To Residential Buildings Only--Area Affected is East of Park St. to Boundary, and Between Weller and King Streets

The City Fathers met in regular monthly session last night, Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also in attendance Aldermen McIntyre, Anderson, Johnston, G. Walter Green, Gillespie, Gordon, Wm Langford, Jr., Geo. Duncan and Duffus.

Ald. Gordon resigned from the Board of Works so that he could devote more time to committee work on Hydro-Electric affairs.

Ald. Gordon's resignation was accepted and Ald. Gillespie appointed to succeed him on the board of Works.

Re the question of supplying power to the Vermont Marble Co., the Peterborough Light & Power Co. enquired if they extended their pole line to this company's plant, for the supply of power at once, the city would on assuming the power system of this city reimburse the Peterborough Light & Power Co. for the expense of such extension—about $400. Referred to the Power Committee with power to act.

A number of communications were referred to their respective committees for action.

THE BUILDING RESTRICTION BY-LAW.

Mr. Hetherington handed in a petition, signed by 97 per cent. of property owners affected, praying that council pass the proposed by-law prohibiting the erection of business houses within an area between Park street and the Monaghan roadf and Weller and King streets.

Mr. Pope opposed the by-law as an unfair measure depriving citizens of vested rights in their own property.

Subsequently the by-law in question was introduced by Ald. Gordon, who advised that the wishes of the majority in respect of this question should rule, and that majority is 97 per cent. of the property owners within the given area.

Ald Green took exception to the measure on the ground that the council had any right to restrict this property. The time to restrict property he urged is when it is originally sold.

Ald. Duncan, who was in the chair at this juncture (the second reading), agreed with Ald. Green and contended that if Mr. Braund were to go ahead and build his store council could not stop him.

Ald. Johnston did not object to a decent looking store being erected in the area in question or in any other section of the city. But he would oppose Mr. Braund erecting a store out to the street line at the corner of Charlotte and St. Joseph streets, as he originally intended.

His worship spoke strongly in favor of the by-law and urged that as 97 per cent. of the property owners in the locality in question had petitioned to have their property protected from business encroachments the council would be justified in passing the restrictive by-law.

Mr. Pope here stated that he was not alone interested in his opposition to the by-law, and were it passed a corporation would institute proceedings against the city.

The by-law was here carried on the following division.

NAYS—Ald. Duncan, Green, Johnston.
AYES—Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus, Langford, Anderson, McIntyre and the Mayor.

In regard to the foregoing Ald Gordon explained that the residents petitioning for the by-law had raised the cash with which to purchase the residence at the corner of Charlotte and St. Joseph streets, acquired by Mr. Braund for the purpose of annexing a store thereto. This was satisfactory to Mr. Braund, who had expressed himself as willing to waive all opposition to the by-law were the property purchased from him at the price he had paid for it. As soon as the by-law is passed Mr Braund will be satisfied in this respect.

WILL BUY INCINERATOR.

The Property Committee's recommendation that a 20-ton Incinerator be erected was adopted. This incinerator will be built in the very near future.

TO PURCHASE A HORSE.

On motion of Ald. Gillespie, the Fire, Water and Light Committee was authorized to purchase a horse for the fire department.

NO ADVERTISING AT PRESENT.

Council threw down the Manufacturers' Committee's recommendation that a new sign advertising Peterborough be erected on the island near the C.P.R. bridge at a cost of $97. The report was sent back to committee to enquire into a better means for advertising this city than the one recommended in the report.

BOARD OF WORKS REPORT.

The report of the Board of Works recommending permanent improvements, etc., was adopted. On pressure from the East City representatives, Aldermen McIntyre and Anderson, the construction of sidewalks on Woodbine avenue, Clifford street and south side of Carlisle street, was added to the Board of Works' list of work for this season.

PETER HAMILTON SIDING.

Ald. Johnston, Langford and Duncan strongly opposed the by-law to allow a C.P.R. siding running up Water street to the Peter Hamilton Company's factory.

Ald. Gordon advanced that it is the life of this city to get new factories and encourage old ones. The Peter Hamilton is an old established industry in this city and entitled to a siding as well as other concerns.

The by-law carried on the following division:

NAYS—Aldermen Duncan, Johnston, Langford, and the Mayor.
YEAS—Aldermen Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus, Green, Anderson and McIntyre.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Gordon,—That a by-law be prepared to allow the C.P.R. to cross King street to J. J. Turner & Sons factory—Carried.

Ald. Duncan moved the foregoing on the principle that fish should not be made of one and fowl of another; and the Turners had petitioned for this siding into their premises. That is to say that the siding provided for the Peter Hamilton Co. be continued across King to Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons' property.

TO RETAIN COUNSEL.

On motion of Ald. Gordon the Power Committee and the City Solicitor were authorized to retain what counsel and expert witnesses are necessary in connection with the arbitration proceedings re expropriating the Peterborough Light & Power Company's plant; to engage an official stenographer, and models if necessary; and to take whatever other steps are necessary in connection with the same.

DOWNIE STREET CREEK.

It appears that the diversion of this creek is now held up by reason of the properties to be conveyed to the city for this purpose being all mortgaged, and no steps as yet taken to secure the discharge of these mortgages, or to provide any protection to the city, if council purchases from the owners the land needed for this diversion.

Council here adjourned.

PORTUGAL IS RIPE FOR A NEW REVOLT

Paris, Aug. 4.—Dispatches from Portugal received by way of the Spanish frontier to-day indicate that great revolutionary activity prevails in Portugal. It is reported that a vast movement, planned in Lisbon and Oporto, may break out at any moment. From the same source it is learned that serious street fighting occurred last night in various places.

The censor in Lisbon refused to allow the cabling of an Associated Press dispatch which stated that a band of revolutionaries had attempted to rush the barracks of the 16th Infantry regiment in order to rescue political prisoners there. The civilians were repulsed by the troops after an exchange of shots with the guards.

THE "BLUES"

A Lady Finds Health from Simple Food

Civilization brings blessings and also responsibilities.

The more highly organized we become the more need there is for regularity and natural simplicity in the food we eat.

The laws of body nutrition should be carefully obeyed, and the finer more highly developed brain and nervous system not hampered by a complicated, unwholesome dietary.

A lady of high nervous tensions says:

"For fifteen years I was a sufferer from dyspepsia. I confess that an improperly regulated diet was the chief cause of my suffering. Finally, nothing that I ate seemed to agree with my stomach, and life, at times, did not seem worth living.

"I began to take a pessimistic view of everything and see life through dark blue glass, so to speak. My head became affected with a heavy creeping sensation and I feared paralysis.

"Palpitation of the heart caused me to fear that I might die suddenly. Two years ago, hearing Grape-Nuts so highly spoken of by some estimable friends of mine, I determined to try it.

"The change in my condition was little less than miraculous. In a short time the palpitation, bad feeling in head and body began to distinued until at the present time I appear and the improvement has confind myself in better health than I have ever enjoyed.

"My weight has increased 20 lbs. in the last year and life looks bright and sunny to me as it did when I was a child."

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 50c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 25c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaprilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 185 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

HOW TO REST

Are you weary? Breathe more; eat less. Active exercise will not rest you from mental work.

"When you are tired with mental work," says a well known physician, "do not think you must take active exercise. That will make you more weary. All you need is rest and more air in your lungs. Sit down quietly and comfortably and breathe deeply twenty-five times. Rest a moment and repeat.

"This air forced into the body removes the waste material which makes you weary.

"Don't eat all you want.

"Food not needed for support of the system is so much extra work for the body and requires more air to dispose of it.

"This regimen will diminish your grocery bill and save your shoe leather."

To Clean Bottles

The usual method of cleaning the inside of a bottle is to put some sand or nails in it, partly fill it with water and shake well. A much better way is to take an old key chain and attach it to the cork of the bottle with a small screw eye and put in some water and shake. The chain should be long enough to hang straight down from the center to the bottom of the bottle and reach the side. A chain attached to a screw eye can be kept near the kitchen sink for washing the milk bottles every morning.

Bulldog Assists in Theft

Found guilty at Dublin of stealing eighteen shirts, the property of Peter Lennox, John Duggan, a convict on parole, was sentenced to twelve months with hard labor, James Hemming to ten months, and Bridget Fottrell to six months. The trio, it was stated, entered the shop, and while the men were examining some goods the woman made off with the shirts. In the chase after her, one of the men, who had a bulldog on a chain contrived always to have the dog in the way of those who were trying to capture her.

CONSTITUTIONAL BLOOD DISEASE.

Patient No. 16474. "The spots are all gone from my legs and arms and I feel good now. I am very grateful to you and shall never forget the favor your medicines have done for me. You can use my name in recommending it to any sufferer. I am going to get married soon. Thanking you once more, etc."

SAYS TWO MONTHS CURED HIM.

Patient No. 16763. Age 23. Single. Indulged in immoral habits 4 years. Deposit in urine and drains at night. Varicose Veins on both sides, pains in back, weak sexually. He writes:—"I received your letter of recent date and in reply I am pleased to say that after taking two months' treatment I would consider myself completely cured, as I have seen no signs of them coming back (one year).

THE WORLD SEEMS DIFFERENT.

Patient No. 15922. "I have not had a regular Emission I don't know when and am feeling fine. The world seems altogether different to me and I thank God for directing me to you. You have been an honest doctor with me."

VARICOSE VEINS CURED.

Case No. 16828. Symptoms when he started treatment:—Age 21, single, indulged in immoral habits several years. Varicose Veins on both sides—pimples on the face, etc. After two months' treatment he writes as follows:—"Your welcome letter to hand and am very glad to say that I think myself cured. My Varicose Veins have completely disappeared for quite a while and it seems a cure. I work harder and feel less tired. I have no desire for that habit whatever and if I stay like this, which I have every reason to believe I will. Thanking you for your kind attention," etc.

GAINED 14 POUNDS IN ONE MONTH.

Patient No. 12822. This patient (aged 53) had a chronic case of Nervous Debility and Sexual Weakness and was run down in vigor and vitality. After one month's treatment he reports as follows:—"I am feeling very well. I have gained 14 pounds in one month, so that I will have to congratulate you." Later report:—"I am beginning to feel more like a man. I feel my condition is getting better every week." His last report:—"Dear Doctors—As I feel this is the last month's treatment that I will have to get, I thought at one time I would never be cured but I put confidence in you from the start and you have cured me."

When Using a Ladder

It is often desirable to have a ladder propped away from the wall or surface on which work is being done. This is very difficult to do with a ladder alone, but it is not so hard if a pair of props are made as shown in the sketch and attached to the rungs of the ladder in the proper place.

These props may be made long enough to hold the ladder up from the ground and there may be a second pair made which can be used to force the ladder out from the wall surface. Any blacksmith can make them.

CHAIR AND SWING

Hangs on Back of Ordinary Dining-Room Chair

Two West Virginia men have invented a combination chair and swing, which, in addition to its latter use, provides a high chair for the baby by merely hanging it on the back of an ordinary dining-room or kitchen chair. The seat of the small chair is pivoted to the back and sides are pivoted to the seat, so the whole can be folded up flat. Chains run from the outward corners of the seat to the top of the back and hold the former up. Hooks at the top hook over the back of the larger chair. A table is removably fastened on the arms of the baby's chair and answers the double purpose of providing a place for baby's tray and holding the arms in upright position. This same seat can be used as the seat of a swing by attaching it to chains suspended from ceiling or porch roof.

CANADA WILL DO HER DUTY.

New Zealand's newly completed battle cruiser has visited Canada's shores. She came only as the harbinger of glad tidings from a sister Dominion, and not to chide us for our own apathy. And yet, who can dwell upon the significance of the visit without feeling keenly conscious of Canada's utter failure to take part in either the defense of its own coasts or of the British empire?

A few weeks ago Canada celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of her existence as a nation; forty-six years in which the burden of our defense was borne by the motherland. Through our infancy, when we were unable to help ourselves, the burden was unselfishly carried. In the last decade, while we have enjoyed a prosperous development that almost surpasses comprehension, the motherland has rightly looked to us to help ourselves. And what is the sum total of what we have done? Absolutely nothing! And if Liberalism has its way what will we do toward lightening the empire's burdens of defense in the next decade? Absolutely nothing!

But Laurierism will not prevail. The self-respect of Canadians demands that Canada do her duty, and she will.

THE UNITED STATES TARIFF

If the Underwood Tariff Bill becomes law it is estimated that customs receipts of the United States will drop to $260,000,000 a year, which is approximately $100,000,000 less than the customs receipts of the United Kingdom. On a per capita basis the United States will collect less in import duties than Great Britain. Of coutse, the slump in this respect will have to be offset. Inland revenue, which includes the income tax, is to become the medium, for the revenue from this source will perhaps produce over 60 per cent of the total income of the country. Excise taxes upon liquor and tobacco will provide practically one-third of the total revenue. These facts make it apparent that the United States no longer has to rely upon customs tariff for its federal needs. It is fast approaching the stage where a purely scientific tariff is possible.

In Canada conditions are different. For several years we must depend largely upon customs tariffs for the support of our government as well as for the protection of industry. Yet under present conditions the tariff is far from perfect. It must not remain a shield pf special privilege. We trust that Mr. Borden will give his attention to anomalous features of it that place a heavy tax upon the development of the country.

Strengthens the Throat Assists Public Speakers

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

THAT WATER FAMINE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I read with much interest article on the water famine of last Saturday, which placed Peterborough in such grave danger from fire. I quite agree with you, Mr. Editor, that a second pipe should be laid from the water works pumping station to the nearest place of distribution. Whilst our citizens may have voted thousands to bonus factories, Saturday's peril should make them awake to the fact that charity begins at home, and that the man paying 25 mills on a comparatively high assessment should get some protection.

GIVE SOME DETAILS OF ROYAL TRAGEDY

Countess Marie Recalls the Tragedy of 1889 When Heir and Baroness Were Found Dead

Countess Marie Larisch, niece of the late Empress of Austria, made public what purports to be the true story of the mystery surrounding the death of Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria. Since 1889, when the bodies of the heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary and Baroness Mary Vetsera were found in the royal hunting lodge at Meyerling, there has been no official explanation of the double tragedy. "The accidental shooting of the Crown Prince when on a hunting expedition" is the way the court circular referred to the tragedy, while there was no inkling whatever that the death of the young Baroness had occurred at the same place or at the same time.

The Countess says, in effect, that the Crown Prince killed his sweetheart and then took his own life because he feared that a plot in which he was engaged was about to be discovered, and that he would be court martialed and shot. That plot, according to the Countess, was a conspiracy on the part of Rudolph, the Archduke John of Tuscany and some others to disrupt the Austro-Hungarian Empire by making Rudolph King of Hungary.

Blames the Baroness

The Countess says that although the Crown Prince was a dissolute man whose conduct had cost him the love of father, mother and wife, he was not primarily to blame for the affair with the Baroness. The girl fell in love with him before he had ever noticed her, and wrote him a letter begging him to meet her. The Countess appears to have assisted to arrange some of the stolen interviews that followed, though she protests that she only shielded the girl. But soon gossip connected their names. The indiscretion of the young Baroness went the length of publicly insulting the Crown Princess Stephanie, and it seemed probable that she would be dismissed from the court.

A Ghastly Ride

It was in this crisis of their affairs that Rudolph took her with him on a hunting expedition to Meyerling. One morning when they did not appear at the usual hour, Count Hoyos the attendant of the Prince, broke open the door and found both dead, a small revolver in the hand of Rudolph. Calling in another servant whom he could trust, the Count removed the body of the girl to another room. Then he had both doors locked and guarded while he hurried to Vienna with the news of the tragedy. It was announced that the Crown Prince had been injured, and after a noted doctor had been hurried to the scene the death was announced. In the meantime, the family of the Baroness Vetsera were communicated with. Two uncles went down to Meyerling to bring the body home. The police insisted that the girl should be dressed, and that the body should be held upright between the two uncles on the seat while they drove in a carriage from the hunting lodge. A few miles away, the carriage turned into the gates of a monastery, and here the body was hurriedly buried, neither the father nor mother being allowed to be present and everyone who knew anything of the scandal being sworn to secrecy.

GALLOPING HORSE TOY

Beast's Legs and Head and Jockey's Body Move

An amusing toy in the form of a galloping horse has been designed by a Kentucky man. It is particularly appropriate these days when mechanical toys are absorbing the youth of the land. The body of the horse is fixed to a standard rising from the base, but the forelegs and hindlegs are pivoted to the body and at their middle joints. The tail and neck are also pivoted to the body and the body of the jockey is pivoted at the hips. The horse's feet are fastened to swinging shafts that operate in the base by means of a rotatable gear. As one shaft is pushed forward the other comes backward, each carrying with it a foreleg and hindleg on the same side of the animal. The gear is operated by means of a crank and the faster the crank is turned the faster the horse trots, bobbing his head and waving his tail, while the jockey seems to urge him.

SHIP'S CREW OF WOMEN

There sailed from Boston recently the schooner Hiram, which is commanded and chiefly worked by women. The vessel, which is 100 years old, is commanded by Mrs. George Orne, and the only man on board is her husband, who signed as first mate under his wife, the rest of the crew being women.

Mrs. Orne is not a suffragette, but she has owned and commanded the Hiram for some years. She is a good navigator and a daring and excellent sailor. Having had trouble with her crew of men, she determined to replace them with women, and the ancient schooner manned by women, sailed for the coast of Maine to pick up a cargo of timber for New York.

Mrs. Orne at the wheel gives her orders as sharply and accurately as any man could, while her female crew smartly executes them.

PRESCRIBED DRESS OF BRIDE

Color of Costume Worn Has Had Its Significance From the Most Ancient Times.

Until the eighteenth century, from earliest Saxon times, the bride of the poorer folk came to the wedding wearing a plain white robe. This was a warning to the public that, since she brought nothing to the marriage, her husband was not responsible for her debts. At the beginning of the eighteenth century brides began to introduce touches of color into their costumes. Blue was for constancy and green for youth. Yellow was never worn, as it stood for jealousy, while golden also was shunned, as it meant avarice.

Although the ancient Roman and Hebrew brides wore yellow veils and the early Christians of southern Europe enveloped both man and wife in one large cloth, it was not until Shakespeare's time that veils for brides appeared in England. Prior to that time the custom had been for the bride to go to her wedding with her hair hanging loose as a sign of freedom. Immediately, however, upon entering her new home she bound up her hair. This was a sign of submission.

BASEBALL.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The pace set by Joe Jackson proved too swift for Ty Cobb this week, and the Detroit slugger fell behind in the American League batting averages. Jackson pounded his percentage up to .408, but Cobb dropped to .396. The Cleveland man has played in 93 games, while Cobb has been in only 69. Dan Murphy, Philadelphia, is third in the American League with .378. Then comes Speaker, Boston, with .371; Caldwell, New York, .355; Henriksen, Boston, .351; Collins, Philadelphia, .348; McInnes, Philadelphia, .333; Gandil, Washington, .332; and Lajoie, Cleveland, who ranks tenth with .331.

Charles McDonald, Boston, continues to be the real leader in the National, with .371, though Earl Yingling, Brooklyn for 23 games, is hitting .393. Hyatt, Pittsburg is third with .362; R. Miller, Philadelphia fourth with .359, and Daubert, Brooklyn, fifth with .349. Then comes Walsh, Philadelphia, .346; Cravath, Philadelphia, .341; W. Collins, Boston, .333; Zimmerman, Chicago, .318; and Hess, Boston, .317.

Cincinnati, Aug. 4.—Rube Benton, star pitcher of the Cincinnati Nationals, probably was fatally hurt early when his motorcycle collided with a trolley car in Walnut Hills. At the hospital it was said he suffered a broken jaw, concussion of the brain, internal injuries and multiple bruises.

The pitcher has not regained consciousness up to 8 o'clock this morning.

Benton was on his way home when the accident occurred. Some witnesses said he was going at high rate speed, that he lost control of the motorcycle and ran into the car. Others said the car ran into Benton and that the motorman was at fault. The collision was head-on and Benton was hurled to the street with terrific force.

CANOE RACING

St. Johns, Que., Aug. 4f—The annual regatta of the Canadian Association was held here this afternoon at the St. John's Yacht Club, on the Richelieu River. The western division paddlers, including Parkdale, Balmy Beach, Kew Beach, Toronto Island and Gravenhurst, about seventy in all, arrived yesterday afternoon and paddled over the course. The weather was perfect and the course smooth as glass. There was a meeting of the Canadian Canoe Association here this morning and delegates were present from every club, with the exception of Winnipeg, Cartierville and Britannia crews were given permission to paddle in the one-mile war canoe event, although they did not qualify in their divisional regatta. A foul occurred in the qualifying regatta and the referee recommended this course.

The application of White of the Gravenhurst Canoe to paddle in the junior singles was refused. In the divisional regatta at Toronto, on July 19, White was swamped a few yards from the finish in the junior singles event when he was in a commanding position; he, however, won the intermediate singles the same day and will compete in that event this afternoon.

TURF.

Hamilton Race Track, August 2.—Get-away day for Hamilton racing for the season brought out a large attendance. The weather was again perfect and the track in excellent shape. The Toronto owner, Robert Davies, withdrew all his horses on account of the trouble over the Plate Glass race of last Wednesday, the outcome of which resulted in the suspension of the stable's jockey, Knapp, until the matter is thoroughly investigated by the Canadian Racing Association. This meant that The Usher, Sky Rocket, Queen Sain, Calgary and Plate Glass, that were entered in the different events, did not start.

New York, Aug. 4.—It is learned that August Belmont has engaged Samuel Hildreth to train his American racing stable. Some time ago Hildreth sold his own string of horses to the late Charles Kohler and went abroad as the latter's stable manager, scoring many successes on the French turf.

PIPES THE INDIANS MADE

A Red Stone Could be Carved When First Dug

I will tell you how the Indians made their pipes and about the materials they used. There is a bright red stone which, when taken from the quarry is so soft that the Indians could carve it with their knives.

They carved the stone while the material was soft. Once placed in the air the stone became hard and brittle. Later the Indians found a black stone which was soft enough for carving. This, too, they used in making pipes. And this stone could be polished like marble.

Stems for the pipes were made of wood. Some stems were round, others were flat; some were ornamented with porcupine quills and others with bird feathers or tufts of horse hair. Some of the pipes were used for everyday smoking. Others only when the tribe prayed to the Great Spirit.—Major Newell.

FIREPROOF CLOTH FOR CLOTHING

English Chemist Can Make Flannelette and Other Light Materials Absolutely Inflammable

At last a cheap process for making cloth absolutely fireproof has been discovered. There have been lots of fireproof materials brought out that could be used for many of the purposes for which ordinary cloth is used, but this is the first time that there has been any definite steps taken toward producing a cloth that is cheap enough for ordinary uses. And it is also the first time there has ever been devised a process that would fireproof ordinary cotton cloth in a way that enabled the cloth to be washed or laundered.

The new process is the work of an English chemist and his claims are based upon the fact that the fireproofing of any material desired, and especially of cotton cloth, will not increase the cost of production more than a fraction of a cent.

Heretofore the cotton cloths that have been fireproofed have taken on a hard and unyielding texture that made them almost impossible for the ordinary uses of such materials. It is well known that the cotton flannel material which women use throughout the world for making wrappers and night clothing, is highly inflammable and that a number of tragedies have been caused by its being worn. Despite this disadvantage the cloth is used because it is soft and gives good wear. The discovery of a process for rendering such material fireproof, therefore, is deserving of more than ordinary mention.

The process through which fireproofing is obtained is described as being extremely simple. The cloth is soaked in a solution of sodium stannate. This is a combination of soda and the acid of tin. The cloth is thoroughly dried and is then placed in a vessel containing sulphate of ammonium and subjected to heat. This being accomplished the cloth is thoroughly washed. When dried once more it is ready for use. The fibers of which the cloth is composed become impregnated with a tinny substance which forms a practical protection against fire and yet does not in any way destroy the fine texture of the cloth.

The uses to which the fireproof material can be put are practically unlimited, its inventor claims. It can be used for lace curtains, for clothing for women, children, firemen and for house furnishings. After it has been properly treated the cloth absolutely refuses to burn, no matter how long a time it might be held in direct contact with a flame. Woolen goods can be fireproofed as well as cotton.

Brush thoroughly with a dry whisk sponge lightly with distilled water, to which a few drops of ammonia have been added.

Washing Black Stockings

Although black stockings are mostly stated to be "fast dye," unless you pay a good price for them the color is apt to run when they are washed. Dissolve a handful of salt in a basin of warm water and soak the hose in it for an hour or so before washing them for the first time. This will prevent the "greyness."

To Make Rice Starch

Rice starch is generally used for cold water starch employed for collars cuffs, or kindred articles requiring much stiffening. Mix two ounces of rice starch with three-quarters of a pint of cold water to a smooth paste. Leave overnight, or, if possible, for a day or two, because the longer it soaks the better the starch will be. When required for use dissolve half a teaspoonful of borax in a few drops of boiling water. Mix the starch well; add a teaspoonful of turpentine and the dissolved borax. This should keep well if covered over.

WHAT BOYS REMARKED IN WRITING OF GIRLS

Some of the Lads Were Merciless in Their Comments—Others Were Very Observant

An illuminating idea struck the head master of the London County Council School in Stepney, who arranged that the boys attending the school should write essays on the subject of "Girls." No coaching was given to the boys, who where told to sit down and write what they thought about girls. Some of the results follow:

A distinguishing feature among girls and young women especially is their love of finery in dress, and it is sometimes whispered about that some young ladies powder their countenance just—in using some slang—to swank.—Morris Green.

A girl is never satisfied with her clothes or her home, especially when her father is not well off. . . .

A girl has many advantages, as well as disadvantages. She is more tidy than a boy, and her clothes are seldom torn. Girls do not like fighting, but their only way of having revenge is by tale-telling, which is a very unsportsmanlike method.

When their faults are corrected by soberer people than themselves, they think they are insulted.—A. Bendersky.

There is the proper spirit of chivalry about Charles Edgell, who writes:

"Boys should always take care of girls and see that no harm befalls them, and if another boy is hitting a girl it is his duty to help her."

"Girls are supposed," says A. Markofski, "to be more tender than boys; therefore they are treated gentler by males. They are also more trusting and they can also be trusted in most cases."

An observant lad with an incipient sense of humor is B. Smith, who writes:

"Girls are not all alike. Some are very clever and some very silly. Most girls are very funny. They like to fancy themselves very much. They get their own way too much, yet boys are useful. . . .

"Not many girls are satisfactory. They worry the life out of their mothers and fathers for clothes and such things. . . .

"A girl, if she wants a thing just to the minute and cannot get it, will kick up ructions until she gets it, and sometimes she gets it in a way that she does not like."

J. Herman is just as merciless in his comments on the sex. He writes:

"A girl who has an ugly face is always more conceited than a girl who is nice-looking. . . .

"Nearly all girls wear belts. They pull them as tight as possible, because they want to make a figure, and some of them do cut up some hideous-looking figures."

C. Fox has no illusions about matrimony. His terseness is sadly eloquent: "When girls are of age they marry. Sometimes they are very sorry they have married."

"When a girl goes into a hat shop," writes D. Echott with a cynicism beyond his years, "to buy a hat, which may cost a good deal of money, by the time she steps out of the shop she does not want it because it is out of fashion."

The difference between the two eternal types of womanhood is expressed in a sentence by E. Linder:

"Some girls, whenever they see a tear in their dresses or skirts, throw them into a corner and want new things, while others try to sew it up together."

"Girls' features are more polite than boys'," writes I. Arghebaut. "Their voices are not so nice-sounding as boys', because the sound is tinny and squeaky."

THE IDEAL MAN

Must Not Smoke or Drink, Need Not be Handsome

All the colleges for women in Kansas were canvassed on the question, "What is your description of the ideal man?" This is what the male being should be like in order to meet the requirements of the girl graduates:

Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

Weight, 159 pounds.

Chest, 40 inches expanded, 34 inches contracted.

Waist, 30½ inches.

Must make a good appearance, but need not be handsome.

Must be careful of his personal appearance, but not a dandy.

Must be jolly, accommodating, considerate, and a true sportsman.

Must be a good conversationist, but not a flatterer.

Must revere and respect the aged.

Must show courtesy to men and women.

Must not smoke or drink or be guilty of attendant evils.

Must not sneer at religion or joke lightly of it.

Must not recognize a different standard for men and women.

The physical qualifications were averages taken from the thousands of replies, each girl being asked to submit the measurements of what she considered her ideal man. Some of them liked giants, and some liked little fellows. The unusually tall girls liked short men while the plump girls liked tall, attenuated fellows. The rule of contrasts was followed almost invariably in every case, where the girl who made her choice of an ideal was small or large compared with the average girl.

Mental and moral requirements varied a great deal, too. Some girls put ability to cook ahead of all other standards.

One surprising feature, says the "Telegraph," is that the girls canvassed seemed to prefer men of merely good appearance, "who could put up a good front" to just handsome men.

Bladder and Kidney Troubles

Are caused by poisoning impurities which clog the Kidneys; intense pain is the result and sleepless nights follow. The patient becomes annoyed with sharp pains shooting through the back and up the spine. These pains often so violent and acute that the victim suffers the greatest agony and is driven almost to despair. The refuse and sediment which settled in the Kidneys must be removed in order to procure relief.

SANOL, the Kidney Cure, is the only reliable remedy which has a combined effect of acting on the kidneys, and restoring them to their natural condition, and removing Kidney, Bladder and Gall Stones by dissolving same. It cleanses and purifies the system, strengthens and invigorates the Kidneys, and encourages proper filtration. It relieves the pain and gives strength and energy to the body. Price $1.50 per bottle.

ROBT. C. WALLACE.

Value Steadily Increasing as Shaft Descends

Directors Decide to Construct a Stamp Mill This Fall

When "The Independence" Mine shaft reached the sixty-five foot level, a cutting was taken clear across the vein and the value of this ore is shown on the report assay reproduced above.

This is more than double the average value obtained at the shallower levels and proves conclusively that the vein of gold in this mine is becoming steadily richer as the shaft descends.

The prospects of this mine are now so bright that the Directors have decided to put in a small two-stamp mill this fall, and mill the high-grade ore now being mined. A two-stamped mill will handle from seven to eight tons per day at the cost of mining and milling of $4.00 per ton or a total overhead cost of about $6.00 per ton.

Working ore on the grade of the present sample, the mine will therefore produce at from the rate of $375 to $425 per day, which will more than pay the cost of all further development on this one claim.

Until further notice we continue to offer from the allotment of 100,000 treasury stock, offered to cover cost of development work, shares Par Value $1.00 at 40c.

POOR OF DUBLIN LOVE LADY ABERDEEN

Wife of Former Governor-General of Canada Helps to Make Many Lives Bright

Of the two Ladies Aberdeen, the one of fact and the other of fiction, the former is infinitely the more attractive. It is impossible to encounter the lady of the anecdotes, either in print or in spoken gossip, without conjuring up a mental portrait of the lady of reality. Try to fit her into the distorted picture that is so often thrust before one: it is impossible to reconcile the two.

In the first place, Lady Aberdeen's eyes give the lie (ever so gently!) to the notion that her charities are unwise, that she misunderstands the poor, that she offends the Dublin sense of humor. The only thing she might honestly be accused of offending is Dublin's lack of humor—the lack of humor of the Dublin of officialdom; the only people whom she might with any sort of justice be thought to misunderstand are not the poor, but the rich. In any case, there must surely be a better word than "misunderstanding" for her attitude towards the small group of people who are discontented with the present regime in Dublin. She understands the "smart," the unpleasantly "smart," view of life well enough to be in complete disagreement with it.

The "Extraordinary Smile"

It may be objected that this is rather much to read in any eyes. But Lady Aberdeen's are remarkable. They have "sweetness and light"; they are wise and kind, humorous and penetrating; they are as famous as her smile. "An ordinary woman with an extraordinary smile" was the initial impression of a man who makes history in the United States when he first saw her across the Canadian border. He had gone to Ottawa to observe the formalities of a Governor-General's court, prepared to be amused by its stiffness; but the thing that impressed him most was the angelic good humor of Lady Aberdeen. An English Lord Chief Justice, on the other hand who went expecting to see a much freer and easier state of things than he allowed in his own particular court, found himself reminded ten minutes after his arrival of some minor law of precedence he had neglected to observe. "We're kept in our places here," he growled, and behaved himself for the rest of his visit.

Formality, however, is not the chief characteristic of her court. One of the very few stories, out of a multitude, bearing a real resemblance to her or her ways, purports to come from a Liberal Minister. It is a caricature, but, at any rate, not a libel. The First Lord called at the Castle and rang the bell, but without effect. After ringing again, he peered through the glass panels, at the side of the door, into a deserted interior. Just as he turned to go, he saw Lady Aberdeen, her skirts well tucked up, rush across the hall, as if from one place of concealment to another. A moment after a servant also ran across the Minister's field of vision in the same direction, and faster. The visitor turned to go but just then the door was opened and he was admitted. "I do hope you were not kept waiting," said Lady Aberdeen after greeting him. "You see, this is the Servants' Weekly Games Day, and the household is so excited; everything is at sixes and sevens!"

Her Greatest Friends

One thing quite certain in Dublin is that the poor are fond of her. Even after she has written three volumes on their diseases, and plied them with medicine, they still regard her as their friend. Her own great griefs in life are akin to theirs; the loss of a son, the spoiling of maternal hopes, these are woes common to the Castle and the back street. She says that she has not only given consolation in the slums, but found it there. As for her work on Ireland's crusade against tuberculosis, she knows quite well that a certain section of society would prefer to have less said of the prevalence of the scourge. There is the season to keep in mind, and the prosperity of the city, which might suffer if the notion got abroad that it was a centre of disease. But Lady Aberdeen does not hush up because she is told to. She attacks in Dublin the problems she would attack in London, or any other city where the need and her duty seemed clear to her.

A president of the International Council of Women, of the Irish Industries Association, and of three or four other similar bodies, and a founder of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada, she also started and christened the Onward and Upward Association. And if she is complimented on her charities, she explains that they are all part of a mission to herself—"she has her soul to keep."—London Sketch.

Church Stay-Aways

Speaking at a reunion of Orangemen at Clabby, Ireland, Mr. H. Latimer referred to the indifferent attitude of the Orangemen in that district to their Church duties, and advised them, in that respect, to take a leaf from the book of their Catholic fellow-countrymen.

The Rev. F. Ellary, rector of the parish, said Mr. Latimer had touched a very sore spot with them as Protestants. It was, he said, woefully sad to see the small number of Orangemen who attended the Sunday services.

SOME APPLE RECIPES

Baked Dumplings

Peel and core cooking apples, filling centers with sugar. Roll out biscuit dough rather thin and cut in squares large enough to cover apples. Place an apple in the center of each square; bring up the corners of the dough and fasten by pinching and twisting dough together. Place close together in baking pan. When it is full pour over them a syrup made with one pint of water and one pound of sugar, letting this come half way to the top of the dumplings. Place them in rather a brisk oven and bake about 40 minutes. If you like sprinkle cinnamon over the tops of the apples when they are cooked.

Cup Dumplings

Line baking cups with thin pastry. Fill them up with slices of apple and sugar. Place on each cup a cover of pastry and put all in a large baking pan, pouring boiling water around the cups half way up. Bake in hot oven.

Bacon and Apples

This is a favorite southern dish. Slice bacon thin and fry till crisp. Put on platter and keep hot while you fry thick slices of unpeeled sweet apples in the bacon fat. When these are tender, drain and put in the center of a hot platter. Lay the fried bacon about the edge of the dish. Sprinkle sugar over the apples and serve.

Apple Tart

Mix apple sauce with 2 tablespoons apricot jam or orange and lemon marmalade. Fill a baking dish with it and finish as for apple custard pie, dotting the top with chopped citron or candied cherries. Or a simple meringue may be substituted.

Stewed Apples

Sometimes the only apple available is half ripe and rather insipid. In such a case it is possible to add to the flavor by employing a half cup or more of stoned, sliced dates and adding to each quart of partially stewed apples. Simmer the fruit together for about 6 minutes and set aside to cool. The grated rind of a lemon, or the juice of a lemon placed with the apples when first put on, varies the flavor also.

Apple Pancakes

Make a simple batter as you would for a batter pudding. Then add 2 heaping teaspoons of baking powder for each quart of flour used. Add 2 cups of very fine chopped apple for each quart of flour used. Cook as for ordinary griddle cakes.

Apple Sauce

To make the old-fashioned apple sauce, pare, core and quarter tart apples. At supper time place in a small crock on the back of the warm stove, pouring over the apples a pint of sugar dissolved in a cup of hot water. Cover the crock close. Let it stand till morning when the apples will be tender and may be served as breakfast food or set aside to be served at noon or night.

A Chef's Common Sense

Many housewives think that French chefs have notions which are too high flown to be of use to the ordinary home cook. "They have so much to do with," complains the home cook, "they are so used to working with large quantities of supplies that they know nothing of the needs of the home kitchen, where economy must be practiced."

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath and Dean Hoard

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the Island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the Island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rosiny offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

"Wait for me, my dear boy, I am coming." Santos saw Napoleon adjust the mechanism to full power, then dart forward. They spoke from time to time, and Santos gave directions, until he discovered in the southwestern sky the rapidly approaching American Eagle.

They met on top of the extinct volcano that was called Suemeg, on whose slopes the richest grape vines grew.

Napoleon shook Santos' hand warmly and congratulated him on his discovery. After he had inspected the ground thoroughly he could not find words to express his joy, but as he knelt there, looking up, his whole being expressed a silent prayer of thanksgiving toward the omnipotent being who creates and governs the universe.

"We don't need to look farther, Santos; there is sufficient cirynith under our feet to meet the demands of the coming century."

They started homeward.

Napoleon communicated, through his electro-stylograph, with his friend Kalmar, to find out who owned the property on which the peak of Suemeg stood. After a delay his questions were answered. The peak, as part of the Schomburg Lithow estates, had fallen to the crown, as the prince had recently died without heirs. That was all the information he could get, so he decided he would call on the Hungarian minister of agriculture, who would probably be in a position to tell him what he wished to ascertain.

"Fate is jesting with me. I had to find that precious metal in a foreign country, but gold will buy it," thought Napoleon, and returned that day to Washington, to tell his betrothed the good news.

Santos returned to Ciryne, where he found the countess with Mrs. Edison. He did not mention the discovery of the new cirynith deposit, as he knew Napoleon wanted to keep it secret until negotiations for its purchase were completed.

The little island, hardly three square miles in size, was in the glory of tropical spring, and the fine weather had brought back the health of Mrs. Edison.

The sunsets were wonderful. Poetry and love were adrift in the air. Poor Duprel! It was only a question of time until he would become Rositta's slave, only a question of time when he would betray his master for a sweet word from those treacherous lips.

Napoleon came a week later and thanked Rositta for her kindness to his mother during her indisposition. He did not talk about the discovery of the rich cirynith deposit in her presence, but when they went out for a walk he found an opportunity to communicate the good news to his mother.

There was but one obstacle in the way of his acquiring this property. The last Prince of Schomburg Lithow had died. His possessions were now German crown lands and diplomacy must be employed, or the Count von Werdenstein would suspect the value of the property, and if he discovered the secret of the aerodromone Napoleon well knew that he would not hesitate to take to war in the air.

"It would be terrible," he sighed, "to destroy all the good we have accomplished."

Napoleon invited the countess to return to the capital with him and spend a few days with Astra. She consented, and when they were alone asked what had become of the assassin who had sought Astra's life. Napoleon could give her no information except that he was in prison.

Almost every mail brought the countess letters from Europe, among which was another from the Count von Werdenstein.

The cleverly worded contents of that message conveyed the information that Napoleon was interested in a piece of land belonging to the Schomburg Lithow princedom. Rositta was requested to find the reason for his interest. As soon as she was ready to cast the bomb that would destroy peace the reward she might ask would be hers.

All this harmonized with her plans, and she looked forward to the next trip to Ciryne with Santos.

There was a reception at the Crystal Palace that evening for the diplomatic corps of the countries represented at the capital. It brought back the days before the isolation. Uniforms glittered, orders of valor and distinction were exhibited by the Europeans, who seemed to hold to their traditions; the barbaric splendor of the Orient mingled with the simple evening dress of the Americans, for simplicity characterized every American citizen.

A concert was arranged for the entertainment of the distinguished guests.

The Countess Rosiny and Mr. Hale sat near each other; he was dreamily enjoying the wonderful mellow contralto voice.

An attendant whispered: "A messenger wants to see your ladyship."

Quietly she withdrew from the hall.

Ambrosio Hale looked after her. He had seen the changing expression on her face, and shook his head doubtfully as he watched her leave.

A man awaited the countess in a small reception room; he wore the black cassock of a Trappist monk, an ancient order that still existed in a few of the European countries.

His face resembled that of the Countess Rosiny to an extraordinary degree.

When she saw him she uttered one word: "Robert." He motioned for her to step nearer, and she obeyed.

The pale padre brought from under his robe a small parcel and unfolded it. It contained a small locket with a fine chain of gold. Fine miniatures were on either side, and pressed between was a curl of black, glossy hair, bound with a narrow black ribbon. One portrait was Rositta's. The other was a little girl's.

In pantomime the monk told Rositta that he had brought this to her at the request of the little girl. She watched him stupidly, seeming unable to grasp his meaning. At last it came over her with a rush and she grasped the monk's arm convulsively.

"Brother, what has happened to her, to my—my daughter?"

The monk slowly raised his right hand heavenward.

Rositta gave one shriek and fell fainting.

The monk picked his sister up and placed her tenderly on the sofa, then he wrapped the locket and chain in its silk covering and placed it carefully in the bosom of her dress.

His large eyes rested somberly on Rositta, and a sigh escaped his lips. He crossed himself and, with a last glance at the silent woman, departed.

CHAPTER XV.

Love.

When Rositta regained consciousness she looked around for the Trappist monk whom she had called Robert. At first, when she saw no one, she felt as though she had had a dream, but she felt the package in her bosom and she knew that it was no dream.

She did not weep. Her eyes were dry and hard. She slowly unwrapped that medallion and looked at that lock of glossy hair. The portrait of her own child and a lock from her head! She repressed her feelings resolutely and left the room with a firm step. She passed through several rooms, nodding now and then to the people she met, until at last she arrived at her own door.

She entered and locked the door, and sank into a chair; not to give way to her sorrow and sob, not to pray for consolation, but to curse the cruel fate that had robbed her of her only child, the only pure, clean, innocent thing in her life.

She looked at the clear, smiling eyes gazing at her from the exquisite little portrait. Still she did not weep; her mouth was tightly closed, and the corners slightly drooped.

"You have taken her from me!" she hissed to the invisible foe. "You wanted to crush me!" She shook her clenched hand toward that phantom pictured in her brain. "But you cannot. I am stronger. Until today there was one pure spot in my soul; I had one being whom I loved unselfishly, whom I wanted with me always, yet I would not let her live in my atmosphere, because I wanted her to be all that I was not. And now she is gone!" She groaned in anguish.

"I—Will—Make the Whole World Suffer for My Loss."

"God! Are you the God of Love that Christ told of, or are you the vengeful, terrible God who vents his wrath 'till the seventh generation?' You have taken my love; now my heart is black and empty of all save hatred."

She became calm; her pale face was expressionless, her movements measured.

"Nobody shall know that I have suffered." She stopped before the mirror and looked at herself. "But millions shall suffer. I—will—make the whole world suffer for my loss.

"No more love, not another tender feeling shall creep in my heart." Her eyes glowed fiercely.

"I swear, by all the devils of the underworld, that I will plunge the world into mourning, that rivers of tears shall flow to repay me for my heart's blood."

After a few minutes' work before her mirror, she emerged from her room as rosy-cheeked as ever and smiling. At first her steps were slow, but they soon quickened, and by the time she arrived at the concert hall nobody could have told that she had gone through a terrible ordeal.

The last entertainer was leaving the stage when she entered the room. No one, save Mr. Hale, knew of her long absence from the hall. When she met Astra she felicitated her on the success of the concert.

When the guests had left, Astra and the countess retired into the little room that was reserved for family occasions.

"You will soon be the happiest woman on earth, my dear," remarked Rositta, casually.

"I am happy now, my dear girl," smiled Astra.

"The gods have given you a wonderful temperament, my dear Astra. You, with your calm, serene nature, were created to be happy. You simply shed the difficulties of life."

"Why, dear, are you unhappy?"

"Unhappy?" A sigh escaped the countess' lips, a spark of fire gleamed in her eyes, then a smile parted her coral lips. "A person with a temperament like mine never could be happy. My selfish mind craves just the thing some one else has, and if I should rob that person I would get tired of the object and cast it away." She looked at Astra, but Astra only smiled serenely, not taking Rositta's remarks seriously.

"Such is my fate, my dear. Tell me, am I responsible for being such an unhappy combination? Am I to be judged by the same measure as you, who cannot help but be good?"

"We all have passions. Mine are for liberty, peace."

"Liberty, peace," repeated Rositta, then relapsed into thought. Had Astra been able to read those thoughts, she would have had cause for alarm. Her brain was filled with war, destruction and mourning all over the world.

The next evening Rositta returned to Ciryne, with Santos at the wheel of the aerodromone.

Napoleon and Astra watched the great bird disappear in the western sky, and then they walked silently to a seat that overlooked the city. Napoleon talked for the first time about his love for her. Astra was calm, but she rose quietly and stood looking at the pulsating city below them. Their love had been understood between them, although they had never spoken of it. Yet it made her heart throb with happiness to hear his tender words. He rose and gently taking her arm, they walked among the plants that grew on the roof. A faint sound of music came to their ears.

"Have you ever thought of the future?" asked Napoleon, after a silence.

"I have, Napoleon. I have thought, that when we have finished our task, when we have done the things my father wished done for the good of the United Republics, then we may retire to that little island where your mother lives, and rest and be happy until the end of our days. There your genius will create new, useful things that will make humanity happier, things that will help eradicate poverty and misery."

"Dear girl! I have a premonition that the days you dream of are still far off; that those intriguers in Europe are planning and scheming and that when we least expect it, trouble will begin. For that reason, I believe it best to plan our marriage now. Some of the jesters over the ocean have already begun to discuss our situation with heartless cynicism."

They stopped and stood silent for a moment, then Astra leaned her head on Napoleon's shoulder and tenderly and lovingly she whispered:

"Your thought is my thought; I will follow wherever you lead."

In the meantime the aerodromone was rapidly nearing Ciryne.

Rositta had sat motionless for a short time, her mind revolving all the details of her plan.

Santos sat with his hands on the wheel, eyes straight forward, watching the faint yellowish glow that marked the horizon. His heart throbbed with happiness. He felt the presence of the woman who was playing with him.

"Mr. Duprel!"

The dreaming man turned toward the picture of his dreams, letting the bird fly its steady, rapid course.

"Will you answer me a question, Mr. Duprel?" she asked appealingly.

"As many, countess, as you wish to ask."

"First of all, please call me Rositta and I will call you Santos."

Santos nodded. He had no more power to analyze her motives, he wanted to believe in the things that were happening.

"Were you ever in love, friend Santos?" She looked impishly into Santos' astonished eyes.

"I never was before," he stammered.

"Then you are, now?"

Santos suddenly felt that weakness that enveloped him in the presence of the fair countess leave him; his deep love had made him brave.

"I am, countess! Hopelessly in love." His voice was pathetic, a mingling of longing and despair.

"Why hopelessly, my dear Santos?" She had laid her hand on his arm, and repeated the question.

"Because I dare to love you, you; is my case not hopeless?" Poor Santos trembled under the strain of the past half hour. All at once the despair, the sufferings and his untold misery were swept away in the wave of happiness caused by Rositta's arm about his short neck. He embraced the exquisite woman so ardently that she suffered, but she only replied with a sweet, sense-ensnaring smile. Santos declared:

"You have no idea what power you possess over me. I am your slave. You can make of me what you will, a hero or a traitor. I am ready to die for you."

It was not necessary for Santos to tell this. Rositta knew her power even better than Santos.

They were nearing Ciryne, and Santos tried to regain his normal composure. Rositta said gravely:

"Listen to me, my dear. We must be very careful what we do. I love you and I want our love to last as long as we live. You are all alone, but I have powerful connections and still more powerful enemies who would prevent our happiness. For that reason we must plan carefully and until that happy time comes, when we can slip away to that little home of ours, we must be discreet and cautious. Do not tell of our love. I will meet you whenever I can and we will leave when the way is clear."

"I am yours, my dear Rositta, but I know my happiness will betray my love."

"They Are Right, Count; I Want Those Crystals."

The countess gazed straight ahead, her hand still nestled in Santos'. She continued:

"I have been all alone. The President, Mr. Edison and his dear mother have been very good to me, but I have longed for someone to be my very own. I have found you and now I am happy, indeed."

Could Santos have seen behind that artful schemer's veil, he would have recoiled, horror-stricken. But he could only see the tender light in her eyes, and hear the loving words from her lips.

CHAPTER XVI.

A New Princess.

Napoleon found obstacles in the way of obtaining the property where he had discovered the desired cirynith. The German crown declared it was not for sale. He asked for a long lease, and the right to mine the Peak Suemeg, but that would conflict with the laws of Hungarian lease and rental rights.

Realizing that he never would arrive at the actual working of the mine, unless he took a decided step, he paid a visit to the Count von Werdenstein personally.

This time he crossed the ocean in one of the newest English liners that made the trip between New York and Liverpool in three days.

Upon his arrival in Berlin he visited his friend, Herr Kalmar, before he even sought a hotel. The German was very happy to see the man with whom he had so many pleasant dealings, and readily explained the political situation in Europe. He frankly said that there was possibility of an international disturbance; the people were happy, but the nobility, and, more particularly, the idle army and navy officers, were agitating the question of restoring the standing armies and aerial and naval defenses.

Napoleon listened gravely to the opinions of this brave and broad-minded man who was doing all he could to enlighten the people. He knew Herr Kalmar was a perfectly trustworthy man, so he told him about his difficulties in obtaining Peak Suemeg.

Herr Kalmar said: "I believe that the chancellor, notwithstanding his defeat in American waters, has retained the kaiser's good will, and has, no doubt, delayed matters because he wanted to find out why you want the Peak Suemeg so badly. His spies are probably at work trying to ascertain the value of the Peak, so that he can utilize it for his own purposes."

HAT FOR BROWN EYES

Prettily dressed children constitute half the brightness of almost any scene in which humanity plays a part. So children's fashions have grown to be a business too.

As much thought may be expended in the attire of the little maid as the debutante, with equally as attractive results; the chief difference being that it is possible to make all sorts of becoming apparel for a four-year-old with the odds and ends which so often find their way to the scrap bag. One of the best ways of using up pieces is upon the small lady's separate hat. A silk elastic, passing under the chin, prevents the chapeau shown on the head of this pretty owner from blowing off.

PROTECTING JUTE

A Canadian Industry Which Requires Adequate Protection

United States manufacturers of jute yarns, bagging and twine fear that the new Democratic administration will reduce the protection which they have enjoyed. Jute is a long vegetable fibre, the cheapest commercial fibre in the world, grown exclusively in India. It is used to manufacture bags, sacks, twine, carpets, etc., the chief centres of the industry being Calcutta, Dundee, Dunkirk, Hamburg, Vienna, Turin, Brooklyn and Ludlow.

The weaving of jute fabric has not yet been established as an industry in Canada, but jute yarn and fabrics are further manufactured here to such an extent that Canadian concerns supply the greater part of the home market. In the United States, the spinners and weavers of jute are protected by a tariff of 45 per cent. In Canada there is practically no duty on jute yarn and plain jute cloth.

Why should not adequate protection be given to spinners and weavers of jute by Canada, so that large industries, similar to those enjoying protection of 45 per cent. or more in the United States, might be established in this country?—Industrial Canada.

When to Take a Bath

A cold sponge bath on rising is a good tonic. But the bathroom should be warm; and vigorous friction with a rough towel should follow, says John B. Huber in "Good Health." A cold bath in a chilly room may depress a weak system; here tepid water should be substituted for cold. The feeble might stand, while taking a cold sponge bath, in a bath-tub in which there is very warm water up to the ankles. A warm water bath at bedtime is excellent, if one can immediately get to bed without exposure.

HOW TO GATHER FISH WORMS

A new labor-saving device for gathering fish worms is culled from an exchange: "You take a broom handle three and a half feet long, drive it into the spot likely to be inhabited by angle worms. Leave an end sticking up about six inches. Then take a rough board and rub it over the top of the broom handle. This rubbing will cause a vibration of the earth and the worms, angry and disturbed, will work their way out of the ground. A fellow can get a pail full of worms in a short time."

Ripening Peaches.

The invention of a process for ripening peaches by high tension electricity, discharged directly upon the fruit, is claimed by an Englishman.

Their Own Shovels.

An Iowa railroad provides its locomotive firemen with individual shovels, the idea being that a man can do better work with an implement with which he is familiar.

When Appetite Fails And Digestion is Bad

THERE IS DANGER AHEAD FOR THE MAN WHO NEGLECTS NATURE'S WARNING.

Dyspepsia Tendencies are Serious and Should be Treated Accordingly.

There is a strong moral in the statement of James Schrum, of Pleasant street, Dartmouth, N.S. Like thousands of people, he was failing in health because his stomach and digestive organs were out of repair. His vitality was slipping away; he was losing ground every day.

"I could not have held on much longer. I was wasting away simply because no remedy I used gave tone and strength to my stomach. The vital forces of my system seemed dead. I was advised to try Dr. Hamilton's Pills. What hidden weakness they searched out I don't know, but in a miraculous way they have made a new man of me. My stomach troubles are cured, rich blood now runs through my veins—clear skin and unmistakable evidences of health and vigor I feel every day. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have certainly mastered the secret of curing the sickly unnerved man and I strongly urge everyone in failing or lost health to use this grand remedy."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut are purely vegetable, 25c. per box, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

In regard to the McIlmoyle case, which was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble at Police Court on Saturday morning, G. N. Gordon, counsel for complainant has made application to the Attorney-General to have two magistrates try the case.
two magistrates try the case. Mr. Ruddy acted for the defendant and obtained her discharge.

The Oriental Does Well.

There were seven automobiles lined up in front of the Oriental Hotel at dinner time yesterday. They carried a large number of American tourists who always make this popular hotel their headquarters. We might also say that this hotel is today headquarters of the delegates attending the big Horticultural meeting.

New Organ for Knox Church.

A new organ is to be installed at Knox church by May of 1914. This question, it is learned from one of the prominent members of the congregation, was inspired by the pastor, Rev. H. J. Keith, and his efforts made the purchase of the organ possible. There has been subscribed and collected the sum of $1,650. and to this is added the same amount by the Sarnegie Corporation. The instrument will be installed by a Canadian firm.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE NEW TREATMENT FOR HAIRY GROWTHS

Here is a simple way to banish hair or fuzz from the chin, lip or cheek without resorting to the painful and expensive electric treatment: Mix into a thick paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairs not wanted and let remain 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off and with it comes every trace of hair, after which wash the skin and it will be firm, white and free from blemish. Rarely is the second application necessary, unless the growth is stubborn

Applying pyroxin at lash-roots will make your eyelashes grow long and curly, and if the eyebrows are thin, try rubbibg some on every other night for a few weeks. Be very careful and don't get any pyroxin where hair is not wanted.

JUDGEMENT RESERVED IN BACHELOR CASE

At yesterday's police court, Ernest Bachelor was charged with carrying away a quantity of hardwate and some electric lamps. Detective Newhall, in the box, said he found, when asked by Mr. Rowe, complainant, acting in a search warrant, at defendant's house and found the goods except the lamps. He, defendant, showed the brass taps, iron pipes, etc., as charged in the search warrant. Defendant said they had been brought to his house by a carter in mistake. Mr. Gordon acted for Rowe and Mr. Corkery for defendant, Witness said the pipes belonged to a stove. The fastenings were left at defendant's house. Mrs. Rowe said Mr. Bachelor left her house on Wednesday. The lamps had been removed from the electric wires, and the wires left under the cellar stairs wrapped in paper, she thought they might create a fire. Bachelor was her tenant. A suit case found at Bachelor's house was identified as hers. Mr. Bachelor said he was a tenant of Mrs. Rowe's. He bought the necessary fixtures to connect stove and boiler. A bill was produced in court for the goods. The carter brought the suit case to his new residence unknown to him. He only saw it three days after he had moved. He left a plumber to remove the stove fittings. Judgment reserved.

402nd BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1913

MEN'S SILK LISLE HOSE, 18c.
2 PAIRS 35c.

There is excellent value in these Hose that are in plain shades of tan, grey and black. The heels and toes are double; the sizes 10 to 11½. Wednesday 18c

MEN'S WASH VESTS 75c.

The balance of these Vests, that in some instances are worth $2.50, are those of small size. The man who is of slender build, may therefore secure a natty wash Vest at a most remarkable reduction. A quick clearance on Wednesday, each 75c

MEN'S ATHLETIC UNDERWEAR 33c.

These fine checked, Nainsook Garments are essentially for summer wear. The shirt is made in coat style, and the drawers are knee length. Usually one pays 50c for such quality. Annex price, garment 33c

Summer Blouse Neat and Stylish 39c

CHAMBRAY IN PLAIN TONES OR STRIPED PATTERNS IS A UNIVERSAL FAVORITE for summer apparel. It has been employed in the make up of these Blouses, some of which have deep Dutch collars and plain cuffs (like the illustration), others having high collars that are detachable. In every instance the Annex price is only a fraction of the real value, as one can judge by the window display. They are made in sizes 34 to 42, and on Wednesday only, priced at 39c

See Them in the Window.

SWEATER COATS FOR CHILDREN 39c

Just a small number of these Sweaters that usually are worth 60c, 75c or 85c. The colors are grey, tan and cardinal, the workmanship good, and each one is fitted with pockets. Wednesday 39c

PURE BLEACHED COTTON, 9c YD

This Cotton is of good weight, is nicely, evenly woven upon the steam looms, and possesses a very soft finish. A special purchase enables us to quote a low price for Wednesday. Per yard 9c

WHITE HONEYCOMB QUILTS 87c.

Buying in the ordinary way, one is apt to pay $1.25 for a quilt similar in quality and size to these at 87c. They are very nicely made, woven in honeycomb style with neat self patterns. Wednesday 87c

MEN'S SOFT LOUNGE COLLARS, 10c.

Odd 25c lines in white or light colors. Marked for a quick clearance in the Annex at 10c

... ...

MEN'S STIFF FRONTED SHIRTS, 49c.

A Shirt of $1.00 to $1.50 value for 49c is indeed an offer of rare occurence, even in the Annex. And these Shirts are of such fine makes as Tooke's, and Star, in good patterns on light and dark grounds. In some the cuffs are separate, in others they are attached. None worth less than $1.00 but mostly being regular $1.50 Shirts. All sizes except 16 from 14 to 17½. Wednesday 49c

NEW "SNAP" CORSETS 44c.

Procurable in good quality coutil, the chief feature of the Corset being the figure-reducing side pieces. The bust is medium, and so is the skirt. Four hose supporters attached, and sizes 18 to 26. Made by the D. & A. Corset Co. the quality may be depended upon 44c

WHITE COTTON GOWNS, 42c

Good quality English Longcloth is the material from which they are made, and they are cut in the French slip-over style. Elbow sleeves and yoke are lace trimmed, and the marvel is that such a dainty piece of lingerie can be bought for so small a sum 42c

Children's Wash Dresses 55c

THESE LITTLE DRESSES FOR MAIDENS OF 6 TO 14 YEARS are in stripe and floral patterns upon blue and red grounds, and will prove invaluable to mothers, whose problem is to keep the children neat and tidy. At 75c and 85c they are considered good value, yet the Annex will see them marked at 55c

They may be Seen in the Window.

Boys Khaki Knickers 39c

ANOTHER MONTH OF HOLIDAYS MEANS ANOTHER MONTH OF HARD WEAR on the boys' clothes. Therefore the need of something strong and durable, like these Knickers. They are made of stout trouser duck, in sizes 5 to 15 years, and are gathered at the knee with an elastic band. Made expressly for hard wear, they have become very popular with Annex patrons. Take a glance at them in our window, their value is apparent at first sight ... 39c

Childrens Rompers only 29c

THE LITTLE TOT IN GOOD HEALTH IS ALWAYS ON THE MOVE; crawling, walking, climbing, everywhere. And a romper is essentially the garment most suited, to maintain a neat appearance, and yet allow freedom in every movement. Those on sale in the Annex are of dark blue, or linen shade, to fit children of 2 to 6 years. They will be found of good value and may be seen in our windows on Tuesday. Annex price 29c

BEDS, BEDDING, HOUSEFURNISHINGS

These are assembled with the Wall Paper on the third floor. They comprise a host of lines, each of which offers much variation in price and quality. Carpets, rugs and fine drapings add to the display, with new colorings and materials, in a breadth of selection designed to meet everyone's needs.

The "Big Alteration Sale" in the Men's Section on Main Floor presents Men's Wear of every description at greatly reduced prices.

TURKISH BATH TOWELS 29c PAIR.

Their size is most generous, for it is 38 x 18 in. The nap is heavy and soft, delightfully absorbent, and the whole quality is somewhat better than you would expect for the price. In a color combination of grey, red and white, they form a most useful towel around camp or home. Per pair 29c

BOYS' COTTON JERSEYS 19c.

These Cotton Jerseys, because of their simplicity, comfortable weight and washableness, are a pronounced favorite amongst the boys. Low neck, short sleeves, and obtained in a variety of pleasing color combinations. Usually sold for 25c. Wednesday 19c

FEATHER FILLED PILLOWS 44c

Full regulation size, filled with sanitary feathers and covered with stout art ticking in shades of green and brown. Really worth 60c apiece. The Annex will see them marked at, each ... 44c

LACES AND INSERTIONS 5c YARD

Women and Children's Summer Coats $2.98

ORIGINALLY PRICED UP TO $10.00.

SOME OF THESE COATS ARE SILK, SOME LINEN; BUT MOSTLY ARE CREAM SERGE of splendid quality and finish. Both long and short styles may be procured, and regardless of their original cost or present worth they have been marked at a sacrifice, because the workmen are crowding us for room. To say they are worth $5 to $10.00 is a most conservative estimate, because there are some that in regular price were even higher than this. They are to be displayed in the window, and we anticipate a brisk demand for them early Wednesday morning at the remarkably low price of, only $2.98

PREACHER APPEARS IN PULPIT IN WHITE SUIT

Heavy Black Coat and High Stiff Collar Nonsense, He Tells Worshippers.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Rev. Arthur J. Francis, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Englewood, defied church tradition yesterday by appearing in his pulpit dressed entirely in white. There was almost a gasp from the congregation when he stepped on the uniform. The 'preacher appeared comfortable in a temperature of 93, while many members in "Prince Alberts" and stiff Sunday gowns fanned vigorously.

After the sermon Rev. Mr. Francis said he thought the conventional heavy black coat and stiff collar were "nonsense." He said yesterday's costume permitted him to "deliver three times a better sermon" in hot weather.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

AUGUST 25th—From Toronto and North Western Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points

SEPTEMBER 3rd—From Toronto and all stations in Ontario East of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay.

SEPTEMBER 5th—From all stations on Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay inclusive and west thereof in Ontario including C.P.R. Line Sudbury to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, but not including Azilda and west.

CANADIAN BORN

By Pauline Johnson

We first saw light in Canada, the land
beloved of God;
We are the pulse of Canada, its marrow and its blood;
And we the men of Canada, can face
the world and brag
That we were born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

Few of us have the blood of kings,
few are of courtly birth,
But few are vagabonds or rogues of doubtful name and worth;
And all have one credential that entitles us to brag—
That we were born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

We've yet to make our money, we've yet to make our fame,
But we have gold and glory in our clean colonial name;
And every man's a millionaire if only
he can brag
That he was born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

No title and no coronet is half so proudly worn
As that which we inherited as men
Canadian born;
We count no man so noble as the one who makes the brag
That he was born in Canada beneath
the British flag.

The Dutch may have their Holland
the Spaniard may have his Spain
The Yankee to the south of us must south of us remain;
For not a man dare lift a hand against the men who brag
That they were born in Canada beneath the British flag.

CANADA WILL HAVE EXHIBIT AT THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

Government Officially Accepts the Invitation to Attend--Preparations Are Already Under Way

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 5.—Canada will have an exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition to be held at San Francisco in 1915.

The invitation to participate has been officially accepted by the Government here, the site has been selected and preparations are already under way for the erection of buildings commensurate with the importance of Canada as an exhibitor.

National in Character.

The exhibit will be purely national in character and will consist of a display typifying the national resources of the Dominion.

It is not believed here that Britain's decision not to participate in the exposition has been arrived at with any idea of retaliation against the United States on account of the tolls question.

Withdraw From Fairs.

"Great Britain has nothing to gain by an exhibit of her manufactures and foreign exhibitions so far away," says a prominent Government official this morning. "In fact British manufacturers have for some years past been trying to come to an agreement whereby there should be no such exhibits in the future. It is simply a matter of pure business economy.

"Our own Canadian manufacturers have been gradually withdrawing from the exhibit business at our own fairs. There is a probability, however, that Great Britain will send a national exhibit to the exposition."

Will Complete Trent Canal In Two Years

Ottawa, Aug. 5.—The Borden Government will complete the Trent Valley Canal by the end of 1914, and have it ready for use by 1915. The section from Trenton to Hastings, the Lake Ontario mouth, will be finished by the end of 1914.

The port section of Georgian Bay will be advertised in a day or two, and the rest of the section, between Port Severn and Orillia, will be advertised in three sections next autumn.

TO GATHER ONE OF LARGEST CROPS IN CANADIAN N. W.

Given Good Harvesting and Ripening Weather, Yield Should be Large

Saskatoon, Sask., Aug. 5.—All the West asks for now is two weeks of fine ripening weather, and it will garner one of the best crops in its history. During the past week your correspondent has travelled by train and auto over most of Central and Northern Saskatchewan and has inspected hundreds of fields of wheat. The crop is uniformly good, is generally above the average and with good weather, cutting will start about August 15 and be general about Aug. 20. Of course the question of cutting is a matter of weather, but with a continuation of the fine warm summer days of the past two weeks work will be commenced by the middle of August, and in odd places before. This will be a week earlier than last year, which means that much better chance of missing the frosts. The spring was late this year, but with the ideal weather of June and July the wheat has caught up lost time and with a few days more of warm weather will be ahead of the last season. Last year, it will be remembered, there was poor ripening weather, as it was cool and wet all through August.

Hail is the present ghost which haunts the western farmer. So far about the only district seriously injured by hail is Rosthern, one of the best districts in Saskatchewan. I visited the Rosthern country and a hail storm in less than half an hour had practically destroyed an area three miles wide by twenty long of the finest wheat in the Province, stretching from a little west of Rosthern, southeast to the mainline of the Canadian Northern Railway. The damage is a serious matter, as probably only a third of the farmers carried hail insurance.

MAGNIFICENT NEW ADDITION TO NICHOLL'S HOSPITAL, TOLD OF

Peterborough's New Monument to Charlotte Jane Nicholls is Almost Completed

The grand new addition to the Nicholl's Hospital, which former measures 100 x 40 feet, is almost completed. Yesterday a Times scribe had the privilege of inspecting this latest monument to the late Charlotte Jane Nicholls. The builing is entered by extra broad doors from the West. The new addition is heated throughout with the last word in hot water heating from a big furnace in the basement. In the basement is also the apparatus for the modern and hygenic system of ventilation. An electric motor drives a big fan that can change the entire air of the whole hospital auditorium in ten minutes. This is effected through apertures in every room and hall. One hole in the floor takes out the foul air, whilst fresh air, artificially heated and moistened, comes in through a hole at the top, the foul air escaping through cowls in the roof. The fresh air comes from outside, high up on the building.

There is not a particle of wood in the whole building, except the doors. These are of inch and three-quarters of 5-ply maple. Thus the whole building with its cement floors, is absolutely fireproof. Even the windows on the side facing the old building, are made of fire-proof glass. The basement has bright, airy rooms that will accommodate about ten patients, whilst the building will provide for about fifty. At each floor, on the south side, are large sun parlors. The big doors leading into the building are covered with tin and thus fire proof. The walls are of sanitary white cement. Wide corridors lead to each floor from the old hospital, so that, in case of fire or other cause patients can readily be wheeled into the new addition as well as into the various rooms and wards. There are modernly equipped lavatories on each floor, as well as a ward kitchen, where bed tea, broth, etc., can be heated. The food will be cooked in the old building. Between the corridors leading from the old to the new building are automatic calling closing fire proof doors. A large and particularly well lighted operating room is situated on the 3rd floor. Beside this is a room for administering anesthetics. A huge fire proof elevator leads to all floors. A new feature is that when a patient wants a nurse, he or she simply touches a button. At night this lights a globe outside the particular room and lights a pilot lamp in the matron's room. Mr. W. Blackwell is the architect, whilst Messrs. Langford and Sheehey are the contractors.

A magnificent and inspiring view is had over the surrounding country from the sun parlors. The people of Peterborough are indebted for this magnificent addition, and endowment of over $200,000, to the executors of the Nicholl's estate, Messrs. Richard Hall and Chas. Magill.

Owing to the splendid service now given by the Peterborough Radial Railway, friends of patients in the above mentioned hospital are enabled to visit without any delay coming or going.

$50,000 REWARD FOR TORONTO DETECTIVES

Providing, of Course, They Get the Pearl Thieves.

Toronto, Aug. 5.—Toronto police have a chance to earn a $50,000 reward by the recovery of the Oriental pearl necklace valued at $650,000, stolen while in transit from Paris to London and for which the police of all Europe are searching. A circular containing a photograph of the necklace and the reward offer has been received from Scotland Yard.

The necklace was stolen July 16th. The reward is offered by Lloyds, underwriters.

CARS ARE OVERTURNED, TWO MEN MET DEATH

Five Other Workmen Are Injured in An Accident Near Kingston.

Kingston, Aug. 5.—Two men were killed in an accident at Parham on the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway this morning, when two cars attached to a construction train, left the tracks and were overturned.

One man was named Mitchell Pontypool and the other was an Italian workman.

Five other workmen were injured. Word was sent here and Dr. W. W. Sands will go out to the scene and hold an inquest.

GALLANT RESCUE BY A LOCAL MAN

Mr. J. McMillan Saves Life From Drowning at Hunter Street Bridge

Mr. J. McMillan Saves Life From Drowning at Hunter Street Bridge.

As Mr. J. McMillan, of this city, but formerly of Collinwood, was crossing the Hunter Street bridge shortly before one o'clock yesterday morning, he heard a cry of distress below. Looking over he saw two men one a local pressman, in the river. They had upset from a canoe. Mr. McMillan at once climbed over the rail and slid down the iron upright to the water. Here he thrust out a foot and leg to one of the men who was about all in. The pressman grabbed his, McMillan's, leg and was drawn to the upright. Mr. McMillan then managed to get hold of the canoe to which the other man held and brought him to the upright. The canoe was then turned right side up and emptied. Had it not been for McMillan sagacity and pluck, one, at least, of the men would have been drowned.

MAYOR BRADBURN WELCOMES THE VISITING HORTICULTURISTS

Those in charge of the entertainment of the visiting delegates to the Canadian Horticultural convention, now in session in the city would be pleased to hear from auto owners who would place their autos at the disposal of the committee.

The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Bradburn at the Armouries yesterday afternoon.

The Mayor's Address.

Mr. President and Members of the Canadian Horticultural Association,—

Gentlemen,—It is a very pleasant duty I have to perform in bidding you welcome to Peterborough, and in doing so I voice the sentiments of the people of the city as well as of the Council. We are glad to welcome visitors, and none could be more welcome than the members of your Association. You are engaged in a work that is of incalculable benefit. It is necessary that the attention of the people should be called to these things, and that the taste for the beautiful should be cultivated. Our own Horticultural Society, owing chiefly to the untiring labour of love of a few citizens, has been an inspiration to our people. Your annual convention here will aid them in their work and we are sure that there will be good and lasting effects in this city from this gathering.

We are pleased to know that you will have an opportunity of seeing something of our city while you are here. The parks and public buildings you will no doubt find of interest, and there are industries that will well repay a visit. It is with pardonable pride, we believe, that we can point to a growth in the population of the city of sixty-three per cent. in the last census decade, and present indications point to as large or a larger growth during the current ten years period.

We hope that all your sessions will be most successful and beneficial and that your stay here will be most pleasant. We want you to feel absolutely at home and to enjoy yourselves as fully as possible, and to come again at the earliest opportunity.

TWO HURT WHEN TRAIN HITS FIRE AUTO TRUCK

New Fire Fighter Throws to Top of a Railway Building.

London, Ont., Aug. 5.—Firemen Percy Summers and Robert McDonald are both in Victoria Hospital badly hurt as a result of a fast G.T.R. freight crashing into London's new $8,000 auto fire truck as it was speeding to a fire early to-day. The truck was carried fifty feet down the track, and landed on top of a small railway building. Four other firemen on it escaped with bad cuts and bruises. Fireman Summers' mother was buried yesterday, and he had just returned to duty.

BY-LAW DID NOT GET TWO-THIRD MAJORITY

Our report of Monday's Council meeting was somewhat misleading, inasmuch as we neglected to say that, while the by-law to restrict the area lying between Park St. and the boundary and Weller and King Sts. to residential buildings only, secured a majority vote, still the measure does not become law. Such by-laws require a TWO-THIRD majority vote of the whole Council before being enforced, which majority this by-law did not get. Hence the west end area in question is still open to all kinds of buildings, and so far there is nothing to prevent Mr. R. C. Braund turning the building at the corner of Charlotte and St. Joseph Streets into a store.

UNDESIRABLES SENT BACK TO KINGSTON

I will be remembered that a man named Fuller was arrested on Tuesday in the township of Smith, where he, his wife, who is in very delicate condition, were "pigging" it on the roadside. Fuller was charged Tuesday before Juhge Edmison, County Magistrate, with vagrancy and remanded until yesterday morning. His wife and four children were sent to the Children's Shelter.

Yesterday County Constable Bullied communicated with the man's sister in Kingston by phone. She promised to send money to have the family taken to the Limestone City.

Superintendent Henry says that in 14 years experience at the Shelter he never saw woman or child so filthy as she was on arrival. When asked "Was she covered with vermin?" he replied, "No, nothing could bite for nourishment through the cake of dirt enveloping her!"

DAUGHTER OF LADY SACKVILLE TO WED

London, Aug. 5.—Members of society, who are lovers of romance, breathed sighs of relief to-day when they read in the newspapers the formal announcement of the engagement of the Hon. Victoria Sackville-West, and Harold Nicholson, third son of Sir Arthur Nicholson, permanent under-secretary of the Foreign Office.

During the recent sensational "Million pound will suit," wherein the girl's mother, Lady Sackville successfully proved her right to $2,500,000 left in the will of the late Sir John Scott, Miss Sackville-West, known in society as "Kidlet," announced that if her mother were not vindicated by the court's findings, she would not marry young Nicholson. Her mother won, though, and now the engagement is announced and evrrybody is happy.

OUR EXCELLANT BAND

The 57th Regt. have just completed set of tympanies and a monster bass arrangements for the purchase of a viol. Mr. Dyer, the new addition to the ranks, will look after the tympanies, while Mr. Loeb, an old-time member, and a player of more than ordinary ability, will take charge of the new viol.

Mr. Alfred Chown, piccolo and flute player for many years with that most celebrated of English bands, that of the Royal Engineers, is expected to arrive in town this week and will immediately enter upon his duties with the 57th. Mr. Chown should, with his wide experience in such a good company as the Royal Engineers, prove a decided acquisition to the ranks.

For the protection of both the band and player binding three year contracts are executed to cover all new players. This will tend to keep the efficiency of the band at a high standard at all times, and prevent temporary fluctuations. The 57th, with this new and aggressive policy of progres will soon be in a position second to none in the Dominion.

HALF BILLION U. S. CAPITAL TARIFF BRINGS TO CANADA

Huge Stream of Money Which Reciprocity Would Have Diverted-- Enormous Increase in Recent Years

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, August 5.—According to an estimate of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce the amount of American capital now invested in Canada aggregates the enormous total of half a billion dollars. Reciprocity with the United States as provided in the Taft-Fielding pact would have stopped the flow of capital from the United States to Canada. Many millions of the above total would have been lost to Canada with a corresponding loss in the employment of Canadian labor.

Recent Increase.

There has been a remarkable increase in American investments throughout the Dominion within the past few years. According to the figures collected for the five years' period, 1905-9, inclusive, the amount of American investments was $279,075,000. In May, 1911, it was estimated that these investments were approximately $417,143,221. Since then, according to the belief of officers of the Government who have made a study of the subject, there has been an additional investment in the neighborhood of $80,000,000.

Branch Industries.

Recent reports on the subject from American consuls and other sources of information in Canada have been collated, but officials are satisfied the estimate of half a billion dollars of capital invested is not far out of the way. While many of the investments are in lumber, mines, farms and natural resources of the Dominion, a very large amount of American capital has been sent into Canada in recent years to establish branches of the industry already in operation in the United States, or to develop new lines of manufacture.

How It Is Invested.

Interesting details of American investments in Canada are given in a statement prepared by F. W. Field, sub-agent of the British Board of Trade in Toronto in 1911. His approximate total at that time was $417,143,221. He had previously estimated that the American capital invested in Canada was $297,000,000, and the higher amount represents a reconsideration of that estimate based on more complete information. Sub-agent Field gave these detailed estimates of American investments:—

209 companies with an average Capital of $600,000	$125,400,000
Investments in British Columbia mills and timber	65,000,000
Investments in British Columbia mines	60,000,000
Land deals in prairie provinces	25,000,000
Investments in lumber and mines in the prairie provinces	10,000,000
Packing plants	6,000,000
Agricultural implement distributing houses	8,575,000
Lands deals in British Columbia	8,500,000
Municipal Bonds sold privately	27,000,000
Investments in Canada of United States insurance companies	43,293,221
Miscellaneous industrial investments	10,000,000
Purchase of city and town property	15,525,000
Investments in the Maritime provinces	12,350,000

Tariff Brings It.

That this capital has come to Canada because of the Canadian tariff there is ample proof, if proof were needed. Such proof can be found in the United States consular reports. A United States official, writing from Owen Sound, Ont., put it this way:—

"Prior to the present protective policy of Canada, American firms made the goods at home and shipped the finished product here. In order to hold their business, it became necessary to establish American annexes here and manufacture the articles which they desire to sell to Canadians in Canada."

CHARGE AGAINST HAMILTON FIREMEN.

Hamilton, Aug. 5.—R. Stewart, barber of James street south, has complained that firemen took away articles valued at $30 after a recent fire. Chief Ten Eyck refuses to believe that any of his men are thieves.

GUESTS ARE BURNED AND SUMMER HOTEL IS SCORCHED

Jewels and Clothing Lost, Holiday and Health Seekers Just Escape

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 5.—The Blue Mountain House at Pen Mar, on the Pennsylvania Maryland Line, was destroyed by fire to-day. Two guests, B. F. Metzgar and Malcolm Frank, of Norfolk, Pa., were badly burned in attempting to escape.

The fire broke out at five in the morning, in the kitchen and quickly spread to adjoining rooms and halls, thence to the elevator shaft and the floors above. The 175 guests were driven to the lawns in scanty attire, few being able to save their belongings.

The hotel was built about 25 years ago and in its day was one of the best known mountain resort houses in the country. The loss is about $200,000.

Jewels and Clothing Gone.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 5.—About half of the guests at the burned Blue Mountain Hotel were Baltimoreans. A score of these clad in garments of all descriptions, returned to the city on a morning train. So swift was the progress of the flames that none of the party were able to save any of their jewels or clothing. It is estimated that more than $100,000 worth of jewelry was lost.

Mrs. B. Lobe of Eutaw Place gave a hasty description of the first stage of the fire.

"It was awful," she said, "I saw babies thrown out of windows. We were aroused from our sleep by the sharp reports of a pistol and some one crying to run for our lives as the hotel was on fire. We did not wait, but grabbed up the first piece of clothing that came to hand and ran from the building."

As the women left the train at the station here they presented a sorry appearance. Wrappers, kimonas and such were the wearing apparel of most of them.

WOULD GIVE IRELAND, WALES, AND SCOTLAND HOME RULE

Charles Armstrong, Canadian Candidate in Colne Valley, Thinks Canadian System Should Work

London, Aug. 5.—Charles Armstrong, a Canadian railway director, who is a Conservative candidate for Colne Valley, declares he would not object to Ireland having the same kind of home rule as Canada. He would have such a system applicable to Scotland and Wales as the House of Commons had too much in hand already to attend to trifling matters.

Mr. Armstrong says there is too much blind party following at Westminster, and he wants to represent those opposed to him as well as those voting for him.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair and warm; with showers in some localities.

BASEBALL

The Petes captured another from Berlin yesterday, and in doing so just took another step nearer the top of the ladder in the Canadian League. The game was a fine exhibition of ball and the playing all through was air-tight. Sterling in the box for the Petes handled the pill and also the Berlin aggregation in an excellent manner, only allowing them one run. The boys play again to-day at Berlin and then take a three game series with Notty Lee's Hamilton Tigers, and judging by past performances of the Ambitious team, the Petes should be able to get a few notches higher and nearer the pennant.

The score stood 6—1 in favor of the Petes.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c. and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are compounded to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 10c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 358 George St., directly opposite Grassman's store.

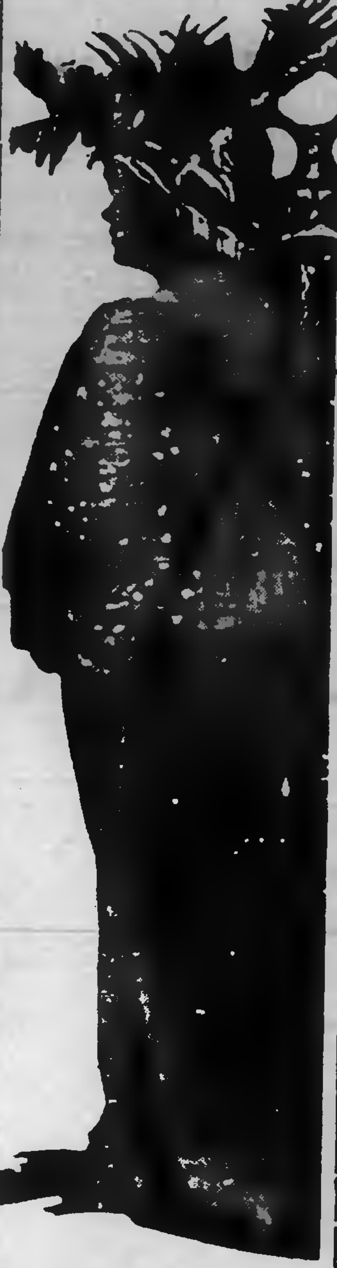
English Woman Who Spent Six Months in Canada Gives Address

Ella Sykes addressed the Royal Society of Arts concerning openings for educated women in Canada. Miss Sykes was so anxious to find out what openings existed that she spent six months in Canada as a working woman, took five temporary positions as home help in four Provinces, and received hospitality at chicken ranches and prairie farms. At the outset she met a rebuff at Winnipeg, where she was told "what a pity English women are so seldom trained to do anything properly." Miss Sykes said this was humiliating, but true. She was surprised to find how low accordingly was her market value. When she thought of being home help she found the reality very different from what she had imagined it. The Canadian is a capable housewife, and the work of keeping her home in good order seemed endless. Her experiences in several situations convinced her that the post of home help is unsuitable for educated English women, except perhaps on the Pacific slopes. Miss Sykes recommended educated English emigrants to consider becoming probationers in large western hospitals, elementary school teachers, stenographers or dressmakers. Poultry farming was lucrative if women could do the work themselves. "We are accused of wishing to drain the United Kingdom of all its capable women," concluded Miss Sykes. "We replied that with one and a half million more women than men, a few hundred can well be spared. If England is so anxious to keep her daughters let her give them better salaries."

QUEEN HELENA OF ITALY

She is a daughter of King Nicholas of Montenegro, [illegible] struck the first blow at Turkey.



A "Slip-over" Gown.

Beautiful "slip-over" gowns are shown in Paris. The one illustrated is of pearl gray chiffon with the facing and train of chiffon velvet. The facing is caught to the chiffon just at the knee with a band of opal beaded lace from which depends a fringe of silver beads.

The sleeves and peculiar drapery which forms the upper portion of this gown is indescribable, but the picture tells the story.

The upper drapery is of gray tulle embroidered with silver and opal beads.

One peculiarly individual touch is the band of heavy gray macreme lace which outlines the V-shaped neck, front and back.

This queer gown simply slips over the head and hangs straight all the way down like a classic Greek costume.

The cap of cloth of silver with its opal beaded band, its silver fringe across the back and its saucy feather complete a costume which would make any woman, who had the temerity to wear it, observed of all under any circumstances.

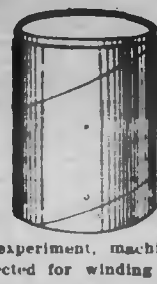
PAPER MILK BOTTLES

What profit is an inspection of cows for tuberculosis if we have to take the sterility of the bottles on faith?

To the old, old cry for "certified milk" has been added the demand for "certified milk bottles."

An inventor has answered the demand and placed on the market a new, sanitary, neckless milk "bottle." It looks like a marmalade jar and is constructed from paper.

Paper bottles have been talked about for a long time. Now, after years of experiment, machinery has been perfected for winding strips of paper, or rather cardboard, into sterile, paraffin-dipped tubes.



All that is necessary is to fill these tubes with milk and seal them. Then you have the ideal single-service container.

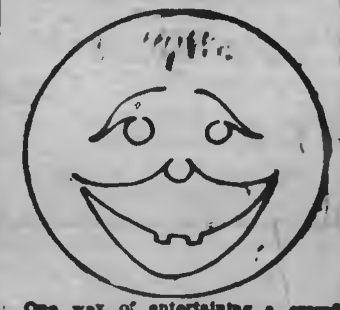
Tests of the new milk container show that it has a lower bacterial count than the best glass bottles from some of he cleanest dairies.

The single-service milk container does away, effectually, with the mooted question of cleaning bottles which have been used before. It insures each milk customer a new, unused receptacle, and prevents the possibility of carrying disease from one house to another in the used bottles. It is practical and cheap.

A mirror set inside the top of a vanity bag is a true friend to the woman who is careful of her appearance.

A little hook and eye, instead of stitches, will keep a shield in place. Place one hook at each end and one on the centre of the curve. Match the places with eyes sewn to the bodice or guimpe. These hooks and eyes are most convenient for adjustable shields.

Make a Face With Three Lines



One way of entertaining a crowd of young folks is to make circles with a compass on a number of sheets of paper which are distributed among those taking part in the contest. Now see who can draw the funniest face inside of his circle, using only three lines and not crossing any of them. You will observe that the accompanying face was made in this way. This is merely a sample. Perhaps you can do better.

Soap Bubbles.

A mathematical genius has figured that 25,344,000 soap bubbles can be made from a pound of soap.

Borax and Stains.

Borax in the water in which they are washed will free light colored stockings from leather stains.

The harsh honk of the automobile horn is so distressing to some nervous people that a local doctor has suggested the adoption of one that has a musical tone. Good idea. Let us have a horn which, in melodious strains will sing:

"Get out of the road, you
son of a gun,
Or over you I'll surely run."

FUNERAL FLOWERS

In many notices of deaths published in newspapers there is this sentence: "Please omit flowers." The request, which should be sacred, is often disregarded. This one will say "This request was not meant for me, who knew him so well"; another argues that, inasmuch as others will show this last attention, an ommision on her part would be observed and commented upon. In many cases floral tributes are a tax on survivors, an extravagance, a waste of money. Sometimes, and even when the grief is more than formal, the motto that accompanies a set piece, harp, bell, cross, is grotesque, disturbing the solemnity.

Yet the custom of paying respect to the dead in this manner is a long established one. Sir Thomas Browne, discoursing on the sepulchral urns, found in Norfolk, could not conceive them "to have descended thus naked, or to have entered their graves without the old habit of flowers. The urn of Philopoemen was so laden with flowers and ribbons that it afforded no sight in itself. The rigid Lycurgus allowed olive and myrtle." And we know that in strewing their tombs the Romans affected the rose: that with the ancients the funeral pyre consisted of "sweet fuel, cypress, fir, larix, yew and trees perpetually verdant, lay silent expressions of their surviving hopes." But when the mourner in England carried a string of rosemary in the hand it was not symbolical or a tribute to the dead, but but as a remedy against any pestilential distemper.

Canon Barnett died recently in England. In a letter opened after his death he expressed a wish that flowers should not "spend themselves on my dead body but in giving joy and comfort to living people." His friends endeavoured to carry out this wish by suggesting in a letter signed by the Bishop of London and others that "all those who would have liked to send some floral tribute for Canon Barnett's funeral should give such assistance to this fund"—the Children's Country Holiday Fund—"as to eanble more children to go into the country to learn the lessons from the flowers." And the fund was thus benefitted to the extent of over £160, so that 320 more children will visit the country for two weeks this year than otherwise could have been sent.

Might not this serve as an example in our own cities? Could there be a more sympathetic, a more fragrant tribute to the dead?

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins:

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salt or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour and always after eating there was pain and fullness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter I am sure, proves it."

CARELESS MOTORISTS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—They say there is a law in this town against any motorist driving around street corners or over crossings without sounding the horn. The law may be on the statute book, but that law is violated every hour in the day. And if any person is killed, or crippled for life, then that motorist will swear himself clear; and if his evidence is believed, he is about the most careful and innocent motorist that ever injured anybody. And the infernal machine goes so swiftly and silently, like the pestilence that wasteth at noon day openly, that no one can get out of way. The motorist should sound his horn or be severely punished.

FOUR NELSON LETTERS NOT BEFORE PUBLISHED

The London Times published through the courtesy of Lord Spencer, four hitherto unprinted letters that Lord Nelson wrote in 1797 and 1798 to Countess Spencer, wife of the second Earl, who was then First Lord of the Admiralty. The letters were lately discovered at Althorp, and appear to be the sole extent of the remnant of voluminous correspondence, which the second Earl destroyed shortly before his death, to bear witness to the friendly relations between Nelson and Lady Spencer.

Nelson's first letter, dated September 23, 1797, which pays a graceful compliment and offers a present of a vanquished Spanish captain's sword, shows Nelson had already won a high place in the lady's esteem. The second and third letters, together with one of Lord St. Vincent's, which follows and elucidates them further, show the esteem soon to bear fruit. It is a family tradition that it was Lady Spencer who prevailed on her husband to recommend Nelson at this period for a high independent command in the Mediterranean. The letter of Lord St. Vincent seems to leave no doubt she applied the same sort of persuasion to Nelson's immediate Commander-in-Chief.

Nelson's fourth letter of date, Sept. 23, 1799, belongs to the period of Nelson's moral eclipse, when he made his legitimate concern for the safety of the two Sicilies and his loyalty for the Queen of Naples a cloak for his infatuation with Lady Hamilton and an excuse for his constant sojourning in the neighborhood of his two enchantresses. The letter apparently was written in reply to one wherein Lady Spencer gently hinted that Nelson was suffering in repute, and is a sort of apology for his conduct. It says: "John Bull and all the world may continue to keep an eye on my conduct, and may examine me in the field, in the cabinet, and in my closet, and I am vain enough to believe I shall be thought purer by the ordeal."

Nelson then pays a glowing tribute to the wisdom and goodness of the Queen of Naples and the beauty and accomplishments of Lady Hamilton. Referring to Lady Hamilton, he said: "She shows all who come near us that she thinks the scars on my carcass are more valuable and precious than the richest diadem that has adorned a Monarch. She holds my honor and that of our country so dear that she would give her heart's blood sooner than one or the other should be tarnished. This incomparable person is the wife of my much honored and old friend, Sir William Hamilton. I can say with truth that it would not have been in my power to render such essential services to their Sicilian Majesties but by the private intimacy of Sir William and Lady Hamilton with their Majesties and Sir John Acton. With these friends about me you will believe that Nelson will always be found where the honor and interest of Britain require his presence."

Nelson tarried about Naples and Palermo until finally Lord Spencer was fain to suggest in 1800 that his health did not permit him to be with the fleet and ought to return home. Soon after this Nelson ret'urned, making amazing progress across Europe in company with Sir William and Lady Hamilton.

PROTECT THE HOME

The Advisability of Caring For Unfortunate Mothers and Children

J. O. McCarthy, Toronto, in addressing the Canadian Club, Kingston, said in part:

"No mother left with her little family to support should have to leave them uncared for while she goes out to earn bread for them. The neglected child on the street soon becomes a delinquent. Let the childless mansion help care for the state's fatherless children. It would be a wise policy for the government to spend some of the money spent in getting emigrants from the world over in caring for the orphans who are generally speaking born of the best and will make the best citizens in the days to come.

"Wife desertion is nine times out of ten child desertion also. I wish I could find some place hot enough for the despicable wretch that deserts wife and children, and yet in this country the State must share the blame. Under the present law the family must be in want, paupers, before the deserter can be punished. The law should be changed and desertion made a criminal offence. Let the women of Canada make the law for the deserter; we men haven't much to be proud of in this connection.

"A dollar and costs or thirty days is not the sane or 20th century treatment for the inebriate. Protection and care rather than punishment should be the thought. The hospital is more needed than the cell. Every muscle, every tissue, every brain cell of the inebriate is sick. Instead of the cell put him on an industrial farm in the country where with work, food, sleep and God's fresh air and sunlight he will rebuild mentally and physically. You thus save dollars and you save a man to the community and to his family. Some glad day the State will stop creating inebriates and then treating them as criminals."

INTERESTING RELICS HAVE BEEN UNEARTHED

A Perfect Network of Tunnels and Many Rare Old Coins Found in a Montreal Excavation

Workmen engaged in tearing down an old convent found a perfect network of tunnels, secret passages and hidden chambers. All sorts of coins, medals, statues of the days of the Bourbons were recovered.

One of the relics found was a five franc piece, which left the Mint of France bright and shiny in the year 1732, when Louis XV. ruled in glory over France and Navarre. This coin finally came to Canada, and must have lain undisturbed for years, till a workman saw something shining among a mass of fallen stones, and picked it up. "Lud. XV., D.G. Fr. et Nav., Rex," is the inscription on one side. On the reverse are the words: "Sit nomen Domini benedictus, 1732." Another coin is of more recent date and bears the inscription, "Charles X., Roi de France, 1828, and still another contributes an interesting souvenir of the early days of the nineteenth century. It is a British-Canadian coin, commemorating the peace which followed the war of 1812. It is dated 1816, and bears the inscription, "Isaac Brock the hero of Upper Canada."

Hand-wrought nails and dried pieces of timber were also uncovered. However, it is the tunnels that aroused the greatest interest. Owing to the extraordinary number and the complete network of these subterranean passages it is estimated that to duplicate this work to-day would cost a figure running well into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. There was discovered a method of construction to render the top of the tunnels impervious to water which if applied to modern day construction of this nature would be of immeasurable value. In the old days, before cement existed the craftsmen and masons accomplished the desired end by placing over the stones forming the arch of the tunnels a layer of blue clay, with the result that the tunnels were rendered dry.

Another interesting feature of these structures is the clever use made of flat stones, which were evidently gathered along the long reaches of the St. Lawrence. Undoubtedly the structures were a part of the early defences of the settlement as it was customary then to supplement the efficiency of the fortifications by complicated subterranean passages and tunnels, into which a garrison could retreat in case it was rendered necessary. The removal of the old building reveals something of the early life of the little colony.

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS IN ARMENIA

In Armenia everybody has a good time at a wedding except the bridegroom. First of all, the friends gather, and an entertainment, with dancing, takes place. The bridegroom is expected to arrive after the entertainment is at its height, and it is considered good form for him to appear with his face covered with powder to stimulate pallor induced by the solemnity of the occasion.

The day after this opening marriage feast the bride rides to church and the bridegroom walks. The priest, who receives them in the porch, reads to them a short sermon on their duties in the matrimonial state, and then the wedding party proceeds to the altar, where the foreheads of the high contracting parties are bound together with gold chains.

The wedding festivities continue for at least three days after this and the couple are not regarded as really married until the ceremonies have all been concluded. The social celebration of the wedding is gone through with as conscientiously as the religious part.

Electric Ovens for Bakers

Electric ovens for bread baking are beginning to make their appearance in some of the large cities of Europe and the central electric stations are promoting their use. The Vienna electric plant is making arrangements with the bakers' syndicate to have electric ovens adopted widely throughout the city, and it offers to supply the current for this use at special reduced rates. As the bakers' ovens run all night this provides an outlet for current during the hours when the load is normally low. There will soon be a trial oven put in operation in order to test the method.

Advertising Frauds

At Glasgow Criminal Court, Thomas Moore Sms, a [illegible] man of [illegible], pleaded guilty to a charge of defrauding four persons. It was stated that the accused devised a scheme for obtaining the money by pretending that he carried on a bona fide business under the name of the Northern Advertising Company, and that he wanted young men for permanent outside positions. He advertised to that effect, stipulating that moderate security was required. He was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment.

SPORTING NEWS

RING.

New York, August 4.—Edgrin, the celebrated prize ring authority, says Batting Nelson was always insistent that his opponents should weigh not more than 133 pounds ringside. Down in Oklahoma Bat was billed to box six rounds with a little colored fighter who had a great local reputation as a knocker-out.

The darkey was a few pounds overweight. On the night of the fight his manager wrapped a piece of chewing gum around a nickel and craftily stuck the wad on the bottom of the weight used to balance the scale beam.

Bat didn't weigh. The negro did, without stirring the beam, and a few minutes later was seen scrambling over the fence in the rear of the theatre. There was no fight that night.

Next day the darkey's manager caught him and accused him of being a "quitter."

"Ah didn't quit!" exclaimed the smoke indignantly. "Honest, boss, Ah ain't afraid of Nelson. But Ah ain't goin' to fight him, an' Ah ain't never goin' to fight nobody else, no more. Yesterday mawnin' Ah weighed 141 pounds, as yo know, an' last night Ah weighed less'en 133. Boss, Ah's got gallopin' consumption."

CRICKET.

Buffalo, August 4. C. A. Worm, the Buffalo Cricket Club's international player, has been extended an invitation to represent this country against the famous Australian team, which is now touring this country. There are hundreds of first-class cricketers in New York city and the State, and only 11 can play.

The members of the Buffalo Cricket club are requested to meet at the Front to-day when two elevens will be picked for a practise game. On Saturday August 9, the Buffalo Club plays Jamestown at Jamestown. The Buffalo team were defeated there last year, and have a score to wipe out with the Worsted mill team.

TENNIS.

New York, Aug. 4.—A special Crescent club boat, it was decided to-day will be sent to meet the giant ship, "Imperator," to take off the coveted Davis international challenge cup and the team that lifted it from Great Britain in the tennis matches at Wimbledon recently.

Robert D. Wrenn, president of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, sent word to-day that he is bringing the famous cup with him and that Maurice E. McLoughlin, Harold H. Hackett, R. Norris Williams and Wallace F. Johnson are accompanying him.

McLoughlin will defend the National doubles title with T. C. Bundy as his partner on the Meadow Club Courts. The Davis cup team, immediately upon arrival here will start work for the challenge matches at Newport for the all-comers' title on August 18.

BASEBALL.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Instructions have been sent to American League umpires by President Ban Johnson covering the ruling on a pitcher dropping a ball while in the act of winding up.

In the National League when the pitcher lets the ball slip from his hands it is classed as a balk, and runners are allowed to advance a base. This ruling was made by President Lynch, of the old League, following an argument over play in a recent game at St. Louis. According to the literal translation of the rule it is a balk, but Johnston differs.

In the American league hereafter, when a pitcher lets the ball slip while he is on the slab, the ball will remain in play, and any runner trying to advance is liable to be thrown out. Formerly it was classed a balk by some umpires in Ban's league, while still others would not allow the runners to advance.

New York, Aug. 4.—"A California pipe dream caused by the "climate," was Manager Frank Chance's terse characterization to-day of a report from San Diego, California, that he will quit baseball for good and go back to his orange ranch at Glendora at the end of the present playing season.

"There's absolutely no truth in the report," said the peerless leader this afternoon. "You know the poppy is the state flower out there, and that may have something to do with it," added Chance.

AVIATION.

Every year since the Wright brothers in 1905 taught the world how to fly has had its prodigy and hero, and each man-bird seems more venturesors. All of them have been Frenchsome and amazing than his predecesmen, says an editorial in The Sun. America and England have produced aviators capable of feats that thrilled for the moment, but it is the Frenchmen who have been the human meteors of the sky, dazzling by the brilliance of their flights. They seem to have more imagination and daring; and their endurance has no metes and bounds. Bleriot, Bellenger, Paulhan, Vedrines, Legagneux and Garros are some of the immortals who have upheld the prestige of France, but a greater has come upon the scene in the person of the pilot with the streaming name, like a comet with a tail, Marcel Brindejonc des Moulinais, who has flamed in the sky of 1913 by flying 3000 miles, from Paris to St. Petersburg and back to Paris, with the assurance and non-chalance of youth that has no such word as failure in its lexicon.

M. des Moulinais is not of age yet, a beardless boy with a d'Artagnan nose and an eye that might have belonged to Aramis. He drives an 80 horsepower monoplane through the uncharted air with as much coolness and precision as Burman or De Palma steers a bounding automobile in the road race, seeing no danger, and exulting in the performance. When the United States went to war with Spain which does not seem very long ago, Des Moulinais was a little shaver in skirts; he was born at Plerin on February 8, 1893. At 17 he mastered the Demoiselle, the butterfly of aeroplanes, which flitted rather than flew about and looked no safer than a scallop shell in the surges of the Atlantic.

VALUE OF CREOSOTING

Treated Railway Ties Last Much Longer—Creosote Mostly Imported

One million four hundred thousand gallons of creosote could have been produced in Western Canada last year if the coal that was converted into coke had been coked in by-product ovens. With the exception of the creosote produced from the by-product ovens at Sydney, N.S., and at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., no creosote is produced in Canada. This valuable wood preservative is imported from Britain and the United States, but the high cost of the imported article has restricted its use very materially. In view of the steady and even rapid rise in the price of almost all classes of wood products, the importance of creosote is readily seen. For example there is the problem confronting Canadian railways in obtaining timber for cross ties. There were 13,683,770 ties purchased in Canada last year, an increase of 48.5 per cent. over the figure for the previous year. When it is considered that the annual replacement of ties on existing lines amounted to about 10,000,000, it is evident what enormous quantities of tie material are required in order to supply the demand. This demand will not remain stationary, but, on account of the increased mileage of railways being constructed in Canada will increase each year. Owing to the other demands for lumber and wood products, the price of cross-ties has been steadily increasing. The cost of tie maintenance is now a large item of expense and the higher prices of the better grades of wood have forced the railway companies to use inferior woods. In order that the lower grades of wood may be economically used for ties it will be necessary to creosote those species that fall through decay, writes W. J. D in Conservation. In order, also to utilize ties of the softwoods, it is necessary to use tie-plates. When it is remembered that the average life of an untreated tie is seven years while the life of a treated tie is seventeen years, the importance and value of creosote is readily seen.

Husband's Presence of Mind.

Judge M. L. McKinley was talking about presence of mind at the State's Attorneys' association banquet.

"Two West siders," he said, "were riding on a street car with their wives one day when there was an accident. None of the party was hurt. A few days later one of the men learned that the other had just settled with the street railway company for $1,500 for injuries to his wife. He went around to see him.

"'When was your wife hurt?' he asked.

"That day we were in the street car accident together,' was the reply.

"'Why, she wasn't hurt. She wasn't even scratched. I saw her walk home with you.'

"'I know,' replied the other, 'but when I got her home I had the presence of mind to put my foot in her face.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Dress Hints

When cutting a pattern from goods that pull, such as crepe de chine, crepe charmeuse, mousseline, chiffon, baste the material to newspaper or tissue paper and cut out by pattern through paper and material.

If you have not wire collar supporters with covered ends, work buttonhole stitches over them with coarse cotton. This protection saves the lace of a collar and prevents the unsightly extension of wire over the edge.

NEWFOUNDLAND ISLE SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE

Story of the Settlement of the "Isle of the Sea"—Population 300,000

There is at least one case in which distance does not lend enchantment to the scene. The traveller on an Atlantic liner, crossing the dreaded fogged Banks of Newfoundland would never imagine that the bare, bald headlands which he sees when rounding Cape Race—that graveyard of the Atlantic—to be anything but the fringes of a country as bare and bald as the rocks themselves. He has to visit this "Terra Nova" and then his will join the many voices already raised in proclaiming it "The Sportsman's Paradise" and a typical "Isle of the Sea." The discovery of Newfoundland dates from 1497, when John Cabot, of Bristol, Eng., in the little ship "Matthew" of barely twenty tons burden made landing at what is now Cape Bonavista. It was not until 1583 that the island was formally taken possession of by Great Britain and attempts at settlement made. Following its discovery its shores were frequented by sailors from all the European countries. They came out to prosecute what is still the greatest natural asset of the country, cod fishery. For many years the island was a bone of contention between the powers, especially England and France and it was only in 1713, by the Treaty of Utrecht, that the French renounced their rights of possession. They still claimed exclusive rights to fish on the North and West coasts and for nearly two hundred years there were frequent controversies between the two nations until the matter was finally adjusted at the Hague conference of 1904. France then withdrawing all claims in return for certain concessions on the West coast of Africa. The island is some 317 miles long by 316 broad, with an area of 42,000 square miles, that is, about half as large again as Ireland. The many inlets and harbors on its coast cause it to have a comparatively great length of coast line. Situated at the mouth of the St. Lawrence, its strategic position is ideal. The power possessing it is in the best possible position to defend or attack the Eastern coasts of the Dominion. Amongst the islands of the world, Newfoundland ranks tenth in size. The total population is some 300,000 of which 50,000 live in the capital, St. John's, the remainder being scattered along the coasts in numbers varying from a good sized town to the smallest hamlet. Nearly one-third of the interior is taken up by waterways. Newfoundland's natural riches consist chiefly in her fisheries—cod, seal, whale and salmon, in order of importance. Four times the amount of fish caught in the Dominion of Canada, nor twice that taken in the Norwegian waters does not come up to a season's catch in Newfoundland; and the supply shows no signs of falling off.

FLYING MEN URGED TO BEQUEATH CORPSES

For Experiments That Will Provide Life-Saving Devices for Aviators—Justified by Death-Roll

The gruesome suggestion is put forward by one of the leading British authorities on aeronautics that aviators should make arrangements during their lifetime so that their mangled remains, after an accident, may be experimented upon with a view to preventing the recurrence of other similar tragedies. The idea would be almost ludicrous if it were not justified by the appalling death-roll which has marked aviation in Europe, and especially in Great Britain.

The proposer of this plan points out that science is to-day almost entirely ignorant of the effects of shock upon the human frame. He emphasizes the vital necessity of knowing what force of blow will cause the breakage of "the bone box which constitutes the human skull; what force acting in what direction is liable to disjoint the linked parts of the neck and the spinal cord, and what resistance to bending before fracture is offered by the thigh and arm." These facts can only be properly ascertained by "reverent and skilful" experiments conducted on the mortal remains of those whose lack of proper mechanical precautions brings them to sudden death. It is the absence of any such experiments and data that makes the devices such as helmets, belts, etc., now being employed by aviators so ineffective and crude.

"The helmet which takes the highly localized blow and spreads it over a larger area of the head, thereby diminishing the intensity of the blow," writes this authority, "is a crude beginning." The elastic belt, which protects the flyer from being hurled out of the aeroplane, and keeps him within the centre of a friable structure, provides that this structure in breaking absorbs much of the work of the fall and spares him much of the shock.

There exists an invaluable defence against damage—too little used in aeroplaning, though well known to the balloonist—the basket-work cage. Such a stiff, yet elastic cage, installed round, and forming the seat of the flyer, and so extended as to shelter his legs and the major part of his person, would, according to the opinion of every balloonist of experience, form a marvelous protection not only against penetration by splinters of struts or spars, but against the general blow of an otherwise fatal alighting. It will do this in virtue of its ability to distort while absorbing work and without splintering or breaking. It is known that the basket work seat is used to this end in the Royal Aeronautic Force aeroplanes, but not nearly enough.

Bladder
and Kidney Troubles

Are caused by poisoning impurities which clog the Kidneys; intense pain is the result and sleepless nights follow. The patient becomes annoyed with sharp pains shooting through the back and up the spine. These pains often so violent and acute that the victim suffers the greatest agony and is driven almost to despair. The refuse and sediment which settled in the Kidneys must be removed in order to procure relief.

SANOL, the Kidney Cure, is the only reliable remedy which has a combined effect of acting on the kidneys, and restoring them to their natural condition, and removing Kidney, Bladder and Gall Stones by dissolving same. It cleanses and purifies the system, strengthens and invigorates the Kidneys, and encourages proper filtration. It relieves the pain and gives strength and energy to the body. Price $1.50 per bottle.

Amazing Gain in

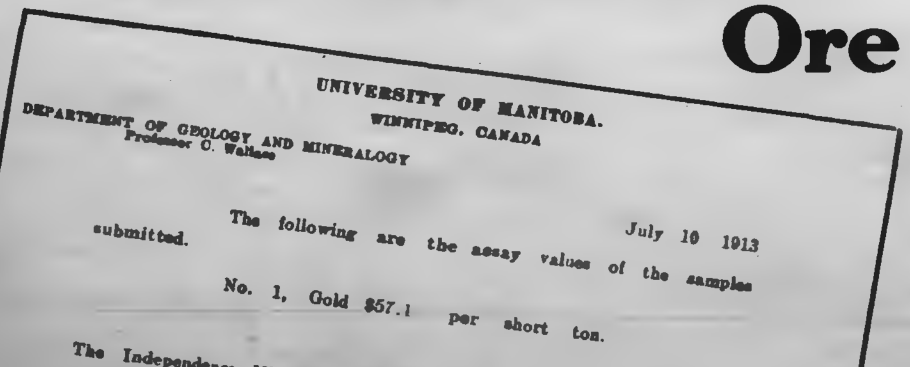
Ore



UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA.
WINNIPEG, CANADA
DEPARTMENT OF GEOLOGY AND MINERALOGY
Professor C. Wallace

July 10 1913

The following are the assay values of the samples submitted.

No. 1, Gold $57.1 per short ton.

The Independence Mining and Development Co.

ROBT. C. WALLACE.

Value Steadily
Increasing as Shaft Descends
Directors Decide to Construct a Stamp Mill This Fall

When "The Independence" Mine shaft reached the sixty-five foot level, a cutting was taken clear across the vein and the value of this ore is shown on the report assay reproduced above.

This is more than double the average value obtained at the shallower levels and proves conclusively that the vein of gold in this mine is becoming steadily richer as the shaft descends.

The prospects of this mine are now so bright that the Directors have decided to put in a small two-stamp mill this fall, and mill the high-grade ore now being mined. A two-stamped mill will handle from seven to eight tons per day at the cost of mining and milling of $4.00 per ton or a total overhead cost of about $6.00 per ton.

Working ore on the grade of the present sample, the mine will therefore produce at from the rate of $375 to $425 per day, which will more than pay the cost of all further development on this one claim.

Until further notice we continue to offer from the allotment of 100,000 treasury stock, offered to cover cost of development work, shares Par Value $1.00 at 40c.

THE SPEED OF LIGHT

Sixteen Minutes to Travel Two Hundred Million Miles

Light travels at the astonishing rate of 186,000 miles a second. To the layman this seems incredible and his first question is how do they go about it to measure light.

There is a delicate instrument used in measuring light which throws a beam of light upon a revolving disk. There was some doubt about the figures obtained in this way until it was found that when the earth was in the part of its orbit nearest Jupiter the eclipses occurred 16 minutes earlier than when it was in the farthermost part, whereas by all rules of astronomy they should have occurred at the same minute each time.

It was deduced from this that the light was not instantaneous, and consequently took 16 minutes to traverse the diameter of the earth's orbit, a distance of about 200,000,000 miles, thus giving to light a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, which was accurately shown later by other experiments.

Some Typical Families Who Have Come to This Country

A London exchange gives the following typical cases of families who have gone to Canada:

Married couple with two children. The man, strong and healthy, thirty-five years old, has been a farmer in Derbyshire.

Doctor and son. Both are going out to farm and practice as well. The son is a surgeon. Explanation: "Can't stand the Insurance Act."

Married couple with ten children (Oxfordshire). The husband was a dairyman and farmer, and has a capital of $2,000. Is leaving England because he "can't make both ends meet."

Man and wife and four children (Somerset). He is a saddler. His employer is now out of the business. There is no work for him here, so he has saved up his passage money. "It's the children I am thinking of," he says, "there is no future for the next generation here."

"The best people seem to be leaving," said a representative of the Victorian Emigration Department.

Among those for whom we have booked passages are:—

Farmer settlers (capital of $500 to $5,000).

Farm workers.

Artisans.

Workers in the building and iron trades.

Domestic servants.

Cabinet makers.

"A striking feature is the number of business men who are emigrating; they say that they find competition too keen. Two middle-men in the coal business booked their passages."

CANADA THE PLACE

Lecturer Advises Young Londoners To Come to This Country

Mr. Thomas Sedgwick who is responsible for the emigration of young people within the Empire addressed two thousand young Britons in South London recently. They plied him with questions as he held out to them the prospect of an open-air life, a thousand times more profitable and more fascinating than an existence spent in the poorer suburbs of London. The lecturer, drawing on his experiences in New Zealand, made the vast gulf between life in London and in the overseas territories more vividly apparent by displaying on a screen typical pictures of the slums, in which many of them spend their lives, and following them with slides showing first the vast untenanted areas of Canada, and then the preparation for farm life, draining, dairying, fruit, crops, and cattle farming, ploughing, and harvesting. He was frequently loudly applauded, particularly for the statement that it had been proved up to the hilt that town lads make the best farm labourers, settlers, and colonists.

Window Washing

Windows must be washed and there is nothing quite so chilling as the water that runs down from the window brush when the outside of the panes is being washed in the winter. Let the window washer secure a disk of leather cut from the sole of an old shoe, or a piece of rubber from a tire casing, or anything that is stiff enough to stand out from the broom handle. Make a hole in disk that will permit it to fit tightly around the broom handle and slide it up to a point about 10 or 12 inches from the brush. This will deflect the water and keep the remainder of the handle dry.

Mean Thing.

They (of course were girls) were talking (of course, in the nicest manner possible) about a third girl—a mutual friend.

"Yes," remarked one of them, "she quarreled with Jack, and returned all his presents."

"Oh, really? And I suppose he very naturally returned hers?"

"Every one of them," replied the other. "Why, he even went so far as to send her half a dozen boxes of face powder, with a note explaining that since he first met her he must have taken that much home on his coat."—London Opinion.

That Boy Again.

"Why, your hair is black, Mrs. Wopson."

"Of course it is, Johnny. Did you think it was some other color?"

"Yessum, 'cause I heard my father tell my mother that when Mr. Wopson stayed out late you got red-headed."

Biggest of all Game

The whale is becoming scarcer and scarcer every year. Unless man desists in hunting these marine monsters they will soon be nothing but a dim memory. Of all whales the sperm variety is the most important. It is this type that carries the valuable sperm oil and the spermaceti wax that makes such fine candles. The sperm whales live together in schools, sometimes a hundred strong, and are led by mammoth bull whales sixty feet in length. These huge creatures have terrible fights, combats of amazing fury that invariably ends in the death of one or the other of the combatants.

Threading a Needle.

A strong magnifying glass to be fastened to a thumb with a clip has been patented in England to help a person thread a needle.

Old Oxford Tradition

A striking innovation marked the admission of Dr. Heberden as Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University, for he departed from the tradition of many centuries by reading his address in English instead of in Latin.

He also announced that a letter had been received from the Board of Agriculture stating that the Treasury would be prepared to authorise an annual grant not exceeding $1,250 in aid of the instruction of forestry in the University.

Where Work is Plentiful

In a statement issued by the Greenock Council it was said that work in the town has been so plentiful during the past year or so that every man, had he wished it, could have had two jobs. There is, it was said, more electricity sold in Greenock per head of the population than in any other town in the kingdom.

Removing Mud Stains

Mud stains will disappear from a rain coat if rubbed with the juice of a freshly cut potato.

Alcohol Manufacturers

The congress of Uruguay is planning to make the manufacture of alcohol a government monopoly.

Using Waste Steam

An Ohio manufacturing plant converts the waste steam from its drop forges into electrical power.

Powerful Warships

New German warships will be equipped with 15-inch guns throwing projectiles weighing 1,650 pounds.

Simple Haging Basket

A simple but very pretty hanging basket of greenery can be made from the top of a carrot, which will go on growing if kept moist. All you need to do is to cut the top fairly closely, and scoop it out a little, just enough to hold water, when hung upside down. It should sprout in all directions, and be quite a mass of feathery green with very little care and attention.

Taught Half a Century

Mr. S. A. Gardner of Belleville retired from the teaching profession after over half a century's service without a break. He began to teach in January, 1861, at West Huntingdon. Later he taught at Madoc and Sidney. In September, 1878 he moved to Belleville and for the past 32 years was principal of Queen Victoria School in that city.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

AUGUST 25th—From Toronto and North Western Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points.

SEPTEMBER 3rd—From Toronto and all stations in Ontario East of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay.

SEPTEMBER 5th—From all stations on Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay inclusive and west thereof in Ontario including C.P.R. Line Sudbury to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, but not including Azilda and west.

Apple Bread Pudding

Butter five slices of bread, spread with apple sauce. Put these in a pie dish. Make custard of two eggs and one-quarter cup of sugar well beaten together. Add a cup and a half of milk. Turn over bread and dot the top with bits of butter and bake forty minutes. Serve with mock whipped cream.

Mocked Whipped Cream

Peel and grate one large sour apple, mix at once with one cup of powdered sugar and the white of one egg. Beat all together until thick. Add half a teaspoon of vanilla. Just try it.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath
and Dean Hoard

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rosiny offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

Napoleon acknowledged this fact. "Then you think the powers would not hesitate to undo all I have done, that they would gladly take up arms again, and wage battle in God's beautiful, clear air?"

"I certainly do!" was Herr Kalmar's emphatic answer.

"That makes it all the more imperative that I carry out the pactum to the letter. I never could answer to history, if I were to break my oath." He sighed. "If war is carried into the air, if anyone should discover the secret of cirynith and the aerodromone, I will find the means to confound them." His face expressed grim determination and Herr Kalmar respected him as a man more than a king, a man of his word.

The chancellor received Napoleon very cordially.

Napoleon stated his errand, briefly. He told the count that he was anxious to gain control of the property in Hungary that had belonged to the Schomburg Lithow estates.

The count was somewhat taken aback by this direct statement. He said, in his suavest manner:

"May I ask what causes your anxiety in regard to that property? To be perfectly frank, I sent my best analysts there to assay that peak, hoping to find the name of the mineral that interests you, but they do not find anything extraordinary. One of them mentions a peculiar quartz formation there that somewhat resembles the mineral used in manufacturing glass, but that is all they could find."

"They are right, count. I want these crystals."

"I shall do my best for you, but you know how imperfect our laws are in regard to estates that fall to the crown."

"Can you not make an exception in this case?"

The count shook his head doubtfully.

"His majesty is the only one who could, and I am sorry to say that your honor does not happen to have his sympathy."

"Of course not; he thinks I have clipped his wings!" This remark slipped out unexpectedly.

He took leave of the count and looked up Herr Kalmar once more and told him many things that showed the big German he was in Napoleon's confidence.

Shortly after this he left for England, and from there for New York.

Count von Werdenstein did not know the true value of these crystals, but he was shrewd enough to surmise that they were connected with Napoleon's aerodromones, those wonderful birds that vomited lightning. Would they ever be his? "Everything comes to the man who waits," he thought, and made ready to report the result of his work to his majesty.

As he was leaving the room, an attendant ushered in a bright-eyed little man, without announcement. The officer explained that he came from the Countess Rosiny and the chancellor's brow cleared.

The attendant was dismissed and the count motioned to a chair and asked the messenger to sit down. Instead of complying, the young man took a package from his inside vest pocket and handed it to the count. He saw the handwriting of the countess. He carefully opened the sealed envelope and sitting down before his desk he began to read:

"Sir: The plans you outlined for my conduct before I went to Helgoland have begun to develop. I will, shortly, know a few very important things in regard to the 'aerodromone', with one of which you, yourself, have had some experience.

"What do you think of them? What would you think of being able to manufacture them, to fly on them the red, white and black flag, instead of the stars and stripes?

"You may fill out the papers that make the Countess Rosiny the Princess of Schomburg Lithow, and I wish you would have the estates in Germany and other countries transferred to me at once, as I want to take possession, particularly of the estate in Hungary, in the near future.

"Plans should be made to defend my undertaking, plans that will include the manufacture of a flotilla of aerodromones. I hardly think the president of the international peace committee will interrupt us, but our greatest strength will lie in being ready for any emergency.

"The time of action is almost here, but it is impossible for me to state the exact date just now. Under no circumstances can I tell the outcome until the papers of possession are in the hands of my legal advisers, Herren Konrad and Hans Schwab of Berlin. Upon their assurance that the title and deeds are in perfect condition, your excellency will hear from me further. With the best personal regards, I am, as ever,

"Your obedient servant,
"Countess Rositta Rosiny."

The chancellor's feelings, after he had carefully read this letter were a mingling of satisfaction and distrust. He realized that the countess had cleverly taken command, and, notwithstanding her seeming servility, she was the one to dictate and the chancellor the one to obey. He glanced up at the little man who had brought the letter. He was standing stolidly waiting.

"Is there an answer?" he asked in English.

"Will you see the countess personally?" asked the chancellor.

"Who?" he asked stupidly.

"Oh, never mind," answered the chancellor, knowing the man knew nothing whatever about the message. "Who will come after the answer, if there is one?"

"A bird man."

"A bird man?" The count did not know whether the man was really simple or not. "Where do you live?"

"In America."

"H'm; that is a broad answer. Yes, there will be a message."

He sat down and wrote:

"My Dear Countess: I am glad to hear from you. Your wishes will be fulfilled to the letter. I will do my best to prepare things for your reception. Your legal advisers will receive the necessary papers in due course.

"With best wishes and hoping to hear from you soon, I am,
"Von Werdenstein."

He sealed the letter, then gave it to the man, who left the room.

The chancellor pondered deeply over the situation, then started for the royal palace to report Napoleon's visit and Rositta's promises to his majesty.

When Napoleon arrived home he had a long conference with Astra. They were both somewhat depressed. His disappointment in not securing the Peak Suemeg was great, because he had many inventions that required the use of cirynith, and he knew that the count's actions were a menace to the peace movement.

They decided that they would marry in the month of July. That evening they went to Ciryne to tell their determination to Mrs. Edison.

Napoleon and Astra spent another day on Ciryne. This time Napoleon conducted the three women through the wonderful plant where cirynith was refined and manufactured into parts of aerodromones and other useful articles.

Rositta kept her ears and eyes wide open, but not being trained along mechanical lines she could not understand many of the things she saw. Still she was glad that Napoleon honored her with his confidence as from now on there would be no objection to her visiting the shops whenever she pleased.

Napoleon took Astra back to Washington late in the afternoon. Mrs. Edison and Rositta walked down to the sandy shore and sat listening to the waves. The mother was dreaming of the happy future for her son. The other was weaving fine threads of the net she was tangling about her friends.

Santos was away, but he was expected back soon. She disliked to see him leave her side, as she feared to lose the control that she had gained over him.

He returned that evening. When Mrs. Edison retired the countess stole out of the house and strolled toward the shore, where she knew Santos would be awaiting her. Santos was the happiest of men when she greeted him with passionate embraces and kisses.

He was like a faithful, obedient dog. Whatever Rositta asked he did without question. Tonight he handed her the count's letter, that came in answer to the one he had sent for her.

Rositta opened it, and he held his pocket flashlight so she could read.

"My little blond boy, the time is nearing when my name will be changed to Duprel. What do you think of that? Mrs. Duprel? Doesn't that sound good to you?"

Santos' only answer was kisses; he had begun to master the so-called lost art very quickly.

"Do you know how I have missed you? Mr. Edison and Astra were here, but since I know you I can't enjoy them any more. I know it is not right to feel that way, as Napoleon has been very good to me, but my sympathy is with you, dear." Her arm slipped around his neck. "I cannot hear him criticise you."

"Criticise me? Is he dissatisfied with me?" The words were heavy with dismay. Rositta knew that she had touched the right strings. "Who told you that?"

"Don't take it seriously, Santos. I have tried to keep it to myself, but I—I could not."

"Did he say that I had not served him well? Did he say that?"

"He did," whispered Rositta.

Santos breathed fire and flame. Rositta subtly convinced Santos that he was the man, and not Napoleon Edison, whose name should be the revered one in American history. When arguments were weak, kisses strengthened them, until poor Santos was molded into a form that suited Rositta. Then she said:

"I own the cirynith deposits in Hungary. I never will give them to Napoleon. I want you to be his master. Will you come with me?"

"I am with you and yours forever!" The tone in which this was said was enough for Rositta. She knew she had won.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Fifteenth of July.

July 15, the marriage day of Astra and Napoleon, had been declared a continental holiday.

From near and far came congratulations. They had not planned a gorgeous ceremony, but they could not stop the expressions of love that came from the loyal citizens. The whole capital was alive with color, and the messages that came and the sincere joy of all, made the day one to be remembered for years to come.

Astra had missed Rositta very much. She had been unable to attend the wedding, as she had been ill on the Island of Ciryne for the last few weeks.

When Napoleon heard that the countess was unable to attend their wedding on account of her indisposition, he thoughtfully shook his head. It seemed incredible that Rositta, who was so full of vitality and energy, should be ill. He only said: "Every illness has a remedy."

He did not give the matter further thought. He spent the last day before his marriage in his aerodromone, the American Eagle. Where he was, or what he did, no one seemed to know, and he did not volunteer the information.

After their wedding luncheon Astra returned to her presidential office, as there were things that she wanted to attend to personally. Especially the criminal case of Nikolay Mourak. The Criminal Court of the continent had decreed capital punishment for attempted assassination of the President of the United Republics of America.

Astra read the document carefully, and instead of signing it, she wrote:

"Pardoned, and shall be instantly released."

(Signed)

"ASTRA PRUDENT EDISON."

She dispatched the pardon by a special messenger, and then took up other matters.

At seven o'clock she was at the Crystal Palace, to dress for the banquet of the Continental Commercial and Industrial Association, one of the most powerful societies organized to promote the welfare of business people.

She and Napoleon drove to the new Capital Hotel in an open car. The banquet was arranged for 4,000 guests and the whole upper floor was thrown open for the purpose.

At eleven o'clock the presidential party left and threaded its way toward the Crystal Palace. At the Palace Judge Scanlan of the Continental Court awaited them. His mission was to deliver a heavy looking letter to the President.

"Your excellency will pardon me for taking this liberty, but Mr. Mourak, the prisoner you so kindly pardoned, insisted that this letter is important, and would not leave the prison until I promised him that I would deliver it personally."

Astra took the letter and thanked him for its safe delivery, then dismissed him with a few kind words. Napoleon escorted his mother to her rooms, then returned to the library, where Astra awaited him. Her candid, beautiful face was pale and tears glistened in her eyes. Her whole being expressed sorrow.

"What is it, dear?" asked her husband, sympathetically.

Instead of replying, she handed him a letter. He recognized the fine handwriting of the Countess Rosiny. It read:

"My dear Friends and Protectors:

"I am writing this to you both, as I know you will be married when you receive it. I know you will receive all kinds of presents, surprises and congratulations, as you are both the beloved of your followers. But in order to give more value to the kind wishes, I have decided to tell you the truth, the unvarnished, cruel truth.

"I wonder if it will surprise you to find that I am, and have been in the service of Count von Werdenstein. You have been the kindest of hosts, indeed, so good that you made my task really despicable but much easier.

"Don't take this very seriously. Life is made up of an equal portion of bad and good, and the end is always the same. Death gathers us all in, and puts in our places others who may find pleasure in destroying all that we have created. You both dream of world peace—I wish I could create peace in my own heart!

"I admire you both, especially Napoleon, and for that reason, I hate you both, being unable to love you, as there are no middle streams in my nature.

"There is no use of my telling you what I intend to do; you will know it soon enough, and you both will be sorry that you ever met the unhappy person whose name was, once, Rositta Rosiny.

"And now, I wish you all happiness, until we meet again.

"ROSITTA,
"Princess of Schomburg Lithow."

Napoleon quietly folded the letter and handed it back to Astra. He did not seem disturbed at all. He picked up the envelope and saw the New York postmark.

"It is clear. The countess has the secret of cirynith and, very likely, of the aerodromone."

"But how did she get it?"

"That remains to be seen. Werdenstein evidently thinks that everything is fair in love or war."

"Will you read me that other letter, the one the judge brought?" asked Astra.

"Of course, dear. This is Mourak's communication. I wonder what he has to say." He opened the heavy envelope and a number of sheets fell to the table.

"To the President of the United Republics of America:

"Since that unhappy event, in which, I was selected by Fate as the instrument of Death, I have had many hours to think clearly and to learn from my inner self that it is the rule of Love, and not the rule of Force that should rule the world. I have set down the following facts, so that your ladyship shall know all the motive powers that may govern human actions.

"The Power, of Course, is Electricity."

"The fact that my bullet went astray is due, not so much to the quickness of the great humanitarian and American patriot, Napoleon Edison, as to the fact that I beheld the Countess Rosiny in your company. A moment of hesitation is enough to frustrate plans. Her influence naturally, unintentionally saved your life, as my hand and eye are always true. I am happy that things turned out as they did.

"Before I explain why the countess' presence saved you (she has done, however, involuntarily, at least one good act in her life), I want to tell you that my name is not Mourak, and I am not a Russian.

"My name is Aetsel von Rothenberg, and some years ago I wore the uniform of the famous Red Hussars.

"Years ago, when on a vacation trip, I traveled through Italy; at that time I could enjoy the great marvels of Nature. I was young and noble-thinking—and free. On the shore of the Lago di Maggiore I found destruction.

"I was tramping through the country with a sketching outfit and let people think me an artist. In a secluded and beautiful spot, from where I had an uninterrupted view of the snow-covered peaks of the Alps, and a wide vista of surroundings pine-covered land, I struck my easel and began work. A girl emerged from the only path and walked toward me. I say a girl, but I ought to say a vision. She was the most bewitching creature I had ever seen.

"She came to me fearlessly and greeted me in a friendly way; I sketched her in my picture. Inside of an hour my fate was sealed, as I had fallen in love with her.

"One day near the end of my vacation, I received an invitation to visit the castle of the Rosinys. There I found her. She was married and had a beautiful little girl about three years old. She told me that she loved me, that her husband was cruel to her, and I believed everything. We eloped—and she made me a traitor inside of a few weeks. I was entrusted with important secrets and I entrusted them to her. I loved her so!

"Both the Count Rosiny and the countess were members of the German secret service. They needed means to keep up their title and did not hesitate to become spies. Besides, she said it was her greatest pleasure to participate in intrigue and the excitement of this profession.

"A few years later, a complete moral wreck, I broke away from her, and went to Russia. There I became a tool of that infamous, gruesome society that works in the dark against all that is good. It was my fate to be selected to do the ugliest crime of my life. I thank God I was prevented from succeeding.

"I am trying to right the wrong I intended to do you. I know my punishment can only be death. I expect it. I long for it, and these, my last words, are sacred.

"I have not seen her for years and her unexpected appearance on the scene diverted my mind—for a moment I wanted to kill her.

"This is my story, your ladyship, and since I have breathed American air, even though it came through prison windows, I begin to understand the greatness of the ideals you are serving, and I beg you not to condemn me in your thoughts. The knowledge that your noble mind pardons the unhappy tool of a wrong idea, will ease my last hour.

"AETSEL VON ROTHENBERG."

There the long letter ended, but another sheet was waiting to be read:

"Your ladyship: My former communication was written before I received the news that I am pardoned.

"Life is precious, and while I was ready to give it up, I accept your kind act that was inspired by the goodness of your heart, jubilantly. You gave me life and liberty and will you now accept my true and faithful services so long as I live?

"If I could tell you how I feel toward your ladyship, you would not hesitate to rely upon me.

"God shall give all his blessings upon you and yours.

"I will be at the Columbian Hotel awaiting your decision.

"Your grateful servant,
"AETSEL VON ROTHENBERG."

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

NO DRUGS TO TAKE — YOU SIMPLY BREATHE A HEALING BALSAMIC VAPOR

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible man nowadays breathes the soothing vapors of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Dacoss did, and writing from his office at 57 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened—my voice improved—and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit — lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Local coal dealers have announced that coal, with the exception of pea coal, is 10 cents dearer this month. That makes nut coal, $8.30; stove coal, $8.05; egg coal, $7.80, and pea coal, $7.00.

Belleville Man Committed

John Hunter Mariner, of Belleville, charged with wounding and intent to disable his daughter, Mrs. Alice Storms, on Monday night July 28th, about eleven o'clock, was committed by Magistrate Masson for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction.

Many Campers

Crawford's Grove and vicinity is teeming with campers these days, some of whom have been there since early in June with their families. They wheel up to their business, or take the street cars. Quite a number have camped on the east side of the river, crossing over in boats going and returning.

Steamers Inspected

Mr. Thos. Thompson, government steamboat inspector, has been here inspecting the local steamboats. The steamers Esturion, Manita and Stoney Lake Navigation Company's boats all passed in good shape, so far as their machinery is concerned. Mr. Thompson left for Rice Lake yesterday where boats on the lower waters will be inspected.

Local Lady's Success.

Miss Edna Cassidy, Reid street, who recently passed her Civil Service examinations, has been selected for appointment to the Chief Architect's branch of the Department of Public Works. Much credit is due Miss Cassidy, and also the teaching staff of the Collegiate Institute from which school Miss Cassidy is a graduate. She left for Ottawa yesterday.

Dredging New Channel

The government dredge, Auburn, is busily at work dredging the new channel opposite Jubilee Point, at the entrance to the Otonabee river into Rice Lake. The work is being done by the engineering department of the Trent Canal, under the immediate supervision of Mr. Cameron, one of the engineers. The dredge will work up the river, deepening and widening the channel all the way up.

Younger Shearer Guilty.

Joseph Shearer, aged 20, and Edward Shearer, 17 years old, who were committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble, on a charge of breaking into Mr. B. Manley's store in North Monaghan, came before His Honor Judge Huycke in County Court yesterday morning. Edward, the younger of the two pleaded guilty to the charge. His brother Joseph, not guilty, and will come up for trial to-morrow afternoon.

Houses at a Premium

For some time there has been a house famine in Peterborough, people being obliged, in many cases, to live in almost any old shack or unfinished dwelling. There are also many families ready to join their husbands here, the former having accepted positions in the local industries. This they cannot do until houses are secured. What Peterborough needs just now is houses that will rent for from $10 to $15 per month.

Summer Resorts Full

The cottages up the lakes are full at present, as well as the summer hotels and boarding houses at various points. Stoney Lake as usual is the head centre for tourists, many new ones coming in every season. The fishing this season has been unusually good, and some good catches are reported. Mr. James R. Maud and party, while sojourning at Buckhorn had unusual good luck, landing several fine maskinonge, one of which tipped the scales at 22 pounds.

Bush Fires Raging.

A private letter received from the North by a member of the Times staff says that bush fires are raging in several places in Haliburton County as well as in the Northern portion of Peterborough County. In the Township of Digby the damage to standing pine may be very great. The fires, which threatened the Peterborough Lumber Company's limits last week, are reported to be under control and dying out.

Did Not Turn Off the Taps.

A noise of running water, at the home of Mr. Duncan Walker, 206 Aylmer street, attracted the attention of the caretaker. He forced an entrance and found that in the absence of the family, who are out of town, the bath room taps which had been left open, were letting water escape. He found several inches of water on the bath room floor, and the water had leaked through into the rooms below, making considerable damage.

A Narrow Escape.

A young man named John Wood, accompanied by a young lady, while out in a canoe last night on the Little Lake, met with an accident that nearly cost them their lives. They attempted to change places in the boat while near the Ashburnham wharf, when the canoe upset. Wood was not a very good swimmer, but managed to get the girl and hold her head above water until she caught the upturned boat. He then managed to push her ashore, both being greatly exhausted when they reached terra firma.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The following are among the guests registered at the Oriental for the Florists' Convention: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hart, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. W. King, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Smith, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Eddy, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ewing, Woodstock; B. Bickly Woodstock; E. J. Mepsted, L. Williamson, B. Everest, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. M. Wolff, Montreal; J. Connor, Montreal; Wm. Coulter, Montreal; A. McGregor, Toronto; C. C. Trover, Moncton; W. Findley and Wife, Brampton, and H. Mitchell, of Port Hope.

Judgment in Bachelor Case

At yesterday's police court, Magistrate Rush and Adams were present to give judgment in the case of a charge of theft of stove fittings and electric lamps brought Tuesday against a young Englishman named Bachelor, by Mrs. Rowe. Mr. Gordon for the prosecution and Mr. Corkery for the defence, were present. As Mr. Bachelor had not as yet returned the articles which he claimed to have taken in mistake, the case was enlarged until 4 o'clock.

Decision in this case was reserved until the morning.

A Big Shipment of Silver

Mr. Isaac Eastwood of this city returned yesterday from a business trip to Marmora. Whilst there he saw on the platform a pile of brightly colored bricks, but each longer than the ordinary brick. He went to a man in charge and asked "What are those bricks. Lead?" "Try and lift one of them," replied the man. Mr. Eastwood tried but the brick still stuck. They were bricks of solid silver, sent from Cobalt to the Marmora refinery. There were 86 bricks each weighing 184 pounds. You can compute their value at the price of 50 cents per ounce.

Local Florist's Big Improvements

Mr. Frank Mason is making extensive improvements to his Water street floral emporium. Several of the front windows are being removed, as well as the door leading into his former office and salesroom. The centre partition wall has been removed. The partition's support of the floor above will be replaced by an iron girder. When completed the whole Northern part of the building will be in one big room. Semicircular doors and side windows are being placed in the Water street wall. The doors will be double, with display windows at each side. The present display window, to the north, will be replaced by a window some five feet longer.

Heirs Wanted.

Postmaster Edgar showed The Times a poster from Edward Stevens, attorney, 206 Broadway, New York city, to the effect that Robert J. Power, who, when a boy is supposed to have lived with an uncle in Ontario or some place in Canada, went to New York State, where he accumulated a fortune estimated at [illegible]. He died on December 12th 1912, at the age of 75 years, but practically nothing is now known about his family history. It is said that he had a brother, who also left home and went to California when a boy. There are quite a number of persons in this City by that name.

403rd BARGAIN ANNEX EVENT

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1913

MEN'S SILK LISLE HOSE, 18c.
3 PAIRS 50c.

There is excellent value in these Hose that are in plain shades of tan, grey and black. The heels and toes are double; the sizes 10 to 11½. Wednesday 18c

MEN'S WASH VESTS 75c.

The balance of these Vests, that in some instances are worth $2.50, are those of small size. The man who is of slender build, may therefore secure a natty wash Vest at a most remarkable reduction. A quick clearance on Wednesday, each 75c

MEN'S ATHLETIC UNDERWEAR 33c.

These fine checked, Nainsook Garments are essentially for summer wear. The shirt is made in coat style, and the drawers are knee length. Usually one pays 50c for such quality. Annex price, garment 33c

Summer Blouse Neat and Stylish 39c

CHAMBRAY IN PLAIN TONES OR STRIPED PATTERNS IS A UNIVERSAL FAVORITE for summer apparel. It has been employed in the make up of these Blouses, some of which have deep Dutch collars and plain cuffs (like the illustration), others having high collars that are detachable. In every instance the Annex price is only a fraction of the real value, as one can judge by the window display. They are made in sizes 34 to 42, and on Wednesday only, priced at 39c

See Them in the Window.

SWEATER COATS FOR CHILDREN 39c

Just a small number of these Sweaters that usually are worth 60c, 75c or 85c. The colors are grey, tan and cardinal, the workmanship good, and each one is fitted with pockets. Wednesday 39c

PURE BLEACHED COTTON, 9c YD

This Cotton is of good weight, is nicely, evenly woven upon the steam looms, and possesses a very soft finish. A special purchase enables us to quote a low price for Wednesday. Per yard 9c

WHITE HONEYCOMB QUILTS 87c.

Buying in the ordinary way, one is apt to pay $1.25 for a quilt similar in quality and size to these at 87c. They are very nicely made, woven in honeycomb style with neat self patterns. Wednesday 87c

MEN'S SOFT LOUNGE COLLARS, 10c.

3 FOR 25c.

STRAW SHAPES, 39c.

MEN'S STIFF FRONTED SHIRTS, 49c.

A Shirt of $1.00 to $1.50 value for 49c is indeed an offer of rare occurence, even in the Annex. And these Shirts are of such fine makes as Tooke's, and Star, in good patterns on light and dark grounds. In some the cuffs are separate, in others they are attached. None worth less than $1.00 but mostly being regular $1.50 Shirts. All sizes except 16 from 14 to 17½. Wednesday 49c

NEW "SNAP" CORSETS 44c.

Procurable in good quality coutil, the chief feature of the Corset being the figure-reducing side pieces. The bust is medium, and so is the skirt. Four hose supporters attached, and sizes 18 to 26. Made by the D. & A. Corset Co. the quality may be depended upon 44c

WHITE COTTON GOWNS, 42c

Good quality English Longcloth is the material from which they are made, and they are cut in the French slip-over style. Elbow sleeves and yoke are lace trimmed, and the marvel is that such a dainty piece of lingerie can be bought for so small a sum 42c

Boys Khaki Knickers 39c

ANOTHER MONTH OF HOLIDAYS MEANS ANOTHER MONTH OF HARD WEAR on the boys' clothes. Therefore the need of something strong and durable, like these Knickers. They are made of stout trouser duck, in sizes 5 to 15 years, and are gathered at the knee with an elastic band. Made expressly for hard wear, they have become very popular with Annex patrons. Take a glance at them in our window, their value is apparent at first sight ... 39c

Childrens Rompers only 29c

THE LITTLE TOT IN GOOD HEALTH IS ALWAYS ON THE MOVE; crawling walking, climbing, everywhere. And a romper is essentially the garment most suited, to maintain a neat appearance, and yet allow freedom in every movement. Those on sale in the Annex are of dark blue, or linen shade, to fit children of 2 to 6 years. They will be found of good value and may be seen in our windows on Tuesday. Annex price 29c

TURKISH BATH TOWELS 29c PAIR.

Their size is most generous, for it is 38 x 18 in. The nap is heavy and soft, delightfully absorbent, and the whole quality is somewhat better than you would expect for the price. In a color combination of grey, red and white, they form a most useful towel around camp or home. Per pair 29c

BOYS' COTTON JERSEYS 19c.

These Cotton Jerseys, because of their simplicity, comfortable weight and washableness, are a pronounced favorite amongst the boys. Low neck, short sleeves, and obtained in a variety of pleasing color combinations. Usually sold for 25c. Wednesday 19c

FEATHER FILLED PILLOWS 44c

Full regulation size, filled with sanitary feathers and covered with stout art ticking in shades of green and brown. Really worth 60c apiece. The Annex will see them marked at, each ... 44c

LACES AND INSERTIONS 5c YARD

Children's Wash Dresses 55c

THESE LITTLE DRESSES FOR MAIDENS OF 6 TO 14 YEARS are in stripe and floral patterns upon blue and red grounds, and will prove invaluable to mothers, whose problem is to keep the children neat and tidy. At 75c and 85c they are considered good value, yet the Annex will see them marked at 55c

They may be Seen in the Window.

BEDS, BEDDING, HOUSEFURNISHINGS

These are assembled with the Wall Paper on the third floor. They comprise a host of lines, each of which offers much variation in price and quality. Carpets, rugs and fine drapings add to the display, with new colorings and materials, in a breadth of selection designed to meet everyone's needs.

The "Big Alteration Sale" in the Men's Section on Main Floor presents Men's Wear of every description at greatly reduced prices.

Women and Children's Summer Coats $2.98

ORIGINALLY PRICED UP TO $10.00.

SOME OF THESE COATS ARE SILK, SOME LINEN; BUT MOSTLY ARE CREAM SERGE of splendid quality and finish. Both long and short styles may be procured, and regardless of their original cost or present worth they have been marked at a sacrifice, because the workmen are crowding us for room. To say they are worth $5 to $10.00 is a most conservative estimate, because there are some that in regular price were even higher than this. They are to be displayed in the window, and we anticipate a brisk demand for them early Wednesday morning at the remarkably low price of, only $2.98

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

The Esturion yesterday took a large excursion to Stoney Lake.

The Petes have moved up to fourth place. Watch them climb.

Last night the splendid Temple Band gave an excellent programme of music in Victoria Park.

The 57th Regiment will be represented at the D.R.A. matches at Kingston, during the last week of this month.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Kennedy, who died in Nicholls Hospital, will be held this afternoon to Cavan.

It would seem, by Windsor dispatches, that 15 year old Kate Sherwood, formerly of the local Barnardo Home, has been brutally treated at Amherstburg, by Mrs. E. Seniscar.

Asked yesterday if he had asked for a permit to build his store at the corner of St. Joseph and Charlotte street, Mr. R. C. Braund replied in the negative.

The good ship Stoney Lake yesterday was crowded to legal limits with an excursion run under auspices of St. Peter's Cathedral. She went to Stoney Lake.

On Thursday, Aug. 7th Steamer Stoney Lake will leave new George street wharf with passengers and freight for Stoney Lake points, returning to Lakefield to connect with train. Stoney Lake Navigation Co.

PROPER THING NOW IS TO PEEL OFF SOILED SKIN

(From Beauty's Mirror.)

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders, and rouges these heated days. There's no need for them, anyway, since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white satiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another effective summer treatment—heat tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin-tightener made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Its use as a face bath leaves no trace.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Kenneth Crane is summering at Stoney Lake.

Miss Ethel Milburn, of Chebanse, Ill., is visiting with her aunts, the Misses Milburn, Chemong Road.

Mrs. W. A. Howard has returned after a few weeks' vacation in London, Ont.

Mr. S. Davis, of Clinton, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Callender, of Morrow street.

Miss D. Richardson, of Barrie, is the guest of Miss Luella Jobbitt, Charlotte street.

Miss Audrey Bennett and Miss Mabel Bossence are spending their vacation at Stoney Lake.

Mrs. H. L. Ormand, of Dayton, O., is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. P. P. Westbye, Inverlea street.

Mrs. Chas. F. Glover and Roy, of Rochester, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Glover, East City.

Miss Hazel Gillespie of this city, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sisson, Kawartha Park, Clear Lake.

Mrs. Isaac Bonner, of Paris, and Master Keith Bonner are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Westbye, Inverlea street.

Dr. R. N. Carew, and Mrs. Carew of Toronto, are visiting Ald. W. J. Johnston and Mrs. Johnston, Aylmer street.

Mr. Thos. Denison, Miss Ruth Denison and Miss Denison, of Cleveland, Ohio, are spending the summer vacation at Kawartha Lakes.

SCOWS FOR SALE

AT A BARGAIN.

The undersigned has several second-hand scows for sale at bargain prices. Apply at The Times Office to W. H. Robertson.

Mr. Wm. A. Ballen, of Toronto, who has been visiting with his sister Mrs. Chas. Curtis, and Mr. H. McCannon, returned home yesterday.

The many friends of Mr. Clifford Cox, son of Mr. Henry Cox, East City, will be glad to learn that he is progressing favorably after undergoing an operation for appendicitis.

The many friends of Mr. Jay, the Aylmer street clothing merchant, will regret to learn that he is seriously ill and will probably be confined to his bed for the next three months.

Mr. Clare Clancy an old Peterborough boy, but of North Bay is getting the glad hand from his many friends in the city. Mr. Clancy is a mail clerk running out of North Bay.

Mr. Milliken, formerly of the National Hotel, who is in Nicholl's Hospital with a severe attack of blood poisoning, was yesterday reported as "doing nicely."

Miss Pearl Hardill, and Master Milford Hardill, children of the well known local commercial traveller, Mr. J. G. Hardill, have left for an extended outing at North Bay, Sturgeon Falls and other places in that vicinity.

WINNIPEGGER COMES EAST.

Winnipeg, Aug. 5.—Professor Wallace, of Manitoba University, left last night for Toronto to attend the International Geological Congress, several delegates to which are expected in Winnipeg in two weeks.

WOMEN ANNOY THE MEDICOS THE MEET GREATEST EVER

Prince Arthur of Connaught Speaks Welcome in Place of the King

London, Aug. 6.—The largest Medical Congress the world ever saw was opened here to-day. Delegates number over 8,000 and are drawn from every civilized country. Albert Hall presented a remarkable scene when Prince Arthur of Connaught extended a welcome on behalf of the King.

Robes representing every medical distinction known were in evidence. A large body representing foreign governments attended in full uniform Prince Arthur reminded the gathering that Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India were represented in various committees, so that it was really the Empire and not merely the United Kingdom which welcomed them, and thereby forged another link in the Imperial chain.

Suffragettes Were There.

Sir Thomas Barlow, President of the Royal College of Physicians, Physicians Extraordinary to King George, and Honorary LL.D. of Montreal, Toronto and Harvard, welcomed the delegates. He spoke of the marvellous advancement made by medical science.

Credentials of every member of the audience were rigorously scrutinised before entry could be obtained to Albert Hall. This measure of precaution was taken in order to keep out suffragettes, several of whom attempted to enter.

A large force of police guarded the building, while women carrying billboards bearing the words, "What Do the Doctors Think of Women Tortured" paraded outside the hall.

ATHABASCA LANDING TRUE TO BEST IDEALS OF GREAT WEST

Within Day of Half Million Dollar Fire Which Struck at Heart of Fast Growing Metropolis of Great Hinterland, Building Begins to Make a Better City

Athabasca, Alta., Aug. 6.—Within twelve hours of having sustained a loss approximately half a million dollars, with only $74,000 insurance, the Town of Athabasca is busy rebuilding, undaunted by the disastrous losses of the day.

Within two hours after the subduing of the fire, the Royal Bank and the Bank of Commerce staffs were unloading lumber at the new location, while a party of the leading business men later left for Edmonton to secure new stocks to start afresh, although most of them had suffered adead loss. Included in this party were the owners of the two hotels destroyed, who will rebuild at once. I. Gagnor, whose six structures, uninsured, were wiped out at a loss of $200,000, is already busy on new buildings to replace them.

The immigration hall has been thrown open by the Dominion Government, and the council has supplied a cook and a full supply of provisions. Relief offices have been opened and clothing distributed so that all the destitute and homeless have been housed and fed and the general undercurrent of sentiment is that newer and bigger Athabasca will take the place of the old.

AULD FOUND GUILTY BY COBOURG JUDGES OF THEFT

Cobourg, Aug. 6.— A court room packed to the limit with fashion able summer tourists of Cobourg, often referred to as the Canadian Newport, gave a gasp of astonishment here to-day when Judge Benson senior County Judge, declared Robert Aull, of St. Louis, New Orleans, and Lexington, Ky., guilty of having obtained money under false pretences

Sentence will be passed on Friday and meanwhile the "Four Hundred" here are talking of nothing else. Young Aull's sensational marriage to Miss Doris Reid, daughter of a Toronto banker and capitalist a little over a week ago has given the idle rich here a continuous subject of conversation.

R. D. Albertini, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, the fashionable stopping place here, and Chief Ruse, of the Cobourg police, were the chief witnesses for the Crown. Col. Aull, parent of the prisoner, was put in the witness box.

After He Had Obtained Cash.

Mr. Albertini told of the young man presenting a cheque for $99.05 on a St. Louis bank. Previously it had been stated that young Aull had said to Mr. Albertini that if the cheque were not good to let him know at 617 Prince building, St. Louis when he got the cash. To-day Mr. Albertini modified this to the extent that this statement was made sometime after the money had been paid over.

Knew There Were No Funds.

Col. Aull admitted to-day that his son had not been living at home for three years or so, and that he had had trouble before over his cheques The hotel bill ran up by young Aull was paid by his father in real money yesterday, so that the Arlington loses nothing.

But while this was taken into consideration by Judge Benson, his Honor said in summing up that he could not overlook the fact that the prisoner knew there was no money in the bank on which he had issued the cheque, and that therefore he must find him guilty of false pretences.

Col. Aull himself, it was shown, had been made defendant in a suit instituted by a Cobourg resident then in St. Louis for a debt.

A CHILDS NARROW ESCAPE

As a George street car was coming north from the wharf yesterday afternoon, at 6 o'clock, a welltimed and prompt action of the motorman on the car, saved the life of a little flaxen haired girl who stood in the centre of the track. The motorman saw the child before he had reasonable time to stop his car, however, he applied the brakes and stopped the car within 6 inches of the child.

BASEBALL

The Petes took another jump yesterday, when they walloped the Berlin to the tune of 11—6. Creswell did the twirling for the Petes, and pitched a good game; while Bradford, pitching for the Berlin aggregation was hammered out of the box. The boys were there with the willow yesterday and pounded the Berlin twirlers for 14 hits. There was a large attendance of fans and by all appearances they seemed to enjoy the trouncing that the Petes gave their team.

The Petes are in Hamilton to-day and it is expected that the boys will go after Notty Lee's bunch, and go after them right.

Ottawa has wrote to President Fitzgerald, asking that their games with Brantford for the balance of the season, be called off, on account of the slovenly way the Kanites played the game before an attendance of one thousand people. The obstructionists are using every tactic to put the game on the bum in that town.

FIRE AT BOBCAYGEON

Bobcaygeon, Aug. 7.—Another disastrous fire has visited and wiped out our chief industry. On Sunday night about 11 p.m. the back shed of Mr. W. C. Moore's carriage shop was noticed to be in flames and by the time the alarm was sent in and the firemen had arrived on the scene the fire had complete control of the whole building, which was in a very short time.

THE EASIEST WAY TO BANISH HAIRS

(Aids to Beauty)

A very simple method has been discovered whereby hairy growths can be removed from the face, neck or arms without pain or trouble. A paste is made with a little powdered delatone and water and applied to the hairs not wanted, and after 2 or 3 minutes it is removed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment and when the skin is washed to free it from the remaining delatone, it will be firm and spotless.

Stubby eyelashes will grow long and have a beautiful curl if pyroxin be applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger, and thin eyebrows come in thick and glossy, by rubbing pyroxin on occasionally. Use care not to get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

PRINCE DIES IN CELL OF STARVATION

St. Petersburg, Aug. 7—Prince Mamuroff, a member of one of the most aristocratic families in Russia and an intimate friend of the celebrated author. Prince Kropotkin, has been found dead of starvation in a cell of the monastery Holy Trinity, where he lived as a monk for some years.

He had abandoned military life. Apparently his existance was forgotten by his brother monks for a fortnight.

MINISTER MILITIA MAKING CHANGES

Saves People's Money By Overhauling Badly Manufactured Ammunition

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—The Minister of Militia and Defence as a result of the gross neglect of his Liberal predecessor in office has been compelled to try and save some of the ammunition manufactured by the Quebec arsenal, which has been condemned. An experiment in the form of regrinding will be tried.

The ammunition so saved will be tested at Petewawa to see if the experiment is successful, and incidentally to obtain data for the guidance of the authorities in the shell factory. These tests will begin on August 4.

Another Change

Another interesting change which will be made at Quebec will be the establishment of a packing establishment under the control of Col. Harston, and the inspecting staff. Hitherto the arsenal has boxed the ammunition, sending for test cartridges selected by itself. In future the cartridges will go out of the arsenal in bulk loose, and the inspecting staff will make their own selection for testing, and on being satisfied will themselves box the cartridges.

Is Well Qualified.

Major F. D. Laferty, R.C.A., has been appointed superintendent of the arsenal. Major Laferty did well in South Africa, distinguishing himself for hard work, intelligence and executive ability. In addition to his record in the field, he holds the highest technical qualifications possessed by any officer in Canada in regard to ordnance manufacture. He recently spent two years in Woolwich, taking the usual ordnance college work for one year and in the second year qualifying himself for taking the severe "advanced course."

Wasted Money

When the Liberal press talks of expenditure it ought to remember that much of it is caused by the mal-administration and the neglect of their leaders while in office. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been wasted by them in the Militia Department when an investigation such as that instituted by Col. Hughes would have saved the money.

OCEAN FREIGHT RATE ENQUIYY

Borden Government Take Up What Laurier Failed To Do

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—How the Liberal party with its loud protests for the good of the people has been tried and found wanting is written in the official files at Ottawa. There it can be seen that the late Government deliberately shirked its duty to inquire into the question of ocean freight rates though the British Government was willing to enter into negotiations. The Conservative opposition in 1910 time and again endeavored to have the Liberals take the matter up. There was some correspondence but the matter ended there. But the Conservative Government has now sent the Chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners to England to negotiate and a report will be made on his return. The late Mr. Justice Mabee, chairman of the Railway Board and appointed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and a man who was respected and admired by all parties suggested a scheme of joint control of rates.

Dropped It.

His memorandum was forwarded to the Colonial Office by the then Government. The Imperial authorities at once fell in with the suggestion of a joint investigation, but the Canadian Government dropped the whole matter, neglecting even to reply to the communications forwarded on the subject by the Colonial Office.

Still Willing

The British Government is now and has been for some time ready to take the ocean freight rate question up with the Dominion Government. Records now on file here show this and furnish a complete refutation of the contention put by the Opposition last session that the rise in rates complained of at that time took place subsequent to the change of Government. The increase in rates was brought to the notice of the Laurier Government early in 1910. At that time merchants and boards of trade were complaining, and Mr. Richard Grigg, new commissioner of commerce, then resident British trade commissioner to Montreal, drew up a memorandum showing that the rates had materially risen and observing that this constituted an impairment of the British preference.

Mabee's Protest.

In February, 1912, the chairman of the Railway Commission, the late Judge Mabee, signed a vigorous memorandum, pointing out that if the control of land rates was beneficial to the public, the control of the ocean rates would be much more so, the land journey being only one-third of the distance. "Every reduction made on the land haul gives the ocean carrier the opportunity to add to his charges," said Judge Mabee.

Reaping Reward.

The people of Canada were laying the foundation for more benefits than they ever imagined when they threw out the Liberal party on September 21, 1911. They elected a party devoted to their interests and able and willing to carry out the promises made in Opposition.

HIGH DEATH RATE LAID TO WOMEN

London, Aug. 7.—The present high mortality in London, Mr. John Burns, President of the local Government Board, declared yesterday, is dueto tne fact that women increasingly are entering into all phrases of commercial and industry and official and administrative life.

They themselves must realize, he said, ;'that as far as their offspring is concerned this fact is attended with considerable disadvantage to the community and to the race as a whole.

TRAIN HITS RIG TWO MEN ESCAPE

Buggy Smashed to Pieces and Horse Killed When a Train Hits Rig at Hastings

Word was received here last night from Hastings, that the evening train from Belleville while running over a crossing at Hastings, struck a horse and buggy. The rig was occupied by two men, a Mr. McCarthy and Mr. McGuire. The two men were hurled some distance and when picked up Mr. McCarthy had a severe scalp wound, while Mc. McGuire was suffering from severe injuries the nature of which could not be ascertained, although doctors were in attendance.

The buggy was smashed to kindling wood, and the horse had one leg taken off and acted as though its back were broken. The animal was suffering great pain, and was snot.

The men were rushed to an hospital, where doctors are doing all that medical skill can do for the two unfortunates.

MUST WATER SIDEWALKS BEFORE THEY ARE SWEPT

A Bylaw Will be Prepared to Prohibit Dry Sweeping in Centre City--Recommended by Board ot Health--City Board ot Works in Session Last Night

The City's Board of Works met in business session last night, Chairman Ald. Butler presiding. There were also present Mayor W. H. Bradburn, Aldermen Johnston, Anderson, McIntyre, Gillespie and Duffus.

Mr. R. C. Braund notified the chairman that he is going to take out considerable gravel at St. Joseph street, which gravel he will place at the disposal of the city, if acceptable.

On motion of Ald. Anderson, the city will, free of cost, extend the sewer to the street line, for connection with the lavatories at the new Government wharf, George street.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre, the City Engineer will familiarize himself with conditions governing the agreement of two years ago between the City and the Quaker Oats Co., and report. This agreement was that the city should deed to the company, a strip of land on the north side of Hunter street in exchange for a similar strip of land from the company to the city on south side of Hunter street. The object of this deal is to retain the width of Hunter street at this point at 66 feet. And the Quaker Oats Co. are asking that a by-law authorizing the deeding to them of the land originally agreed upon be passed.

Can't Extend Lundy's Lane.

Re the city's application for authority to construct a highway known as Lundy's Lane across the C.P.R. tracks, the Board of Railway Commissioners wrote that the proposed street would cross three tracks, upon one of which one can nearly always find a long freight train standing, and sometimes all three tracks are occupied. The Board's Assistant Chief Engineer added that "these freight trains have to cut at Chamberlain street, and, if Lundy's Lane were opened up, they would have to cut again. There is no one living on Lundy's Lane at present between Park street and Monaghan Road. As a matter of fact the street is not opened up at all, and there is no one living on it.

City Engineer Parsons offers that the street requires to be opened up to afford a short-cut for workmen. In view of the fact that Chamberlain and Romaine streets are only 1200 feet apart (Lundy's Lane being midway between them), and in view of the great inconvenience the company would be put to in cutting trains, which would involve delays, and in view of the danger to people crossing the tracks between cut trains, I am of the opinion that the city's application should not be accepted.

Clifton Street Question.

The question of straightening out Clifton street, between Rogers and Concession streets, to a uniform width was referred to the chairman, Ald. Anderson and the City Engineer for further enquiry. Government survey shows that the three buildings on the south side of Clifton street are on the street line, and the majority of the Board do not think the city should be put to the expense of purchasing land on the north side to straighten out the street. Such a course being rendered necessary by reason of said encroachments. The petitioners for this work will be so advised by the committee named, who will report back to the Board.

No Dry Sweeping.

On recommendation of the Board of Health, Ald. Anderson moved, seconded by the Mayor, that a by-law be prepared to prohibit dry sweeping of sidewalks within the following area: Charlotte street both sides and Brock street, both sides; Water street both sides, and Aylmer street, both sides.—Carried.

No Concrete Wall.

Thos. Turcott's application for a concrete wall to prevent the creek at McDonnel street, near the Bonner-Worth premises from encroaching on his property was not granted.

Street Signs.

The cost of erecting enamel street signs within the fire limits will be enquired into, with a view to adoption next year.

New Street.

On motion of Ald. Duffus, a cheque will be issued in payment of the 16 feet of the Chamberlain property on Patterson street, required for the opening of a street from Bolivar to Patterson streets.

Stone For Road Work.

Mitchell and Stothart have abundance of stone in north city, suitable for road purposes, and propose to furnish said stone to the city, and after crushed by the corporation, to deliver to any point between Smith and Sherbrooke streets at $1 a yard, and to any point below Sherbrooke at $1.25 a yard. An agreement on these lines will be submitted to the council for approval.

Board Walk.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre, a board walk will be laid on Mark street, north of Sophia.

Street Paving.

The City Engineer reported that he had advertised for tenders for street paving.

DANGEROUS INCENDIARY IS AT WORK IN TORONTO

The Stables of a Hardware Merchant on Queen Street West Were Destroyed

Toronto, Aug. 6.—Another fire of alleged incendiary origin is reported at eleven o'clock this morning in the stables of Jahn Caslor, hardware merchant, at 628 Queen street west, in which the stable, facing a lane, was destroyed, incurring damage to the extent of $700.

The stable was filled with hay and the flames took hold before they were noticed from the shop.

Stables in the rear of 133 and 135 Markham street owned by A. E. Jeffries and C. F. Thorne, were damaged to the extent of $100 by a small fire at noon.

CANADA DID NOT GIVE AID FOR WHICH ENGLAND HOPED

Is the Statement of Lord Haldane, in Discussing Condition of the British Navy

London, Aug.6.—Continuing the debate before the House of Lords on the navy situation, Lord Haldane brought up the question of the Canadian contingent again to-day.

"It is quite true," he stated, "that Canada has not been in a position to give us those assurances on which we hoped. We reckon Canada will take her own course, and in the meantime the Government have accelerated certain ships which are in progress to such an extent that they will be there whether Canadian ships are or are not.

"They will be there before the Canadian ships. Canadian ships could not be started and finished so quickly. Therefore there will be four ships ready for the Mediterranean and Malay, and these three ships, together with other resources, make up the Mediterranean fleet."

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair, with showers in some localities.

"MOTHER" JONES TALKS TO STRIKERS

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 7— Reduction of the military in the strike district was asked by Gen. A. Abbey. Those soldiers whose presence at home is most imperative will be allowed to start back within a day or two.

Sheriff James Crune began his campaign for armed deputies this morning but those conversant with conditions predicted that he would be unable to persuade a sufficient number of local citizens to serve and would find it necessary to call upon the outsiders who have been placed at his disposal.

Practically all roads in the district to-day led towards Laurium. The fact that "Mother" Jones was to make her first speech was the attraction, and men, women and children of all walks of life came on special trolley cars and trains to hear her. The [illegible] day.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 35c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 35c. Nugent's Sarsaprilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 326 George St., directly opposite Crossman's store.

The Strong Growing Demand for Building Materials is the Chief Reason

Agriculture is now taken for granted on the prairies, but what about manufacturing? The example of Winnipeg's rise in a little more than a decade to the position of fourth industrial city in the Dominion, has had the effect of limbering the imagination of conservative Canada, and now very often the remark is made that Manitoba is more like an eastern province than a member of the middle Western family. But when one talks about manufacturing in Saskatchewan and Alberta, the imagination of some very intelligent people refuses to work; they shut their eyes and say, as pompous, little Governor Simpson said years ago, when speaking of the possible agricultural development of that part of the Northwest Territories now called Saskatchewan, "it is impossible; it can't be done."

But it is being done. Manufacturing is progressing rapidly in both Saskatchewan and Alberta. The kinds of manufacturing plants that are being established in these two prairie provinces may be classed largely under four heads, namely, flour mills, brick and clay products, lumbering with its tributary industry, planing; and steel and iron work. Generally speaking, with the exception of milling, these different forms of manufacturing have been introduced into the Middle West as the result of the strong, growing local demand for building materials.

SMUGGLING COCAINE

Drug Said to be Reaching Calgary by of Brandon

Western authorities declare that cocaine is being smuggled into Calgary from Brandon, and illicitly sold. Brandon is near the American border and it is an easy matter for people coming from the United States to conceal the drug on their person and bring it into Canada. The drug is mixed with baking soda by the illicit dealers, who sell the mixture to cocaine fiends at exorbitant prices.

Cars and Hat Pins

The first sentence of Glasgow's latest tramway notice begins: "Several nasty accidents have occurred in cars lately with long unprotected hat pins." And "Nemo" wants to know—"Why should cars run around with long unprotected hat pins?"

A Poetic Affair

A poetic Hull police officer declared in Court that two women, alleged to have been drunk, were propping each other up "like sheaves of corn in a field."

Infantile Paralysis

Investigation by a Harvard scientist has convinced him that the germs of infantile paralysis are carried by stable flies.

A receiving attachment has been invented for megaphones to make them of service in collecting as well as distributing sounds.

NERVOUS, LIFELESS DEBILITATED MEN

YOUNG MEN AND MIDDLE-AGED MEN, the victims of early indiscretions and later excesses, who are failures in life—you are the ones we can restore to manhood and revive the spark of energy and vitality. Don't give up in despair because you have treated with other doctors, used electric belts and tried various drug store nostrums.

Our New Method Treatment has snatched hundreds from the brink of despair, has restored happiness to hundreds of homes and has made successful men of those who were "down and out." We prescribe specific remedies for each individual case according to the symptoms and complications—we have no patent medicines. This is one of the secrets of our wonderful success as our treatment cannot fail, for we prescribe remedies adapted to each individual case. Only curable cases accepted. We have done business throughout Canada for over 20 Years.

CURABLE CASES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY

READER Are you a victim? Have you lost hope? Are you intending to marry? Has your blood been diseased? Have you any weakness? Our New Method Treatment will cure you. Comic Films

"Friday is such an unlucky day," she sighed.

"It isn't half as unlucky as Tuesday," retorted her companion. "Last Tuesday, for instance, I fell out of a second floor window, and was run over by a garbage wagon."

"How terrible!" she exclaimed, shuddering.

"Yes, and on the Tuesday before that," he continued, "I tumbled into a pond, and was brought out at the end of a boat-hook. And the Tuesday before that I was chased by an infuriated bull. On the Tuesday before that——. But why continue?"

"Why don't you stay home on Tuesdays?" queried his companion. "You would be safer at home."

"Because I'd lose my job if I did," he replied "I'm a bioscope actor, you see, and on Tuesday we make our comic films."

Killing off Locusts

A French physician successfully combatted locusts in Argentina by inoculating a number of the insects with a parasite disease and liberating them to infect others of their kind.

Protecting Orchards

An electric motor to gently vibrate a fruit tree so that the sap flows to the buds and blossoms and enables them to resist frost has been patented by a Colorado orchardist.

Inspecting Meat

Meat inspectors in Berlin employ the moving picture camera in their work, enlarged photographs showing micro-organisms in motion if the meat be diseased.

For the Bath-tub

An English inventor has combined a rubber brush and soap dish and has given it a vacuum cup on the bottom to hold it upright when used for the latter purpose.

A Household Hint

If one quarter of one per cent. of sodium bisulphate be added to the water with which plaster of Paris is mixed the plaster will harden sooner and it will be stronger.

No Standard of Value

That science which professors and learned men term economics, is responsible for many highly curious and surprising phenomena, one of which is, that different countries, alike highly prosperous and with all they want, may yet have vastly different prices for different articles and commodities. How this happens never mind—sufficient that it is so. Another principle of economics, which really is almost instinctive with everybody, is, all other things being equal, to buy in the cheapest market.

To remove the deposit from the inside of kettles, fill the kettle with water and add to it a drachm of salammoniac. Let it boil for an hour, when the fur found on the metal will be dissolved, and can be easily removed. Rinse the kettle well, then boil out once or twice before using the contents.

A good way to clean patent leather shoes is to remove all the dirt and then wipe them over with a soft cloth dipped in milk. Polish with a dry cloth.

Manitoba Grain Elevators

One hundred and seventy-two grain elevators scattered throughout Manitoba, at present the property of the provincial government, will probably pass under the control of the Grain Growers' Association, the farmers' organization which for a number of years past has been active in the grain business. Title to the elevators will continue to be vested in the government, and the company will pay $60,000 a year as rental charges.

Insoluble Problems

It is said on good authority that there is a state of chaos at the British National Insurance Commissioners' office, that some of the problems of interpretation put to the Commission cannot be solved, and that financial problems of much difficulty have arisen.

New Warming up Rule

President John Dewar, of the Western Canada League, has announced a new ruling, which he expects will expedite the playing of league games. In the past a new pitcher going in during the game has been allowed to pitch five balls to warm up. The president believes that the pitchers use too much valuable time with this warming up process, and in the future they will be allowed to heave but three balls before the batter can take his position at the plate.

BIRDS' NESTS IN STRANGE PLACES

Birds choose some remarkable places in which to build their nests. Of all our birds, the cunning and domesticated robin has perhaps the keenest eye for ready-made sites. Last year a robin built his nest in a flower-pot in a garden. It was close to a footpath where people were constantly passing, yet robin showed no fear. Many other instances are told on good authority of strange building places. An instance is on record where a pigeon built a nest and hatched young in a corner of a dressing-table which was used daily. Two robins, although evicted twice, succeeded at the third attempt in completing a nest in a magic-lantern. They obtained entrance to a room through a ventilator. Nests have also been found in pillar-boxes, scarecrows and limekilns.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When a man declines to mortgage his home to buy an automobile it is the best sign that he has good horse sense.

A 127 pound girl has disappeared in Galesburg, Ill. and the police suspect that she has been kidnapped. The guilty parties no doubt made use of a motor truck in spiriting her away.

The Review says that a split skirt shows that a woman is not fit to vote. Maybe so, but that is not what she wants to show.

A Toronto Minister says women's heads have been turned by the split skirt. Quite true but it has also caused, in places where it has appeared on the public streets, many men's heads to turn also.

RAILWAY MEN'S WAGES.

The demand for an increase in wages by the conductors and brakemen of the railroads in the Eastern States calls attention to a question which is given serious concern to railwaymen, not only on this continent but throughout the world. In a measure, the wage question is more acute in the United States than in other countries owing to the fact that railroads are not allowed to increase rates as an offset to the increased demand for wages on the part of their men.

At the present time wages on railroads in the United States and Canada absorb 42 p.c. of the gross earnings of the railroads. In some particular cases the wages paid run as high as 45 p.c.

The following table shows how a dollar earned by the railroad is distributed. These figures, which are for the whole of the United States, show the average expenditure for the year 1909, but since that time, wages have advanced and today are estimated at 42 p.c. of the total.

	Cents
Labor	.41
Fuel and oil (80 p.c. Labor)	8.6
Taxes	3.72
Interest on Funded Debt	13.3
Dividends	7.23
Rentals on leased lines	4.84
Betterments, Reserves, etc	4.52
Surplus	2.83
Losses, damages, etc	2.37
Rentals	2.3
Maintenance and provision for equipment	8.34
	$1.00

An examination of the above table shows that wages absorb almost six times as much as dividend disbursements. In the ten years from 1899 to 1909 wages of railway employees in the United States increased from 39 p.c. of gross to over 41 p.c. During the same period the percentage of dividends and interest payments to gross showed a decline from 28.4 p.c. to 24.3 p.c. and the ton mile rate a decrease from .93 to .75. It would look, therefore, as if the wage earner fared better than did either the capitalist who provided the money or the shipper who paid the bills. As a matter of fact, the railroads in the United States are far from being in a happy position. Between the persistent and insistent demands of labor for higher wages and the claims of the shareholders for their rightful dividends, the directors of railroads in the neighboring Republic are between the "upper and the nether millstones."

The president of one of the largest railroads in the United States describing their position said: "Railroads can be likened to an ordinary stock. The Commerce Commissioner is whittling away at one end and the Labor Unions at the other. When one of these irresistible forces meets the other at or near the middle, stockholders won't get much satisfaction in picking up the chips and trying to reconstruct the stick."

Gained In Weight, Digestion Restored, Health Renewed

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

EUGENICS AND GENIUS

Toronto Professor Sees Close Relation Between Master Minds and Imbeciles

"All men of genius and poets are the result of degeneration on the part of some of their ancestors. If we seek by the prevention of indiscriminate marriage to eliminate the imbecile and otherwise unfit we will also prevent the production of these."

This is one of the remarkable statements made by Prof. Gilbert Jackson during the course of an address on the subject of "Poverty," at Toronto.

Prof. Jackson entirely repudiates the value of the principles of eugenics as applied to the prevention of the propagation of the mentally and physically unfit. He stated that, personally, he preferred to have these latter in the world rather than run a chance of the elimination of men of genius, which would result from the adoption of such methods.

The Device of a Milwaukee Crook and How It Was Operated

In the current number of Popular Electricity, a newspaperman who happened also to be an electrician tells the story of the crookedest roulette wheel ever built, and how it was operated to swindle some very wealthy and fashionable plungers out of fortunes near New York. The wheel in question was made by a crook in Milwaukee, a man who knew the game of roulette as well as he knew the science of electricity, and he produced a table that gave the player no chance whatever. It has been calculated that in fair gambling games, that is in games in which the bankers take no advantage that the game itself does not afford, the chances of "beating the banker" vary from two chances in five to one chance in ten. It may be taken for granted that no "square" game that attracts professional gamblers gives an even break, or anything like an "even break," to the plungers. For instance, it has been calculated that in the flipping of a coin, where no art is used at all, and where it would seem as likely that "head" should turn up as "tail," the man who "calls" the turn of the coin is at a disadvantage.

Psychology of Gambling

Carrying the operation over a hundred tosses, he cannot call it right more than twice out of five times. Nor does the fact that "head" has turned up ten times in succession mean that any odds should be laid against "head" turning up for the eleventh time. If "head" has turned up for one thousand times it is just as likely to turn up for the thousandth and first time as is "tail." Psychology is involved in this calculation but it may be taken for granted that the banker, the man who leaves it to his opponent to do the guessing, has a decided advantage. In the game of roulette, however, the bankers have not been content to let psychology give them their margin. The Milwaukee man, as mentioned, invented a wheel that would surely break every man who played against it. If a score of them fought it at once they would be robbed none the less surely. The only difference would be, if they varied their bets, that one would be plucked sooner than others. In the end the result would be the same. The wonderful wheel first came to light in Cedarhurst, Long Island. It was located in a cottage on the outskirts of this fashionable resort, but news of the presence of a "game" in which there was no limit spread quickly among the wealthy and idle members of the community. So well did the wheel do its duty that it had been in operation only a few weeks before the police were quietly informed, and swooped down. They missed the proprietor, but they secured the wheel, and it was later examined by the electrician who gives the story to Popular Electricity.

An Electric Wheel

He tells of the partial dismemberment of the mechanism and continues:

"Our next move was to remove the cloth from the top of the table, and there we found, in puttied concealment, resistance coils and switches for controlling the current. Under the cloth and soft blanket were two metal disks. These were set flush with the top of the table and directly in front of the dealer's position. Until one of the knobs under the table was slightly rotated these disks remained immovable, so that one might pass his hand over them and never discover their presence. The disks were a trifle larger than the chips or counters ordinarily used in gambling, and were located at a point on the table where the dealer could place a stack of chips upon them without attracting the slightest attention. The least pressure was sufficient to depress the disks. We next discovered that each disk operated a switch by which the main circuit that formed the basis of the device was connected. Buried also in the wood top of the table were three German silver resistance coils, so insulated and packed as to indicate that they were intended for use with currents of comparatively high potential, such as that used in incandescent lighting. These coils connected with three copper bars, across which traveled a contact point actuated by the second of the three knobs in the drawer."

No Chance for the Bettor

The technical description goes on to show how it was possible for the banker, or the man in possession of the secret resource of the table, to make the ball drop in any pocket he desired. The ball itself, while presumably of ivory, had a metal core which was susceptible to the magnetic attraction exerted by the battery, and all the dealer had to do was to look around the table and choose the pocket or hole that had the least money bet on it. Into that pocket he would cause the ball to drop. Of course, others than the banker might be enriched, but however lucky a man seemed to be, he would be "cleaned out" if he remained long enough at the table. The wires were so skilfully concealed that when the table legs were unscrewed they revealed nothing. The surface of the cloth was as smooth as glass. Only the fact that the customers were so speedily ruined, one of them dropping not less than $125,000, led to any suspicion being aroused, and even after the raid, if it had not been for the fact that the owners of the wheel refused to give the Milwaukee manufacturer his "bit," the true inwardness of the crookedest roulette wheel ever made would not have been revealed. The moral of the tale would seem to favor dominoes.

Stomach gas is frequently caused by fermentation of foods not properly digested. Intestinal fermentation causes intestinal gases. Sour milk and cheese diet diminishes it. Overeating, hurried eating and too long waits between meals are all common aids to the formation of stomach gas.

If what seem to be "mere colds" were less commonly neglected tuberculosis would more often be caught in its incipient state and pneumonia and diphtheria would frequently be prevented.

AS A SYMBOL OF AUTHORITY

Wedding Ring Really Has a Significance Apart From That to Which Sentiment Is Attached.

For ages the wedding ring has been a token of binding authority. The gold symbolizes the purity of affection; the circle the endless love; the price paid for it takes the place of the ancient purchase money. If the ring is lost it is a warning that the husband's love will soon pass away; if broken, that he will die soon.

Tradition has been responsible for many stories concerning the wedding ring; one of these is that the first ring was made by Tubal Cain for Prometheus. This ring was of iron and adamant, the iron signifying lastingness and the adamant perfect concord. The early Romans commonly used a plain iron ring, while the poorer English, even in the nineteenth century, used the ring for the church keys.

It has not always been customary to wear the ring on the third finger of the left hand, but there is a reason for this modern convention. Besides being less used and therefore less exposed to danger, and being the weaker finger and therefore symbolizing the wife's dependence, the third finger of the left hand has been supposed from the days of the Egyptians to be connected directly with the heart by a vein called the "vena amoris." It was indeed the finger of life, and consequently it is most fitting that the wedding ring should adorn it.

Farmer Was Wise.

Charles J. O'Connor, Chicago lawyer, told the following:

"A farmer took out a policy of fire insurance on his barn. After a loss and due proofs the company came to settle or adjust the loss, but took advantage of its option under the contract to build a new barn.

"Subsequently a life insurance company sought to have him insure his life in favor of his wife. 'O, no,' he says, 'you don't catch me a second time. If I'd die you would come around here and offer to get a new husband for her.'"

Modern Need.

It has recently been said that men of today have a tendency to express no emotion frankly, to admit only half of what they feel, and only a fourth of what they think. If this be true, then are they in sad need of the many sided help that verse and great poetry can give them. They need just that relaxing of the mind and heart which sublime expression inevitably brings.

Newsboys as Emigrants

A committee of Newport, Wales gentlemen have instituted an emigration scheme, by which an attempt is being made to give newsboys and other street traders a start in life of a more certain nature than is at present open to them. In connection with the scheme three youths left Newport for Liverpool en route for Canada.

YOUR OLD SKIRT

How to Renew the Life of a Favorite Article of Dress

We all know what it is to possess a skirt to which we have become attached, but which, in spite of our care, is beginning to look old and shabby. To any woman desirous of rendering such a skirt almost new again, the following hints will be both useful and practicable, as they have been tried and proved.

The first thing to do is to have the skirt cleaned or washed. It is quite easy to wash a serge skirt at home. Get a tub of warm soapy water, put the skirt in it, and "dolly" it. If you have not a regular "dolly," a very good plan is to turn the wash board upside down, and, holding the legs firmly, thoroughly pummel the skirt with the top end of the board.

Rub soap on the dirtiest parts, and give them special attention. Two washes will be sufficient, and two good rinses in warm water. Shake thoroughly, and hang to dry the right way up. On no account hang by the hem. When dry—by-the-by, it should be dried in the open air—you must set about the work of renovation with needle and thread.

First darn any holes there may be in the body of the skirt. Do not attempt to mend the band, as this will receive attention later. When you have done this you can start on the bottom of the skirt. This should be bound with narrow binding, put on much in the manner of a false hem.

Now you must see what can be done to the top of the skirt. First you must carefully unpick, not cut off, the old waistbelt. If you find, when you have done this, that the pins which pin up your skirt have torn holes in the stuff below the waistbelt, get some material and lightly sew patches underneath the holes, then neatly darn down on the outside.

Fit the skirt on, and if, as sometimes happens, the stuff has stretched, pin darts towards the back of the skirt; run up and cut open, damp the seams, and iron flat with a hot iron. Next, cut your webbing for the waistband, and tack on, inside and out. If you have a machine, it will be stronger if you stitch on the band by machine, but it will do quite well if done by hand.

Lastly, tack and iron down any pleats that are in the skirt. It is not necessary to iron the skirt itself, as, if well shaken before being dried, there will be no creases.

Take out any tacking threads you have put in, and the task is finished. You will be surprised to find how fresh your skirt looks, well repaying you for the trouble you have taken. As will be seen, the cost is trivial, and, if followed carefully, these directions will prove very useful to the girl who has only a very modest dress allowance.

SPORTING NEWS

ATHLETICS.

New York, Aug. 7.—Tentative programme for national and international athletics in connection with the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in 1915 were announced by Director of Athletics James E. Sullivan today. The schedule of sports covers a period from February 20 to December 4, during which time more than eighty competitors, including every branch of athletics and sporting contests will be held.

State and national champions open to scholastic, collegiate and A.A.U. athletes will be featured. Baseball, football, boxing, wrestling, rowing, bicycling, tennis, golf, gymnastics, yachting, bowling, hockey, basketball, shooting, swimming, handball and fencing have all been allotted dates in the extensive schedule.

According to present plans almost every governing athletic and sporting association will award its national championship contest to California clubs to be held in or near San Francisco. The leading athletes and teams of the British Isles and Europe will be invited to compete and a number of the events will be held under the metric and Olympic system of sports in order to compare and familiarize contestants with the conditions that will prevail at the Berlin Olympic games in 1916.

Championship events will be open to the world. No athletic competitions will be scheduled for women with the possible exception of such sports as tennis and golf.

RING.

Edgren, the great boxing expert writer, says:—

New York, Aug. 7.—Being a champion is a pretty soft proposition between scrapes. Here's a letter from is going to do this summer to pass dull time away:

My Dear Mr. Edgren:

First let me apologize for not hav- Willie Ritchie telling what Willie ing written you a long time ago. The only excuse I can offer is a poor one, so I won't attempt to make any.

My plans for the next month are as follows: I leave tomorrow for a two weeks' tour in my new National car through the south to Los Angeles, where I will spend a week at the different beaches and enjoy the fun of bathing in the briny, etc. We will then come north over a different road, which will make our trip an interesting one.

There are two roads to tour south on, namely the coast and the valleyi and as you are well acquainted with them it isn't necessary to go into detail. Upon my return here, which will be sometime in August, I will be prepared to dicker with all promoters who submit offers for my services and will accept the best offer made me for a September date, the promoter to name my opponent.

After I have accepted the September date I will leave at once in my car with several friends for Lake County called by is the "Switzerland of America," where we will hunt deer and fish for about ten days. Then I will return for the September date, wherever it may be. I am looking forward to appearing in New York. It has long been my ambition to appearing before a New York gathering of fans, and I want to be right when or wherever I start, so that I will not have to "alibi" myself to make good. My health is and has been all that I could wish it to be. With best wishes to you and all my New York friends, very sincerely,

WILLIE RITCHIE.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 7.—Manager Herman of Stanislaus Zbyzsko declared here that he would formally claim the world's heavyweight wrestling title for the Pole by September 1, in the event that Frank Gotch continued to refuse to meet Zbyszko in a finish contest.

"We will wrestle, winner take all, and will willingly submit to any conditions that the Iowa farmer will name," said Herman.

"If Frank wants to remain out of the game, well and good; but when he wrestles some of the men that the public knows Zbyszko can beat and then shouts that he is through with the game when we come around, I think he is not showing the best sportsmanship.

VICTORIA, B.C.

Lew Schell, writing in Lloyd's weekly on a tour through Canada, describes Victoria, B.C.:

"Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, has been dubbed "The City Beautiful." Adorned with handsome buildings and lovely parks and garlanded in flower gardens, it has well earned this sobriquet, and it may be recalled that the present King and Queen declared it the most beautiful city they had seen in their trip round the world. Yet Victoria is not merely, as its title might suggest, a place of many charms and endearments in which to loll away an idle life. Once, no doubt, it had a reputation of being slow going. That reputation is vanishing before the irresistible onward sweep of a new era. As a matter of fact, Victoria is the largest shipping port of Vancouver Island, and a place of great importance in commerce. Shortly five great transcontinental railway systems will be making it their furthest west terminals. As a seaport, Victoria has the best of all guarantees of future greatness—proximity to the ocean, absence of fog, and security of vessels in port, to say nothing of safe and easy sailing to Pacific waters. The harbor improvements now being carried out by the Dominion Government are an indication that the Government enterprise is joining with natural advantages in assuring the future of this important city. So far as attractiveness to settlers, and particularly British settlers, goes, Victoria has nothing to fear by comparison with any other Canadian city. For one thing, the environment has the note of familiarity that comes of the presence of many men from the Old Country. Victoria is a very English city, and for all its far western setting, the Englishman in it feels at home. Add to that the elements of natural beauty, delightful suburbs, admirable educational facilities, and splendid climate, and one begins to realise the advantages that Victoria has to offer."

HER FIRST STORY

It Was Simple and Commonplace, More Than Creditable, and Won a Husband.

BY FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDERSON.

"Come to bed, dear. It is getting late and you look all tired out."

"I couldn't sleep a wink, mother, until I have my work done. You know tomorrow is a holiday, and I want to get everything out of the way to give all my time to you, dear," replied Eve Dorrance brightly.

"Always thinking of me," sighed Mrs. Dorrance, a widow and an invalid; but her eyes were humid with gentle affection.

"Oh, dear! I wish I was not such a burden. I know I could manage, if you went back to work at your old position."

"Not a step!" cried Eva positively. "My duty is right here with you, and I shall not leave you alone until you are perfectly strong and well."

Mrs. Dorrance kissed her loyal, thoughtful daughter, and left Eva alone. She looked out upon the deserted city street. The snow-drifted midnight was burning like day, and the trees seemed to have stripped themselves like athletes to battle the wintry storm forces. Eva shivered slightly as she thought of the long uncertain frost-bound months before her, for fuel and clothing were hard to provide, with her small wage earnings.

"Oh, it will all come right," she declared buoyantly. "I must get more extra work."

Eva had been compelled to give up a steady position so she could nurse her mother. This had made it necessary for her to obtain copying to do at home. She had found a public stenographer who did considerable occasional work for writers and lawyers. Eva's pleasantest copying was that of some stories written by one Denzil Worthington. One day, while Eva was waiting for work at the office, she had been introduced to him by the manager. They had quite a chat. She was pleased to thus really know a story writer, her ideal of human intelligence, and he was interested in the brave, struggling, working girl.

Her Visitor Stammered and Seemed Confused.

Once he had come to the Dorrance apartment. He had a hurry call for a special article and dictated it while Eva wrote, and their acquaintance ripened.

The fair typist soon had the two brief manuscripts before her completed. She placed them aside, opened a drawer, and took from it one-half dozen sheets of paper. Eva read them over.

"Oh, dear!" she murmured, "I am a dismal failure. I guess I had better give up my foolish ambition to become an authoress. When I compare these with Mr. Worthington's stories, I see that I have a long road to travel before I can even dare to approach a publisher.

Eva's little story was simple and commonplace, but was more than creditable for an amateur. Almost unconsciously she had selected a heroine in an uncertain city environment like her own self. Unconsciously, too, she had her hero a model of her ideal, the author of the stories she had just copied. Her story, partly done, had one page not completed. It was where her heroine had written a letter to the man she loved. It ran:

"I am going away because I love you, and I tell you this only because I am sure we shall never meet again. But it will be sweet solace for me in the dreary future, to know that perhaps this knowledge may bring a passing thought in your mind of a girl far below you in social and intellectual position, but able fully to understand your noble soul, and knowing that your genius will some day bring you great fame, which she would be too lowly to share, save as a hindrance to your career."

"Denzil" wrote Eva at the top of the letter. Then she blushed. But why not make her hero "Denzil?" It was an odd name, a musical name, to her—she fluttered as she realized it—a dear name.

Just then Eva noticed some writing on the back of the manuscripts she had copied: "Must have these by ten o'clock tomorrow. Don't fail. D. W."

"Why," exclaimed Eva, "I did not see that direction before. What can I do. The office will be closed. Mr. Worthington must have the stories. I have his address. I will send them to him personally in the morning."

Eva got the scattered pages together in the morning, she hired a neighbor's boy to carry the stories to their author. That afternoon she sat down to rest. Her mother was asleep. Suddenly there was a knock at the door. Eva answered the summons. It was Mr. Worthington. Eva's face brightened. Then it became puzzled. There was something in the fervent way in which the author shook hands with her, an excited challenging eye glance that puzzled her.

"I hope you found the stories all right, Mr. Worthington?" said Eva, as they were seated.

"Oh, yes—that is—I did not look over them," and her visitor stammered and seemed confused. "Surely, Miss Dorrance, you are not going to leave the city?"

"Leave the city?" repeated Eva, bewildered. "I had not thought of it."

"Then—then—" Worthington was acting strangely—"then the note I received was—was not—" and he stopped dead short, and drew from his pocket—the unfinished page of poor Eva's story, the letter—the letter written by the fanciful heroine to the fanciful hero, to the fanciful "Denzil!"

"Oh, Mr. Worthington!"

In a flash Eva understood it all—her precious secret amateur page had got mixed in with the stories. She flushed crimson.

"I see it all—what a stupid presumptuous dolt I have been!" spoke Worthington, arising. "Please forgive me. I thought, I hoped—"

Eva, half crying, explained. Worthington gravely but with interest insisted on seeing the unfinished story.

"I am glad I came, foolish as I must appear to you," he said, when he had looked over the manuscript. "Miss Dorrance, you need not hesitate to go on as you have begun. You are a long way ahead of the first story effort. I shall be pleased to place it for you, when it is completed." Then his face fell again, and he added: "And it would have made me happier still, if what I had so fondly wished, so truly hoped—"

"It was a mistake, sending that sheet," faltered Eva, "but—oh, do not misconstrue me, but—cannot you understand?"

"That it might be true—that the dream of perfect happiness that brought me here might be true? Oh, Miss Dorrance—Eva—can you not see how much I love you!"

Her swimming eyes, her blushing face, her outstretched trembling hands, answered John Worthington.

"Then," he said proudly, enfolding her with a protecting arm, "it is to be love, hope, work—together!"

ORIGIN OF WEDDING GIFTS

Idea in the First Place Was to Give the Married Couple a Good Start in Life.

This custom one writer traces back to England to the time of the Norman conquest, if not before. At first the articles bestowed were understood to be mere loans, to be returned when the couple were well established in their new home. But when the feudal lord increased in power he grew to expect presents for his newly wedded children from those dependent upon him. Later laws were passed compelling a present in value up to one-twentieth of the yearly rent of the tenant.

To such an extent did this custom grow that among the nobility and others of wealth, it became an open commercial transaction. When Elizabeth, the daughter of King James I. was married her father received the sum of £21,000. With this greed for money and other "presents," the poorer people originated the "bidding," or "penny" wedding. At this light refreshments were served and a plate was passed around for cash "offerings." The sums collectetd often aggregated a hundred pounds (fully equivalent to $500 in modern money). It was from this custom that the modern one of the "pound" party, often given for the newly married in America, was derived.

In order to increase the gifts there was prepared an entertainment called an "ale." A green bush was stuck up in front of the house and everybody was made welcome. These entertainments proved highly profitable, but so riotous did they become that many of the shires of England passed laws allowing only thirty-two at any one "ale."

Brass Band Composed of Lepers.

On the island of Colon in the Philippine archipelago is to be heard the most select and remarkable brass band in the world. It is made up wholly of lepers, banished there to a living death, for the island is the haven and retreat for the lepers of the United States possessions in the far east. The total population of the island is in the neighborhood of 4,775, all of whom are under treatment.

Knew What He Meant to Say.

"Children," asked a teacher of the history class, "what is the difference between a monarchy and a republic?" "A monarchy has a king for ruler," cried Sammy, "an' a republic has—has—inhabitants."

Definition.

"A tip is a small sum of money you give to somebody because you're afraid he won't like not being paid for something you haven't asked him to do.—The Bailie (Glasgow).

"Three R's" Sufficient

At a meeting of the West of Scotland Iron and Steel Institute, Mr. Walter Dixon, in his presidential address said there was a unanimous opinion among employers he had consulted that any book-learning outside the rudiments of the "three R's" was a matter beyond the requirements of 90 to 95 per cent. of the usual manual workers, and that of the remaining 5 or 10 per cent., among whom are to be found the foremen and other leaders, most of them would attain to the position in which they found themselves by their own initiative if three-quarters of the existing aids to learning were abolished. Education should be directed to enable the workers to spend their leisure more rationally.

STUDENTS WORK SIDE BY SIDE WITH NAVVIES

In the Evening They Teach and Write Letters for the Frontier Toilers —All University Men

Interesting, indeed, are the experiences of the students sent out by the Reading Camp Association from various Universities in Canada who spent the summer working shoulder to shoulder with the frontier laborer in the van of civilization—the railway construction camp, rugged mining region of the distant timber limit, devoting their evenings to educational work among those denied the advantages for which they blaze the way. Many and varied, humorous and tragic are the stories told by these men, who for a season substitute overalls for college gowns. Some are employed as axe men, others as graders, brakemen on "gravel pit limiteds," nurses in the camp hospitals, clerks, "cookees," blacksmiths, timekeepers, teamsters or "skinners," lumberjacks, and in other capacities.

The Association's work is to send an instructor into a camp, provide him with a car or tent, fitted as a combined reading room and night school, and keep him supplied with reading matter, books, (which are furnished in travelling libraries by the Provincial Governments) and current newspapers and magazines for the use of the men without charge. The instructor works with the gang in the day time, in any capacity upon which the camp boss may decide. He wins the confidence and respect of the laborers, following the exhortation of Froebel, "Come, let us live with our students." The evenings are devoted to work in the reading room, teaching classes of foreigners or illiterate and ignorant English-speaking workmen, informal lecturing, letter-writing for the men, and assisting in many other practical ways. Years ago a ministerial student, Alfred Fitzpatrick, a Nova Scotian by birth, graduated from Queen's University. Instead of settling permanently in the pastorate he devoted some time to a personal study of actual conditions in the lumbering and railroad construction camps of the frontier. The young student secured some financial backing and commenced to give his idea practical form. At first operations were necessarily conducted on a small scale. Many difficulties were encountered. Foremen were apathetic or openly hostile. But the lanky youth who had conceived the plan was not discouraged. In 1900, three instructors were employed and stationed in lumber camps during the day as actual laborers, teaching in the evenings, on holidays, and when the weatherman would not permit outside work. In the spring of 1901, the Reading Camp Association was born.

Since that time the work of the Reading Camp Association has greatly expanded, until it now carries on its operations in six provinces between Quebec and British Columbia inclusive. The men stationed in Ontario on construction lines, lear between $200.00 and $250.00 each for their summer's work, while those in the West save from $250.00 to $300.00. In some cases the manual labor was trying on students unaccustomed to such exercise and many hardships were endured.

THE VICTORIA BRIDGE

A Hark Back to 1860 When the Prince Opened It

Some insist that modern Montreal was born in 1851, while others say that there was hardly a hint of modernity until 1860. The building of the Victoria Bridge and the consolidation of scattered railway interests, aided in the growth, which became marked in the important matters of new buildings and the opening up of new streets. The Hon. John Young had predicted the bridge, and was laughed at as a dreamer. The bridge was completed in 1860. It was superintended in its construction by the great Stephenson, who was presented with an address in the Mechanic's Hall by the late Mr. Henry Bulmer. The Prince of Wales, the late King Edward, came out to open the bridge. That visit is vividly remembered by many now living. The Prince, when in the city and country, won the good will of all by his urbanity and simple, unaffected attitude. At the time of the Prince's visit the population of the city was only 93,000 and the value of real estate $28,976,270. The ship channel showed eighteen feet and there were 141 manufactories in the city, of which the product was $5,189,981.

DIABETES CURED —THE PROOF

We have proof of cases of Diabetes that have been cured by SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES when the patient had been a sufferer from the disease for fifteen (15) years. This remedy is particularly efficacious in cases in which open wounds, add to the sufferings of the patient. It has cured the most stubborn cases after all the usual remedies and diets have signally failed.

We have scores of confidential letters from grateful patients who have found relief in Sanol's Anti-Diabetes. These letters do not come from people in distant parts, but from residents of western cities and towns. They are convincing.

—Sanol's Anti-Diabetes is no common remedy—it is different from the usual—it is a specific and scientific remedy, prepared for the relief and cure of one disease and one only.

A well-known Government official of British Columbia (whose name will be given in confidence) writes us that on June 12th he commenced the use of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, and that on June the 18th his urine was free of sugar. To prove that wonderful statement he sent us the certificates of the chemist's analysis. "The result," he says, "I regard as highly gratifying."

SHIP'S CREW OF WOMEN

There sailed from Boston recently the schooner Hiram, which is commanded and chiefly worked by women. The vessel, which is 100 years old, is commanded by Mrs. George Orne, and the only man on board is her husband, who signed as first mate under his wife, the rest of the crew being women.

Mrs. Orne is not a suffragette, but she has owned and commanded the Hiram for some years. She is a good navigator and a daring and excellent sailor. Having had trouble with her crew of men, she determined to replace them with women, and the ancient schooner manned by women, sailed for the coast of Maine to pick up a cargo of timber for New York.

Mrs. Orne at the wheel gives her orders as sharply and accurately as any man could, while her female crew smartly executes them.

William O'Brien, a Sandwich Farmer Abused a Waif

For brutally beating George Fisher a nine-year-old waif, whom he had taken from the McPherson Home at Stratford, for adoption, William O'Brien, a farmer living in the township of Sandwich, was fined $8.35 by Police Magistrate Leggatt, Windsor, with the option of 30 days in jail. It was shown that O'Brien, who is a burly-looking fellow, had pounded the little boy over the back and shoulders with a poker until the child's body was black and blue.

NO STONE ON HIS GRAVE

"I desire that my funeral be strictly private, and that no stone be placed over my grave," is a concluding paragraph in the will of Hon. Edward [illegible] who died worth $300,000.

Bewildering Names.

Women who do only a small amount of buying are likely to feel oppressed when they do undertake to make some modest purchases, by their ignorance of the names of the various articles of merchandise shown to them. It is only necessary, however, to know something of the origins of the complicated nomenclature of trade to be convinced that an inability to master it need not be taken as a sign of mental weakness. The Upholsterer tells of a modernized oriental rug which was named by putting a lot of fanciful names into a hat and then drawing one from the collection. Another rug has acquired a name with a particularly nice oriental sound; but it is the name of a people that has not longer any distinctive existence, and had nothing whatever to do with either the making or designing of the rug. When names are so easy to get it is not strange that every material, color and mode has numbers of them sufficient to create utter bewilderment in the minds of the initiated.

KING HONORED WORKHOUSE ARTIST

The glamor of romance and the sunshine of Royal favor sometimes penetrate to strange places.

The dormitory of a workhouse hospital, the walls of which are hung with pen and ink drawings, has been brightened by the gracious regard of his Majesty. The dormitory is the Fishpool Workhouse at Great Lever, between Bolton and Manchester, and upon an inmate, of artistic gifts, the rays of public attention have been turned by an act of Royal benevolence. The inmate is a sufferer from tuberculosis.

John Morgan, who is fifty-one years of age, has a turn for watercolor painting, and he has had the rare fortune of one of his pictures being accepted by King George who forwarded him $5.00 as an acknowledgment.

"I make pictures in my leisure time as I feel inclined," said Morgan in an interview. "The work pleases me and passes the time. I am a house painter and decorator by trade, but I had to cease work owing to an attack of consumption. I believe I caught it in London five years ago, when I went there looking for work. I have been in the workhouse here for about two years."

Asked what put into his head the idea of writing to the King, he replied, "It was my birthday on Coronation Day, and the idea occurred to me then. I thought I would send his Majesty one of my pictures. So I made a small water-color painting of an ideal landscape. The size is 14 in. by 8 in., and I forwarded it through Lord Knollys to the King.

The walls of the room occupied by Morgan are decked with his works and the apartments of the officials also contain his sketches, both in black and white and in color.

MERCY FOR THE HORSE

The Duke of Connaught Condemns Docking and Reckless Driving

"I think the docking of horses' tails is a relic of barbarism. The dealers may not agree with me—the horses sell better when they are docked. I think it is a shame to deprive this dumb animal of the tail which God has given it." This was the declaration of the Duke of Connaught at the annual meeting of the Ottawa Humane Society. His Royal Highness also spoke strongly against reckless driving and overloading, which the Humane Society is fighting in Ottawa. "I hope there will grow up a strong sentiment against reckless driving and overloading," he continued.

War and Perfume Prices

It is feared that perfumes may prove more costly because of the Balkan war, inasmuch as Bulgaria is practically the sole source of the supply of attar of roses.

The demand for attar of roses is very great, for it is used in making many kinds of perfumes, favored by society women. It is stated that 150 pounds of rose leaves are required to give one ounce of the precious attar. The principal stills are at Kasanlik, in eastern Roumelia, which, at the time of the battle of Plevna, belonged to Italy.

Lady Shot in Motor Bus

At Ruthin, Wales, Wilfrid Hall, a fifteen-year-old boy was summoned for using an airgun without a licence. A pellet from the gun struck a Miss Felix, who at the time was a passenger on a motor bus. Miss Felix had to undergo an operation to extract the pellet. The Bench fined the boy $1.25, and emphasised the fact that a licence was required for an airgun.

CHEESE OVER 100 YEARS OLD

In the Alpine regions of the Swiss cantons of Vaud and Valais cheesemakers will keep their products for years. They assert that cheese improves with age. At Les Ormonts, in the canton of Vaud, it is customary to make special cheeses for certain family feasts. They are tagged with explanatory labels, and eaten several years later, at other feasts, or even at funerals. Often such cheeses are bequeathed from one generation to another as family souvenirs. At Les Ormonts, in a concealed shelter, there was discovered a cheese dating from 1786. It was as hard as a rock, and had to be cut with a saw. It is reported to have tasted "good."

A Woman Contractor

Mrs. Margaret Kelly is described as Boston's only woman contractor. She has been in the business more than seventeen years, and has brought up six children. "Before my marriage I was a dressmaker," Mrs. Kelly said. "My husband owned a small milk and contracting business, and I looked out for the milk end of the work. At his death, when my children were quite small, it didn't take me long to concentrate on the contracting business. There's nothing mysterious about the business, and there's no reason why a woman shouldn't be able to figure on a contract as well as a man. Any bright girl who makes up her mind to win can do it." Mrs. Kelly declares that she has never been discriminated against because she is a woman, and that people who know she does good work are always willing to give her an equal chance with men contractors.

Moving Picture Theatres

A recent estimate placed the number of motion picture theatres in England at 4,500, attended by 25,000,000 persons each week.

Queen Victoria's Stockings

Silk stockings said to have been worn by Queen Victoria on her wedding day, with a piece of orange blossom from her bridal bouquet, were among a number of Royal relics, many of them authenticated, which were on sale at the Manor House, Knaresborough, near Harrogate.

The articles named were in a bijou table, which sold for $65, and which also contained pieces of the bridal cakes of King Edward and King George, Lord Nelson's garter, and shoes worn by Pauline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Port Severn Section—Severn Division, Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 2.00 o'clock p.m., on Monday, August 25th, 1913.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after July 26th at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at the office of the District Engineer, Public Works Department, Midland, Ont., and at the office of the Postmaster, Orillia, Ont.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada, for the sum of $10,000 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

USED HIS HAT-BAND AS SAFE DEPOSIT

A prolonged litigation was cut short at Aberdeen, Scotland, by a discovery in an old silk hat which a pawnbroker's wife was endeavoring to sell. In order to make it fit the purchaser she slipped her fingers under the band to remove what seemed to be padding.

Taking the wad out she discovered that it was a bunch of bank deposit receipts for the amount off $3,000. Fortunately the pawnbroker knew that the hat had belonged to a gentleman who had died three years previously. He restored the receipts to his executors an was informed that the money represented had given rise to a bitterly contested lawsuit.

The dead man's lawyers were specially overjoyed at the discovery, as they had been under serious suspicion of carelessness in losing the receipts. Nobody had been aware of their client's habit of using his hat as a safe deposit box.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath
and Dean Hoard

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the Island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rosiny offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XV—The countess finally gets Santos into her clutches and he promises to do anything for her. She gets another letter from Werdenstein asking her to find out why Edison is interested in the Schomburg estate, he having made overtures for its purchase.

CHAPTER XVI—Edison applies personally to Werdenstein with an offer for the property, but gets no satisfaction. Astra and Edison set the date for their wedding. Werdenstein gets a letter from the countess promising to reveal Edison's secrets as soon as the property is turned over to her.

CHAPTER XVII—On the day of their wedding Astra and Edison get a letter from the countess saying she has left the country with Santos.

Napoleon placed the long missive on the desk and looked thoughtfully at Astra, then without a word, turned to the electro-stylograph.

A few minutes later he was talking to his master mechanic, old Jerome Whistler, on the island of Ciryne.

"Hello, Whistler?"

"Hello, Mr. Edison! What can I do for you."

"How is everything at Ciryne?"

"All well."

"The aerodromones all in?"

"Yes, sir, except the Eagle, that is your private machine."

"Have you seen the Countess Rosiny today?"

"She left with Mr. Duprel, day before yesterday on the Hawk."

"But Santos brought the machine back?"

"Not he, but young Sullivan, who went with them."

"Then he does not know where Santos and the countess left the machine?"

"He says he doesn't."

"Leave the Hawk as she is; don't touch her until I come. That is all I wanted; sorry that I had to disturb you. Good night."

He disconnected the 'graph and turning to Astra said:

"Santos is another victim of the bewitching countess. I am sorry for him."

"She seems created to leave sorrow wherever she goes. Poor Santos!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Secret of the Aerodromone.

The newly made Princess of Schomburg Lithow and her fiance, Santos, reached Berlin safely. They flew in the Hawk to Irkutsk in Asiatic Russia and from there continued their journey on the quick aeroline to the German capital. They sent the aerodromone back to Ciryne.

The Rosiny mansion was ready for them. Rositta's first action was to send word to the Count von Werdenstein that she wanted to see him.

When the chancellor came, Rositta received him alone. It was necessary for her to explain the situation. The Count Rosiny was dead. He had been on board the Tsar that Napoleon had sunk. This freed Rositta, but as a princess she could not marry a plain citizen, so she asked the count to make Mr. Duprel a titled nobleman. Rositta told all she thought necessary, and they talked for a long time.

Santos was told the plans without the slightest idea that it was a tremendous, far-reaching plot designed to destroy all the achievements of the peace committee. He could see nothing but Rositta, he could think of nothing but their approaching marriage.

The purpose the chancellor and Rositta had in mind, was to manufacture and equip a number of aerodromones. If they pursued this desire, they would have, inside of a year, the power to master the situation and take the lead in political affairs.

Suemeg now belonged to Rositta and the cirynith deposit there was very rich. The Count von Werdenstein placed an unlimited account in the bank to her credit, so that she and Santos could begin work at once.

The people of Kiss-Cell were surprised at the unusual activities displayed by the strange men imported.

Santos Duprel was very busy. He had been informed that after the successful completion of the first aerodromone he would have the title of "count" conferred upon him, and that this would remove all the barriers between Rositta and him. Their marriage would take place the day of the trial flight. This fired his ambition, and he worked hard and long. He was allowed to plan as he wished, and one day laid his blue prints before the Count von Werdenstein. He showed him that a larger and more powerful aerodromone than Napoleon's would be necessary; otherwise the design and make would be unchanged. This improvement in size would give more motive power, and thus make it superior to the Eagle.

"And what is your motive power? I don't see any details in your plan that would explain the wonderful power that your devils of the air possess."

Santos cast a questioning glance at Rositta. She nodded acquiescence, and he began:

"The power, of course, is electricity. I will try to explain things as simply as they are. The flight of the aerodromone is based on the flight of a bird—not any bird, but the king of the air, the eagle. Size of body, wings, and balance are all considered. After a long search and study, Napoleon Edison found that no muscle power could have the endurance of the eagle and a few other birds that are able to cover remarkably long distances in a very short time. He closely examined living birds, and took the homing pigeon, for example, after a long flight, and proved that they had collected in their feathers a surprisingly large quantity of atmospherical electricity. The feathers on the wings especially, serve as collectors, and every little hairlike feather adds to the supply.

"When the bird begins to fly a regular magneto is created, that has its two poles at the two ends of the wings. One side is the negative and the other the positive. From the moment this electric-magnetic state is reached, all the work the muscles are expected to do is to direct the flight, as the wings are moved by the force of the electricity; that is, they come together until the force of the opposite magnetic power forces them apart, and the repetition of this operation is called flight."

"That certainly sounds simple," murmured the chancellor.

"Now take the aerodromone," continued Santos. "Through mechanical inventions, and cirynith, we have improved the bird's method of flight. The improvement is in the storing away of unused magnetism. The more quickly we fly, the more magnetism is gathered by the machine." Santos pointed to the front part of the machine on the blueprint, calling the chancellor's attention to the contrivance that gave the machine the appearance of an eagle. It was a large brass ball, covered with a cirynith cap. Then he pointed to a broad brass bar that extended over the entire top of the machine; that bar was like a round brush, and its duty was to gather in every little spark of electricity, and store it in the brass collector. When the insulation was broken, a lightning flash was sent out, directed at the will of the air man. So long as the machine was in motion there was always plenty of electricity in the collector, ready to be sent out to cause destruction to anything.

"Wonderful!" sighed the count. "I know what those sparks mean, I have seen them in action."

"The simple machinery that is built into every aerodromone is to control the flight and to start the wings. On account of the extreme simplicity of the mechanism and the tremendous strength of cirynith, the aerodromone is, practically speaking, indestructible."

"But how can one machine capture the other, or even fight the other, under these conditions?" asked the count anxiously.

"There are two ways in which a machine may gain victory over the other. One is to disable the brain of the machine, that is, the man behind the wheel."

"How can that be done?" asked the count eagerly.

"Cirynith, as you know, is harder than anything except the diamond, so I believe if hard steel bullets were made with diamond points they would penetrate the comparatively thin shell of cirynith that defends the airmen. However, this is only a theory. Experiments must show the advisability of their manufacture."

"What is the other way?"

"That is a certain method, and is based on the laws of electricity that seem to govern aerial navigation."

"What is it?" asked the count, impatiently, as Santos hesitated and looked at Rositta.

"It is the same as when a boy takes a piece of amber or any other substance that can be magnetized and lifts up a paper scrap. The quicker airman has to maneuver so as to alight on top of the hostile machine. The lower machine then sticks to the upper, like the paper to the amber, only with such great force that it cannot be released until the current is stopped and the necessary insulation between the opposing forces is obtained."

"But the wings of the lower machine might strike the upper," remarked the count.

"It looks that way," answered Santos wearily. It brought back the happy days in the service of Napoleon, and his heart was heavy. "But, as I have mentioned, different laws prevail in the air, totally different from the laws that govern the land or water. The atmospherical electricity has qualities that cannot be judged by our present knowledge. It has to be experimented with. Our trials on the island of Ciryne showed us that the aerodromones do not injure each other; they might stick together, or be hurled apart, but they are never damaged."

Not More Than Two Hundred Feet Below Him Stretched a Broad, Snow-Covered Peak.

"Then you think, Mr. Duprel, that you will be able to capture Edison's force?"

The little man cast an appealing glance toward Rositta; she looked him straight in the eyes and encouraged him. He said bravely:

"Mr. Edison is a very formidable enemy, but our improved machines will give us the advantage, and besides, we will have a larger fleet."

The count was satisfied and the work under Santos' direction went on. It took months before the factory was in perfect shape, and the various parts were manufactured for the aerodromones.

They often wondered that Napoleon had not appeared to interfere with their work.

"I am afraid," said the Count von Werdenstein, "that he is preparing a surprise for us. I do not like his silence."

"Or is he simply enjoying a long honeymoon?" was Rositta's sarcastic comment.

But the count shook his head doubtfully.

A year had almost passed when the first European aerodromone was finished and ready for its trial trip. It was as perfect as mechanical genius could make it.

Count von Werdenstein had invited several reigning monarchs to attend the trial flight and Suemeg rivaled the ancient Roman pageants in splendor. Only a few besides the royal spectators were allowed on the plateau near the aerodromone plant. The police compelled the uninformed thousands who lived in the neighborhood to keep a respectful distance.

Santos Duprel's heart beat high when he and Rositta stepped into the waiting machine. Rositta had decorated this first aerodromone with a gorgeous princely crown, and it glittered bravely in the morning sun.

Rositta was clever and studied the aerodromone under Santos' direction until she was expert in its control and manufacture. When they entered the aerodromone, Santos went to the wheel, moved the starting lever and the wings rose slowly, then swooped downward, causing the machine to rise swiftly and surely. Everything worked exactly as desired and the machine soon disappeared from the view of the watchers, behind a bank of clouds.

They went up and swam in the fleecy clouds that billowed in the golden sunshine. They reached an enormous height, then Santos reversed the machine, turned off the power and they slid downward. Rositta stood by his side, embracing him with one arm. In her exuberance she reached up with her free hand and pulled the lever that emptied the brass receptacle; a blinding flash came, striking downward, zigzagging through the clouds, and mighty thunder echoed through space.

She realized her might, and in that moment of intoxicating delight she dreamed a dream—she saw herself as the ruler of the world.

"How long will it take to have twenty machines like this, Santos?" asked Rositta, eagerly.

"Five or six months, my queen!"

"Then, then we will see." Her eyes glittered strangely with a fire that was not love.

When they landed on the spot from where they ascended, the Emperor of Germany handed Santos Duprel the parchment with the great imperial seal attached, and said: "Count von Duprel, I want to be the first to congratulate you."

An hour later the newly made Count von Duprel was receiving the matrimonial blessing from the court vicar. The crowned heads were happy to witness the marriage ceremony.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Garden of Eden.

Napoleon and Astra kept the flight of the Countess Rosiny and the disappearance of Santos Duprel secret. Even Mrs. Edison did not know that Rositta had left.

Astra watched Napoleon's thoughtful face with some apprehension. At times he would sit gazing into space, entirely oblivious to his surroundings. Rositta's flight had made him aware of the harm that could come to his beloved country.

Their honeymoon had been short, as neither could be absent from their posts long. The following week Astra returned to her presidential duties and Napoleon to his aerodromone.

Shortly after their return he talked long and seriously with his wife. Then the American Eagle left the roof of the Crystal Palace and flew toward the west. He stopped at Ciryne and questioned Sullivan, and found that Santos and Rositta had left the aerodromone in Russia. So he knew that they had, by this time, perfected their plans, and the fact that Rositta signed herself as the Princess of Schomburg Lithow alone made it plain that they would try to take warfare into the air.

Jerome Whistler was at the laboratory and Napoleon give him instructions. He inspected the stock of available cirynith, then spent many hours over his drawing table, but when he was through with his work began to whistle a pleasant melody. Rolling up his drawings, he said in a low, exultant voice: "This will come as a surprise."

He called Jerome Whistler and turned the drawings over to him. It was an aerodromone.

"I am glad we have enough material to do this, friend Whistler; besides, we will have enough left over for other purposes."

Napoleon returned to the capital to report and advise Astra that he would make a longer trip for reconnoitering purposes. He left that evening. He visited Suemeg, and there saw what he expected to see. People were busily at work, making the peak like an immense ant hill. He saw Santos emerge from one building and walk across the plain to another, and the knew, then, that Santos had betrayed him; that aerodromones would fight against aerodromones in God's clear, pure air.

He was sad that the man whom he had trusted so implicitly had turned traitor at the instigation of the countess.

Satisfied that his surmise was correct, he turned homeward and after a short conference with Astra left again. This time he traversed the Pacific coast of the Americas. Starting from Mexico, he went southward, watching his electro-spectroscope incessantly, while he circled over the volcanic regions of the Andes.

Day after day he continued his search, going farther and farther south, always near the ocean. His spectroscope showed signs of cirynith several times, but never in large quantities.

Weeks were spent this way. From time to time he returned to Washington, and each time he returned he stopped a few hours at Ciryne to see how the work on the new machine was progressing.

He had raked through Colombia and Ecuador with minute care and now was on the border of Peru. He continued his search with unswerving faith in ultimately finding the precious metal that would enable him to build a larger fleet.

He had been circling over the Andes, peering down on steep precipices, rugged slopes and snow-covered peaks where goats and llamas were the only inhabitants, when suddenly he saw an intense greenish light glowing on his spectroscope. He slowed down, and the instrument gave evidence of a large deposit of cirynith. Not more than two hundred feet below him stretched a broad snow-covered peak. A lavatic, porous, bare space was visible through the snow, on the northeastern corner, and there he found what he sought. The precious cirynith lay in heavy layers, almost perfectly pure. The deposit was not as large as the one in Hungary, but more easily obtainable, and it would be unnecessary to go through a lot of preliminary steps before they could carry it away.

Satisfied with his discovery, he explored the secluded spot that never before had been touched by human foot. The geological formation was of volcanic origin. It seemed as though the mountain had been rent apart and the space left between the raw edged ridges in the course of time had developed into a paradise.

The place appealed to his sentimental instincts. He took his machine over to the meadow and ate his lunch on the green, mossy grass. He filled his cup from the crystal lake and drank deep of the cool, refreshing water.

"Beautiful spot!" he murmured, stretching out his arms slowly, as if extending his blessing. "I name you 'The Garden of Eden!'" Then he entered his machine, flew over the cirynith deposit, filled some sacks with the irregular, hard crystals and started homeward. His mind was filled with schemes to frustrate the European plans.

The next day he took six aerodromones from Ciryne to the Garden of Eden, and they made trips back and forth until the whole deposit of cirynith was landed on the island of Ciryne. The spectroscope showed that there must be more under the surface, but Napoleon knew he had sufficient for the time being, and was satisfied to leave the rest until such time as he needed it.

New hangars were built on the island. The work progressed rapidly. Aerodromone after aerodromone of the new type was stored away by the expert workmen.

Napoleon's visits to Astra were his happiest hours. He confided his hopes and expectations to her. She gave him all the sympathy and encouragement at her command. Their lives were attuned to perfect harmony.

The work on Ciryne had progressed so well that Whistler was able to oversee it all without Napoleon's assistance and one day he took leave from Astra with the following words:

"I am going to pay a visit to our excellent friend, the Count von Werdenstein, and then, when I have ascertained his attitude toward the peace committee, I will go on a still hunt for the final preventive of war."

The Count von Werdenstein's palace was equipped with a roof hangar, as were all the large private dwellings, and the Eagle found it an easy matter to alight there without molestation. Napoleon had sent a 'graph message to the count to expect him, but did not mention the time of his arrival.

The quick descent made it impossible for the observers to discern the type of machine that alighted, and the workmen in the hangar did not pay any attention to Sullivan when Napoleon left the craft. Sullivan simply locked the door and sat reading until his return.

The count was very much surprised to receive his card, as the attendants had not announced him. Nevertheless, he received him in his usual suave manner.

Every Weak Throat Quickly Strengthened And Bronchitis Cured

Grand Results Follow the Direct Breathing Remedy, Which Cures Without Drugging.

The country is fairly wild over the wonderful recovery that throat sufferers are making every day with Catarrhozone. From ocean to ocean come letters telling of rapid cures—and cures when the complaint was chronic and long standing. It's a brand new principle upon which Catarrhozone works—not a single dose of medicine to take—nothing to upset the stomach or spoil digestion.

You can breathe through the Catarrhozone Inhaler medicated air that is full of healing, soothing balsams, full of piney antiseptic essences that resemble the air of the pine woods in the Adirondacks. The piney vapor has a truly marvelous action on weak throats. It brings strength and health to the bronchitic, stops that hacking, irritating cough, prevents hoarseness and difficult breathing. You can't find anything for weak-throated people on earth more beneficial than Catarrhozone. It means heaven on earth to the man that has had bronchitis, catarrh or throat irritation. You will realize this the first time you use Catarrhozone, which is a scientific preparation specially designed for diseases of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. Get the large size, it lasts two months, costs $1.00; medium size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The steamer Stoney Lake will run special trips to Stoney Lake on Civic Holiday to enable people to attend the annual Regatta.

WANTED.

Wanted a young lady as nurse, companion to an invalid. Apply to P.O. Box 942, Peterborough. 3-d.

Local Cheese Board.

Mr. Gillespie bought all the cheese at the Board meeting yesterday morning at thirteen cents. The members had their annual feed of one year old cheese, the gift coming from Hamilton Bros., Simcoe street. The chief article on the menu was Central Smith cheese made in 1912.

Mr. Fry Breaks an Arm.

A very painful accident happened to Mr. J. W. Fry, of the Peterborough Music Store, yesterday morning. Mr. Fry was on the elevator and when he went to get off at the second floor, his foot caught and he fell very heavily injuring his foot, and he also fractured his right arm.

Horticulturists at Stoney Lake.

Yesterday afternoon the visiting horticulturists spent a happy and instructive afternoon at Stoney Lake. They took train for Lakefield and then took the good ship Stoney Lake. They returned in the evening profoundly interested in the beauties of the Kawartha Lakes.

Mr. Dumble Finds Relics

As Police Magistrate Dumble was on the shore of White Lake, which is near his summer cottage, he noticed a peculiar looking mound. This he dug into. It was composed of alternate layers of ashes and earth, thus pointing to great antiquity. In the mound he discovered some ancient Indian pottery, beautifully decorated, a stone skinning knife in good state of preservation, a bone needle and a well preserved Indian jaw bone.

Michael Fallon Again Full.

Michael Fallon, who was fined $50 a short time ago for being drunk as a blacklister, given time to pay it, was up again yesterday. He was charged with having been drunk again and was fined $10. Fallon now owes $60 in fines. He will give an order on his employer to make weekly payments towards his fines.

Belleville Visitors Here.

Yesterday the city was invaded by about 1000 welcome visitors from Belleville and intervening points. The excursion was run under the auspices of the Holloway street Methodist church, Belleville, and arrived in two sections. The visitors who arrived before noon took in the city by street cars and on foot. The steamer Stoney Lake took a large crowd over the Lift Lock during the afternoon.

Lindsay Boy Rewarded.

Lindsay, Aug. 6.—Mr. James McFadden, who bravely rescued Miss Robertta Carew, from drowning at the locks a few weeks ago, is the recipient of a handsome gold watch from her father, Mr. John Carew. On the inside of the case is engraved "Presented to Mr. James McFadden, by John Carew in appreciation of his heroism in rescuing his daughter, Robertta Grace, from drowning, July 11, 1913."

A Cowardly Act.

While on her way to a neighbor's house about 9.30 last night, a lady was struck on the head with a stone. The street was dark and not lighted, and the stone came from a bunch of bushes on the side of the roadway. Our informant says the stone was hurled deliberately, as the party who threw it immediately made off as fast as his legs could carry him. It was a cowardly act, and the perpetrator will no doubt be severely punished if discovered.

Women Gamblers.

The Times was informed that Peterborough ladies are somewhat sporty, and are in the habit of staking money on ball games. We do not know if this is true, but if it is wrong for women to make sport the subject of bets it is also wrong for men to do the same thing. What is sauce for the goose in this matter is also sauce for the gander. Women in many places play the races, but we do not think there is much of this sort of thing in Peterborough.

Titanic the Second.

Yesterday a local gentleman launched successfully his new gasoline launch, just across from the baseball grounds. The boat slid gracefully down the 16 foot skids and floated on the bosom of the Otonabee like a thing of life. The owner had intended to christen his boat "Nifty" possibly a pet name for his Sunday girl. However, during the proceedings, a friend attached two cards on the bow with the words "Titanic II." The owner is going to adopt the name for his craft.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY HELPS

Mary D.: I want you to try the following recipe to whiten, soften and beautify the skin of your face and neck. It is one which you will find equally beneficial to the hands and arms. Though inexpensive, it is the best I have ever tried. Dissolve 4 ounces of spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water) then add 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This will clear and soften your skin quickly while removing tan, sunburn, freckles and other blemishes.

Cora: Objectionable fuzzy or hairy growths are easily banished if you mix enough powdered delatone with water to form a thick paste and apply to hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair is gone. Excepting in very aggregated cases, one application of delatone is sufficient. No harm will result, but be certain you get delatone.

Janet: Your eyelashes will grow long and have a beautiful curl if you apply a little pyroxin at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger, and a little rubbed on the eyebrows makes them come in thick and lustrous. This simple treatment will add greatly to your beauty. Use care and don't get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

C. H. H.: The redness and dullness of your eyes, as well as the burning sensation of which you complain can be readily cured for practically nothing. Just get an ounce of crystos, dissolve it in a pint of water and put a few drops in each eye daily. This is a natural tonic, which will both soothe and strengthen, while continued use brightens and beautifies the "windows of your soul," making them stronger and more attractive.

A.M.F.: You should try this shampoo, which I always use because it keeps my hair lustrous and fluffy and is cheap and convenient. You can make it by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Use while it is still very warm and rinse the hair thoroughly several times after you have shampooed it well. This shampoo also benefits the roots of the hair, keeps the scalp perfectly clear of dandruff and has an invigorating effect.

A.J.B.: Your trouble with itching scalp and loss of hair can be overcome with this excellent quinine hair tonic, which I always make up here at home. Get an ounce of quinzoin from your druggist and dissolve it in a half pint of alcohol, to which solution add one half pint of cold water. Once or twice a week rub this into the scalp with the tips of your fingers. This is the best tonic I have been able to find among the many which have come to my attention. It is refreshing and effective, with no unpleasant features, such as matting the hair or making it appear stringy.

C,J.H.: You say you are all fagged out. Let me give you a recipe which will brace you up and restore the clearness of your complexion and remove the yellow, muggy appearance of your chin and neck. Dissolve one ounce kardene and one-half cup sugar in one-half pint of alcohol and add hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and you will note the quick improvement of appearance and general health. If you are ever troubled with pimples you will find it quickly removes them by making healthy circulation.

P. S.: No, fat is hardly an aid to attractiveness, but you have no excuse for being fat—no one has. Get four ounces of parnotis from your druggist and dissolve it in 1½ pints of water. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and, in a short time, without discomfort or danger, you will begin to lose flesh. Remember a persistent fight is necessary to win against fat. This is the formula I know of that does not require dieting or exercise.

Dot: Your wrinkles, especially in middle age, are inexcusable and a certain remedy for them consists in treating the skin thoroughly with a plain almozoin cream jelly, easily made at home. This is made by pouring 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint water, into which is then dissolved 1 ounce almozoin. Massaging with this simple vegetable cream jelly will quickly rid the skin of lines, blackheads and wrinkles, and when used for flabby muscles and hollows will make the flesh firm and smooth. The results are very pleasing when used as a night mask.

Oldest Local Building Gone.

One of Peterborough's oldest landmarks was in process of demolition yesterday. This is the plaster-covered, two-storey building on Hunter street, just across from the Oriental Hotel, owned by Mr. James Murty. This is, a matter known to few, a composite building. The first floor built of stone, some 70 years ago, was formerly the "Farmers' Inn," a one-storey structure. Later on, about 40 years ago, a frame barn located on the hill behind was removed on skids to the top of the stone walls, from which the roof had been removed. Mr. Murty is at once going to replace the old building by a modern three-storey brick structure with mansard roof.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Do Not Wear Gowns.

A letter received by The Times from Kingston, asks if it is customary for Peterborough church choirs to wear gowns during summer months. So far as we know they do not, as they are too hot for the dog days. It appears that the members of the choir at Queen street Methodist church, Kingston, took strong objections to wearing their gowns in the warm weather, and when some of the board of management requested them to do so they refused to turn out to church service. Last Sunday morning the paid lady soloist was the only one to put in an appearance. The members of the choir have no objection to the gowns in the cool weather, but draw the line at wearing them in the hot season.

Benj. Hobson Sent Up.

At yesterday's police court, Benj. Hobson was charged with supplying Tierney, a blacklister, with liquor, and pleaded guilty. He said he would not have done this unless he were drunk. Hobson was fined $2 or 30 days, and asked for 30 days to liquidate, but the fine was made payable forthwith. Another charge with having been drunk and disorderly. P. C. Brown testified that Hobson was drunk. Whilst being brought to the station, he lay down and used awful language. Hobson lives in Madoc. He was fined $5.75 on this charge. Benj. will thus inhale the ozone that surrounds the court house for a good many days to come.

Blacklister Fined.

At yesterday's police court, James Tierney, a blacklister, was charged with being under the influence of liquor. Tierney pleaded guilty and was fined $10. He was given ten days to pay up. Tierney said he would pay $5 a week for two weeks. This was granted. Tierney, in the witness box, said Benj. Hobson (not the Hobson of Spanish war fame) had supplied the liquor. Hobson was in the prisoner's dock. He gave Hobson the money. Hobson got three bottles of beer and a flask of whiskey. Hobson afterwards bought him another flask. He told Hobson he was on the prohibited list. The flasks were produced in court.

THE DOUBLE TRACK WAY

The New Club Compartment cars which the Grand Trunk will operate between Montreal and Toronto on the limited trains leaving Montreal every day at 10.30 p.m. and Toronto 10.45 p.m., were put in service Monday night, August 4th. These cars are de luxe in every respect and are arranged, with one drawing room, beautifully finished in white Maple, five compartments finished in different woods, such as English Oak, Chinese wood, Mahogany, Circassian Walnut and Mexican mahogany and a club lounging room finished in mahogany and furnished with comfortable chairs. A buffet will be operated, serving light summer beverages, cigars, etc. Illustrated current magazines bound in handsome leather covers have also been placed in these cars for the free use of patrons.

Why the Poles Infringe.

Yesterday a Times reporter, noticing that the new iron poles, being put up on George street, for hydro-electric, were, on the west side of the street, let partly into the pavement, asked the City Engineer why the poles on one side were on the roadway, whilst those on the west infringed on the pavement. The engineer told our representative it was done to make a better alignment for the new lines. "Why," he said, "If we were to follow the present line of George street, straight, our wires, running, say from the C. P. R., to Brock street, would by reaching that spot, be in the centre of the street." The building now occupied by Mr. J. D. Craig, at that corner, is fully three feet on the street line, if George street were straight. He also told us that the present somewhat stiff and phantom like poles will be relieved from their present starkness by surround outside ornamental columns to a height of some four feet.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

The Late Mrs. Cleghorn.

There passed away at the family residence, Lot 25, Con. 10, Otonabee, an old and respected resident of the Township, in the person of Mrs. John Cleghorn, in the 88th year of her age. The deceased lady suffered a paralytic stroke on Wednesday last, and it was at once seen by her many friends and neighbors, who gathered around her, that the end was near. She passed peacefully away on Tuesday last.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Jane Scott, was born in Berkshire, Scotland, and was married to the late Robert France, and settled at Fenelon Falls, where her husband conducted a milling business, and where he died. The deceased then went to Cobourg, where she married the late John Cleghorn, who passed away about ten years ago. She and her husband resided in Otonabee, where she lived for upwards of 50 years. The deceased leaves the following family: Mrs. Wm. Hatherly, Otonabee; James France, Toronto; W. and Robert Cleghorn, Otonabee, and Peter, of this city. She was also the mother of the late Mrs. John Chambers, of Otonabee.

Mrs. Cleghorn was a life long Presbyterian, being a member of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough. She was universally respected and beloved by all who knew her, and her demise is universally regretted.

The funeral will take place from the family residence to Little Lake Cemetery this (Thursday) afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY IN

Carmangay

"The Star of Alberta"

PAST The splendidly strategic site of Carmangay was discovered by a far seeing, shrewd railway engineer attracted to the district by the lure of the finest wheat in the Canadian West. He snapped up lands where the wide canyons of the Little Bow River narrows to a point. Here must all railways cross. The C. P. R. came and the shipping centre created went ahead by leaps and bounds.

PRESENT Carmangay today is a thriving incorporated town, with not less than 53 business places. Her up-to-date electric and natural water supply systems are owned and operated by the people. Carmangay boasts an eight-roomed schoolhouse, two banks and four big elevators, shipping over a million bushels in 1911 and 1½ millions in 1912. Carmangay has coal mines operating, and the entire district is underlaid with coal of finest Galt quality.

FUTURE Carmangay grows as Alberta grows. That means a wonderful future. Four new railroads are heading for Carmangay. Four new elevators are trying to cope with the tremendous wheat yields of the district. The mines are opening up splendid prospects. Carmangay is being rapidly developed into one of the greatest towns in the Canadian West. YOU can just as confidently invest in Carmangay as her own people do, who are building in brick and stone for a tremendous future. Carmangay has her own supply of finest brick clay and stone right at her doors, and will soon supply her sister cities in Alberta.

BRITISH NAVY REQUIRES SHIPS AND STILL WANTS MORE SHIPS

Admiralty Has Underestimated Naval Needs, Recent Rigid Test Shows--After Home Fleet is Settled What?

London, Aug. 7.—The general result of the first phase of the naval manoeuvres is to show the danger of raids apparently greater than the Admiralty hitherto conceded.

Therefore the general result is to prove that the Admiralty have underestimated rather than over-estimated British naval requirements.

This applies not only to large armoured ships but to destroyers and submarines. It is also reported that a squadron of the enemy managed to escape and get into the Atlantic, although the enemy had a force of about 2 to 1 against him. It is generally known that the Imperial squadron for duty in the Atlantic would fulfil the vital part of the scheme of defense.

Yesterday's debate in the House of Lords shows that after making provisions for home waters there will be only three big British ships available for the outer seas. The Malay would raise the number to four.

Austria and Italy have at the same time at least fifteen. The United States will possess thirteen Dreadnoughts; Japan nine.

To Abandon Mediterranean?

Commenting on this The Daily Telegraph says: "Are we prepared to be satisfied merely with safety in the North Sea and ignore the wholesome needs of the Empire? Are we to complacently to abandon the historical position of the Mediterranean road to Egypt, India and the Far East? Are we to deny our responsibilities in the Pacific where British shipping and trade and paramount?

"The Admiralty programme makes no adequate provision for these increasing needs."

NEW ZEALAND'S ARMY, NAVY READY TO HELP THE EMPIRE

Principle of One Control For Imperial Purposes to Submitted to Parliament as Policy--Revenue is Expanding

London, Aug. 7.—In submitting the annual financial statement to Parliament yesterday, says the Wellington, N.Z., correspondent of The London Times, Colonel Allen mentioned that the details of the scheme for naval organization are now the subject of correspondence with the Admiralty. When these have been adjusted the Government will submit to Parliament the policy which will recognize the principle of one control for Imperial purposes and give New Zealand more direct responsibility for and more definite interest in naval defence, and also better opportunity for service.

It is also proposed to provide the staff, arms and equipment necessary for an expeditionary force, but this force will not be called into being until an emergency arises

CATHOLIC ORGAN SUED FOR $25,000 LIBEL

Reproduced, It is Said, An Article by French Author.

Montreal, Aug. 7.—L'Action Sociale, the official organ of the Catholics of Quebec, is made defendant in a $25,000 libel action entered yesterday by Gonzalve Desaulniers, K.C., local advocate, to whose reciting before the St. Jean Baptiste Society Archbishop Bruchesi recently objected though the objection was afterwards withdrawn. The alleged basis of the suit is the publication of a certain article, reproducing another article written by Mr. Georges Gauthierot, a French author, wherein Mr. Desaulniers claims he is made the subject of a reference which he considers highly injurious and libelous.

Basis of Claim.

Mr. Gauthierot figured as a lecturer in the course of conferences delivered at Laval University some two years ago. After his return to France the lecturer wrote of his impressions of Canada and Canadians, these being published in a French organ known as L'Univers. The author in passing apparently took a fling at that class of French-Canadians locally known as constituting La Petite Eglise, and made particular reference to Le Pays and Godfroi Langlois, director of that paper.

Then followed this comment, to which Mr. Desaulniers takes particular objection, and on which he bases his action:

"He (Mr. Langlois) has for collaborators politicians like Gonsalve Desaulniers, K.C., who never let pass an opportunity to unveil alleged clerical scandals."

NO BLAME FOR DEATH OF TWO.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 7.—The coroner's jury which inquired into the death of James Mitchell, Pontypool, Ont., and an Italian, Oresti Battisti who were killed on the C.P.R. construction near Parham, returned a verdict of accidental death, no blame being attached to the company.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

LUMBERMEN ARE IN GREAT LUCK

Big Drives of Unusually Good Timber, Have no Trouble With Water

A large drive of logs, numbering 130,000 pieces, belonging to the McDonald Lumber Co., have been passing down the river from Lakefield during the past two days, when they reached Nassau, arrangements had to be made regarding the water supply by Superintendent McClellan. This was done to the complete satisfaction of all concerned. Gangs of men were on the dams day and night. The timber is some of the best that has reached Peterborough in several years, the logs being large and sound.

The Peterborough Lumber Co. started to run their immense drive of 150,000 pieces at Lakefield yesterday. It is estimated it will take a week at least before they reach Little Lake. These logs also are of superior quality and are from the Massassagua. It is very satisfactory to the lumberman to know that during the whole season there has been a sufficient supply of water to float their logs down the river. This is due to the conservation of the water and will result in work for many men in the city.

C. G. E. BENEFIT SOCIETY HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

At the annual meeting of the C.G.E. Mutual Benefit Association the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—R. G. Cotton.
Vice-Pres.—T. Foster.
Secretary—F. A. Shannon.
Treasurer—R. Craig.
Auditors—W. Hill, A. Fife.

Dr. J. B. Mann was again elected as physician. This is his second term.

The financial statement is very satisfactory, showing the Society to be in a flourishing condition. The receipts for the year was $4,803.45, and reserve fund of $2,078.15. Membership 1294.

GERMAN MOVIES ARE LOSING FAVOR

Berlin, Aug. 7.—From all accounts the movies have ceased to be a popular draw in Germany, and the cinematograph theatre owners throughout the country, with few exceptions join in a wail of "bad business." Indications of the slump are given by the general decline in receipts shown by the half-yearly balance sheets of the leading German film factories. Many moving picture theatres have closed their doors for the rest of the summer for lack of public support.

HOW AUSTRALIA DEALS WITH THE IMPERIAL NAVAL QUESTION

That Country Tried Building One Light Cruiser, and it is Still Unfinished

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—Australia's experience in the organization of a naval force furnished a useful object lesson to Canadians. Australia is at work, it must be remembered, upon a policy of permanent naval development, and it is being done on a scale and under conditions little understood in Canada, least of all understood by those who have ranged themselves in opposition to the Borden policy of immediate temporary aid to the Empire and who back their opposition with the general statement that "Australia is building her own navy."

In 1909 Australia agreed to set up a Fleet Unit of her own. It was to comprise a battle-cruiser, three light cruisers, six destroyers and three submarines. It was to cost, at the prices then prevailing, $3,700,000, and it would need about 2,500 officers and men. The Admiralty told the Conference that "Simply to man such a squadron, omitting auxiliary requirements and any margin for reliefs sickness, etc., the minimum numbers required would be about 2,300 officers and men.

More Men Needed.

That was in 1909; the vessels designed today for the most part are larger and require more men. The Dreadnought of 1913 will need about 1000 men, as against 780 for the battle cruisers ordered by Australia and New Zealand in 1909 and the destroyers of today need 100 men instead of 66; so that the personnel of a fleet unit of thoroughly modern ships probably would not fall very far short of 3,000.

Tried Building One.

The Australians ordered all the vessels of their fleet unit in 1909 and 1910. Most of them were built in Great Britain, but they undertook to build one of the light cruisers, the "Brisbane" in Australia. Very slow progress was made with this ship, alike in beginning her and in completing her; she has not been finished yet.

Henderson's Plan.

Later the Australians decided to obtain a comprehensive report upon the whole naval situation as it affected the Commonwealth, and their Government requested Admiral Sir Reginald Henderson, an officer with experience in administration to prepare a scheme for it. He visited the country and drew up a remarkable plan, exceeding ambitious and very carefully worked out. The Australian Government promptly accepted the plan.

Twenty-Two Years.

Sir Reginald Henderson proposed that the Australian Government should embark on a programme which would last for 22 years—that is, until 1933. During the whole of this long period every step forward was to be prearranged and taken in a prescribed order. When it was completed, Australia would have the following fleet:—

1. A fighting fleet eight battle-cruisers.

Ten light cruisers.

A torpedo fleet of 18 destroyers and 12 submarines.—i. e. three divisions of destroyers and four divisions of submarines.

A set of auxiliary vessels comprising three depot ships for the destroyer flotillas and one fleet repair ship

Or 52 ships in all. Admiral Henderson calculated that this force

TORONTO FIRE BUG ADDS MORE BLAZES TO HIS LONG LIST

Confines Attention Particularly to Sheds, Stables and Out-houses

Toronto, Aug. 7.—The fire list keeps growing, and several more are attributed to the person who has almost terrorized the Fire Department with incendiary work during the past week. This morning two calls were rung in, one of which is placed to the credit of the unknown pyromaniac.

About 8 o'clock fire broke out at 45 Vernon avenue, owned by Mr. T. Stinson and occupied by Mr. T. Barnes. The department answered at once and soon got the blaze under control, but not before the building was damaged to the extent of $350 and the contents $150. The loss on the building is covered by insurance.

Auto on Fire.

The gasoline in automobile No. 3592, owned by Mr. T. M. Borman, caught fire in front of the City Hall, about 9.15 this morning. The damage was slight amounting to only $15.

At ten o'clock last night a fire broke out in a small carpenter shop at the rear of Tamblyn's drug store at the corner of Yonge and Carleton streets. The blaze was discovered before it had made much headway, and the damage was slight.

A Suspect.

Suspicion regarding the mysterious firebug has attached itself to one man, and it is thought that his arrest may occur shortly. Dr. MacPherson, 27 Alexander street, has seen him. The doctor was standing near his residence, when a short, dark man, wearing a blue suit and a slouch hat came out of the lane.

A few moments later flames shot up from Dr. MacPherson's barn in the rear. The blaze was extinguished, only to be followed by still another blaze. The stranger had gone in the direction of Carleton and Yonge streets, and the fires in the lane had hardly been put out when the one at the corner of Carleton and Yonge streets started in the rear of a carpenter shop.

Chief Not Asked.

Fire Chief Thompson denies that he has ever been ordered to give a report on the Balmuto street fire or the Jersey avenue and Exhibition blazes, and states that it is always his custom to investigate each fire that occurs in the city. If, however, such a request is made, the Chief says he will hand in a report of each fire.

BATTERY STOLEN FROM CAR ON THE STREET

While standing on the street near the police station, a car belonging to a local citizen was relieved of its electric battery. The theft was evidently the deed of some one acquainted with the mechanism of the automobile. Only a short time ago the tires of a car were cut and punctured while standing on the Chemong road. It is to be hoped that the guilty party or parties will be apprehended and punished.

TRENT RIVER REGATTA

Interesting Event to Take Place on Wednesday Next, Aug. 20.

The annual Trent River Regatta will take place Wednesday, Aug. 20. The committee are sparing no pains to make this one of the greatest events of the season. A good program is being prepared, and one of the best bands in the country is being secured for the day. Arrangements are being made to secure the services of Bruce Ridpath, the greatest expert canoeman of Canada. Everyone should reserve the day and all be present to enjoy themselves.

TRIP IN CANADA HAS BEEN EYE-OPENER TO BRITISH PARTY

Some Had Never Crossed Dominion's Wide Expanse Before --Are Amazed

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 7.—Lord Emmott, of the touring party of British parliamentarians, on sailing from this port for Australia and New Zealand, after a hasty tour of Canada, gave the following farewell message to Canada:—

"We have had an extremely interesting journey across Canada, and to all of us, and most of all to those who, like myself, have never crossed the great Dominion before, this visit will be the landmark in our lives. We had no mission to Canada and we were merely passing through on our way to Australia in response to an invitation from the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Commonwealth. All the more do we feel grateful for kindness and cordialty of our reception in every portion of the Dominion from Montreal and Ottawa in East to Vancouver and Victoria in the West.

Find Canada Is Loyal!

"Everywhere kindness and attention has been shown us by Ministers, Lieutenant-Governors, municipal authorities, commercial magnates, in fact, by everybody with whom we came in contact. We wish to thank Mr. Ames, M.P., and Mr. Chambers, Chairman and Honorary Secretary of the Dominion branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association, for great assistance rendered us in every way.

"We were all greatly impressed by the great natural resources in Canada, magnificent waterways, immense areas of fertile land developed and undeveloped and by the marvellous scenery of the Rocky Mountains.

"Everywhere we were struck by the capable energy and buoyancy of her people and by their faith, in our opinion completely justified, in the great future in store for this country of ours.

"Last, but by no means least, we were touched by the evidence on every hand of sincere attachment to the Mother Country, of loyalty to the throne and of devotion to the Empire. If we have been fortunate enough to leave behind us an impression here half as pleasant as that we take away with us, we shall feel that our journey has not been in vain."

BASEBALL

A large crowd of spectators witnessed the game yesterday between Hamilton and the Petes, and they were treated to a good lively game. The game was a close one from start to finish, but the Petes went down to defeat by the score of 4 to 3.

Yesterday afternoon the Barbers met the Yanigans at Riverside Park in a friendly game of baseball. The game was very exciting all through and many peculiar stunts were pulled off by the Yanigans, while the Barbers played good ball. There was a great many spectators in the main stand and the usual number of rail birds occupied the fence.

The Barbers defeated the Yanigans by the score of 19 to 14.

Batteries—Barbers, Guerin and Rutherford; Yanigans, Swanston and Collins.

During the progress of the game Max Swanston tried to catch a man on second base, and turned quickly and delivered a bean ball, which connected with Umpy Primeau's new straw hat. The hat was demolished, the crown being crushed in.

Another feature of the game which must not be overlooked was the brilliant playing of Slasher Troop, both at the bat and in the field, while Collins, put up a very ragged game.

Among those who were present and helped to make the game a [illegible] success were, Bill [illegible], [illegible] boy, A. [illegible], bat [illegible] Sullivan, [illegible] Brady also assisted in [illegible] the water [illegible] [illegible]

Fills a Human Need

Some fifteen years ago Grape-Nuts was originated for the purpose of combining in a food delicious flavour, rich nourishment and easy digestion.

To-day there are thousands of families all over the world who use this food regularly — in many instances from the first year it was marketed.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

Made of wheat and barley, is perfectly baked and rich in the mineral phosphates which are essential to the building of healthy brains and strong bodies.

White bread lacks these "vital tissue salts," because the outer coat of the grain in which they are stored is thrown out by the miller to make the flour white.

And so in Grape-Nuts all the rich brain and body building nourishment of choice wheat and malted barley (including the natural phosphates stored in the outer coats of the grains) is presented in form for easy digestion and quick assimilation. And Grape-Nuts has a delicious taste.

If yoh are interested in being well, and are not acquainted with this food, send a 2c stamp for sample.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

A DOCTOR SAYS

Grape-Nuts Contains All the Elements Condensed.

There was a time when doctors depended almost entirely on the use of drugs in treating disease. That day is happily past, and our doctors of today are men of wider views—they have learned that proper food is most important in healing disease. An eastern physician says:

"Disease is often an effort of Nature to get rid of impurities in the system as the result of incorrect habits—wrong living. The cause of disease ought to and can be removed by right living and right thinking.

"Nature requires good air, sunlight, food of proper quality and quantity, plenty of pure water, exercise, cleanliness and sleep. When these conditions are met, health follows, but when they are denied or neglected, sickness and disease are sure to result.

"The important question is to decide what is the proper kind of food to supply the physical and mental necessities of man. I have had experience with the various food stuffs known to our markets, but up to the present time I have met with no other answering so fully all the requirements as does Grape-Nuts food.

"In all my own experience and observation in my practice, I have found Grape-Nuts to be not only more satisfying, but more lasting in the benefit derived from its use. It sends a man forth to his labors in a state of physical comfort, with a cheerful and buoyant spirit; and the end of the day finds him with reserve strength—he suffers less from exhaustion and depletion of powers.

"I particularly recommend Grape-Nuts food to those whose occupations involve a great deal of brain work. There could not be a food better adapted to the strengthening and conservation of the faculties and energies. It supplies a more sustained mental vigor than any other food that I know of.

"Grape-Nuts food contains all the elements that form the valuable part of natural diet in a condensed, toothsome and easily digestible form." Name given by Canadian Postum Co. Windsor, Ont.

FARMS FOR SALE

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

THE UNDERSIGNED OFFERS FOR SALE one of the best farms in the County of Peterborough, being west half of lot No. 7, and northeast quarter lot No. 6, in the second concession of the Township of Dummer, containing 120 acres, more or less. There is on the property two good dwelling houses, first class outbuildings and four never-failing wells. The soil is clay loam, and the farm is in a fine state of cultivation, with the exception of about 10 acres of bush. There is a good sized orchard and several fruits on the farm. This is a splendid opportunity for any one desiring a first class farm in a splendid locality, as it is only 2 miles from Warsaw.

For further particulars apply to

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 75c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 75c. Nugent's Sarsaprilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

MUNICIPAL FORMS ALWAYS IN STOCK

HOW AUSTRALIA DEALS WITH NAVAL QUESTION

when completed would require nearly 15,000 officers and men. It was to cost £66,000,000, or $428,000,000.

Four Subdivisions.

It was Admiral Henderson's plan that the full size of the fleet should be reached by degrees. He proposed to divide the total period of 22 years into four eras, the first of seven years, that is, from 1911 to 1918, and the others of five years each. The second era was to end in 1923, the third in 1928 and the fourth in 1933. The first era he recommended should be mainly devoted to preparation, to the building of barracks, the establishment of schools, the opening of naval stations, the improvement of harbours, etc. Once the fleet unit was obtained he suggested, the only additional ships procured should be six destroyers, three submarines and a depot ship.

As to Manning.

Thus at the end of 1918 the fleet should comprise one battle cruiser; the "Australia;" three light cruisers, the "Sydney," "Melbourne" and "Brisbane"; two divisions of destroyers, each of six ships, with one depot ship; and two divisions of submarines, each of three ships. The personnel needed would be 4384. Of this 2910 was to come from Great Britain and 1474 from Australia.

Fifteen Thousand.

During each of the three succeeding eras Sir Reginald Henderson advised the building of two or three battle-cruisers and two or three light cruisers. By 1923 the fleet was to have three battle cruisers, six light cruisers, 18 destroyers (three divisions) and 12 submarines. It would need 8244 officers and men. Of the new men procured 708 should come from England and 3152 be procured locally. By 1928 the fleet would comprise six battle cruisers, eight light cruisers, and the same number of torpedo crafts. This force would need 12,800 men. By 1933 it would have added two battle-cruisers and two light cruisers to make up its full number and would have some 15,000 of a personnel.

Result So Far.

Admiral Henderson in effect proposed to lay down the plant and find the men, and to procure the ships as rapidly as he thought men could be recruited and trained. The Australian Government, as has already been said, adopted it, and here is what has been done:—

The Australian Navy Board has been in existance for two years. It is a copy in miniature of the Board of Admirality in Great Britain and it has done a great deal of organization.

The Fleet Unit has nearly been completed; the crews have been found, partly by getting English seamen, partly by recruiting some 1,800 Australians.

The dockyard at Sydney has been taken over from the Admiralty and improved—not suffered to fall into inefficiency.

The Naval College has been started with 28 cadets.

Work is proceeding on two naval harbours, Cockburn Sound, at Fremantle in Western Australian, and Port Eastern, near Melbourne. The defences and docks of Sydney are being improved.

A chain of wireless stations has been set up half-way round the island continent; the full distance around is 12,0000.

There are several training vessels, filled with seamen recruits.

Speeding It Up.

That summarises the organization progress. Now comes something more. Just before it went out of office the Labour Government announced a proposal that the Henderson programme be speeded up. It declared in favour of building a second Dreadnought three destroyers and two submarines. If this is accepted, and if in 1917 and 1918 Australia builds only three destroyers and one submarine, she even then will complete the first era, 1911, 1918, a Dreadnought ahead.

Nearly Half Billion.

The cost of the Australian navy as proposed by Admiral Henderson and agreed to by the Commonwealth, is estimated at close on $430,000,000. The Admiral recommended—and this is important to Canada—annual expenditures, rising from fifteen to twenty-five millions. Of the total cost of the scheme only $113,000,000, or little more than one-fourth, is accounted for in the actual cost of the ships.

Marking the Swans

Watermen in gaily-striped jerseys, with feathers waving in their caps, set out from Southwark Bridge to mark the swans of all the reaches of the Thames as far as Henley, after the same manner as the watermen set out with all pomp and ceremony in the reign of Edward Iv. The first great marking began at Kew, where the six boats with the King's watermen in scarlet and those of the Vintners' and Dyers' Companies drove fifteen swans to the bank. Then began the nicking, the Royal swans being marked with two diamonds, the Dyers' Company with one nick, and the Vintners' with two.

MAHER'S ENGLISH HOME

"Danny" Maher, the jockey, has settled more or less permanently in England. A few years ago he rented a house near his friend, George Williamson, the famous ex-steeplechase jockey, and was so charmed with the district that he bought about a hundred acres of land. He now spends the greater part of the winter season there keeping himself in condition by hunting with the Earl of Harrington's hounds. Maher, whose parents come from Tipperary, did at one time think of buying a place in that county in order to settle down when he retired from riding, but gave up the idea.

Fishing for Pearls

Pearl fishing in Highland rivers seems to attract many roamers to the North who now and again come across pearls of value. The Beauly river apparently has been a happy hunting ground for these pearl fishers, judging from the fact that Sheriff-Substitute Grant, in the Inverness Sheriff Court, has just granted to Lord Lovat interdict to four Aberdonians who, it is alleged, have been in search of pearls. The interdict prevents them fishing for pearls in certain rivers.

WHAT WOMEN WOULD DO WITH THE SUFFRAGETTES

It has always been said that man's inhumanity to man is as nothing compared with woman's inhumanity to woman. This has been forcefully illustrated by the character of the answers forwarded by prominent Frenchwomen to a literary journal of Paris, which wanted to know how their own sex would handle the suffragettes.

The replies breathed fire and slaughter against the Pankhurst sisterhood. For instance, Mlle. Juliette Adam states that were she an English judge she would fearlessly apply the law to suffragettes just to show the meaning of the equality they claim.

Another woman says she would unhesitatingly punish the militants, unless it could be shown that they were not mentally responsible for their acts. The sting here is that this lady things, the suffragettes are all crazy. Gyp, the famous Frenchwoman writer, says that she [illegible] would condemn the suffragettes and if, in order to annoy her, they pretended that they were going to let themselves die from hunger, she would certainly not feed them by force. In other words she would let her sisters die if they really wanted to, but she cruelly insinutes that her militant sisters would take precious good care not to go to that extremity.

The opinions offered by these Frenchwomen suggests a way out for the English authorities. The men have signally failed in trying to solve the suffragette conundrum; they have shown their hopeless incapacity to handle the hunger strikers. Then why not put women in charge of the wheels of justice, and consign the arson squad and all the fighting followers of Mrs. Pankhurst to their tender mercies? It takes a woman to deal with a woman in love, in business, or in war. Why should the same rule not hold good in politics? If the British Government were to have the suffragettes arrested, tried, sentenced, and punished by women there would soon be an end to the present altogether unsatisfactory treatment of militant offenders, and a solution of the whole vexing problem.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatments is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

BRAVE CHARLES V.

Gave up His Tent to a Swallow and Her Brood Who Trusted Him

Great bravery and tenderness often go close together. The good man is brave and kind and considerate, the hypocrite craven and cruel. Charles V. of Germany was an able and virtuous King. He could face any danger, but had the heart of a little child. One day in camp he was told that a swallow was building her nest upon his tent. He gave orders that it should not be disturbed. So the pretty nest, with its dainty, soft lining, was finished, and soon the mother bird was sitting on her pearly white eggs. But before the young birds were hatched, the army had to break camp. The tents were all struck except the Emperor's. He said: "Let it stand. I can get another shelter, but she cannot for her brood. She trusted me for a home, I will not fail her."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. RED-HAIRED GIRLS

Quick to Marry But Poor Mates for Red-headed Men

Are red-haired girls more popular than their sisters? If not, then think of the number of red-headed spinsters you have known. You will have to scratch your head a long time before you can remember a single Titian-haired wall flower. The brilliance of women with red hair has been proven by history—Queen Elizabeth, Marie Antoinette, Cleopatra, Helen of Troy.

Prof. C. B. Davenport, who has carried on extensive research work in eugenics, says:

"A curious antipathy is that of red haired persons of opposite sex for each other. Among thousands of matings I have found only two cases where both husband and wife are red-headed and I am assured by red-haired persons that the antipathy exists. If, as it is sometimes alleged, red hair is frequently associated with a condition of nervous irritability, this is an eugenic antipathy."

Red hair is a funny thing, the authorities say. It will turn up generation after generation. It is a known fact that at times the child of two black-haired parents develops a full crop of red hair.

Scientists try to explain why hair is red. They say it is from a superabundance of iron in the blood. The color of hair is due to a pigment called melanin which is secreted in the roots of hairs. Absence of this coloring matter makes white hair. Melanin is formed by oxidization. A variety of organic compounds may undergo oxidization into melanin pigments ranging in intensity from yellow to black; the greater the oxidization the darker the the product. And iron, when oxidized, inside of the body as well as out of it, produces red. This explains the freckles which so often either mar or put an extra touch of daintiness to a red-haired woman's beauty.

Smith Township Council

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Monday, Aug. 4th, at ten o'clock. All the members were present, with Reeve Garbutt in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Messrs. Ivey and Moher addressed the Council, stating that it would be a convenience to a number of ratepayers and residents, if Downie street were opened as far as Smith street. Reeve Garbutt said that the matter would receive the consideration of the Council and that the opinion of the Township Solicitor be asked.

By-Law No. 718 was passed making provision for the levying and collecting of certain sums of money on all the rateable property in the several school sections, for the current year.

By-law No. 719 was also passed providing for the levying and collecting of the rates and assessments of the Township of Smith for the year 1913, the County rate being 3.7 mills on the dollar, the House of Refuge rate .57 mills, the Township rate, 2 mills, and the statutory grant to schools 2.3 mills on the dollar.

Moved by Mr. McKee and Mr. Northey that the clerk be instructed to write Mr. Hurley for further information regarding his plan of a subdivision known as Rosedale, being part of Lot 1, W.C.R., as per registered plan No. 17, and which he wished approved by the Council. The members of the Council are of the opinion that the plan could be greatly improved by making the street heart of Rosedale 66 ft. wide, and that the lane reserve at the western boundary be made a standard width.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McKee and Mr. Cann that the treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

J. Gordon Mann, work on road, $3.75; Henry Freeburn, work on sidewalk, $5.25; A. Fairbairn, rep. culverts and shov. snow, $6.00; Climax Good Roads Mach. Co., $20; G. OFF FOR CANADA

Typical Families Who Have Come to This Country

A London exchange gives the following typical cases of families who have gone to Canada:

Married couple with two children. The man, strong and healthy, thirty-five years old, has been a farmer in Derbyshire.

Doctor and son. Both are going out to farm and practice as well. The son is a surgeon. Explanation: "Can't stand the Insurance Act."

Married couple with ten children (Oxfordshire). The husband was a dairyman and farmer, and has a capital of $2,000. Is leaving England because he "can't make both ends meet."

Man and wife and four children (Somerset). He is a saddler. His employer is now out of the business. There is no work for him here, so he has saved up his passage money. "It's the children I am thinking of," he says, "there is no future for the next generation here."

"The best people seem to be leaving," said a representative of the Victorian Emigration Department.

Among those for whom we have booked passages are:—

Farmer settlers (capital of $500 to $2,000).

Farm workers.

Artisans.

Workers in the building and iron trades.

Domestic servants.

Cabinet makers.

"A striking feature is the number of business men who are emigrating; they say that they find competition too keen. Two middle-men in the coal business booked their passages."

BASEBALL.

McGraw, manager of the champion Giants, says:

"Connie" Mack has said that the Athletics will win the American League pennant. Mack was never one to boast, and they only smoked him out with this prediction after several American League managers had said the Athletics would not be able to rest.

Both the Giants and the Athletics have about the same margin of lead over the second clubs in the standing at present, and therefore I see no reason why I should not predict a pennant for the Giants, barring just one thing, accidents. Injured stars can destroy a big lead in a short time, and they are the fear of every manager who gets out in front a couple of months before the end of the race. It is practically impossible to guard against injuries because in playing the game, men are taking chances every day. Whenever a man hits the ground to slide into a base he may come up with a turned ankle or a broken leg.

However, I am beginning to ease up on the players now a little. I am driving them hard still, but if a slide can be avoided the Giants are warned to come in standing up. Most accidents in baseball are the results of a sudden change of mind. For instance, a base runner is coming into the home plate and decides he must slide.

"Stay up! stay up!" shouts the coacher, when he sees an infielder muff a relay.

The man has already prepared to slide, and he tries to stop himself. The result is that his ankle or leg is bent under him. It has long been one of my definite rules that no player on my club shall start a slide and not go through with it no matter how much time he seems to have to reach his destination after the slide is started. He must not change his mind. The only way a manager can protect his stars against injuries is by taking little precautions in every way possible, and, believe me, I am taking them.

The world's series this year should be something of a celebration. As a rule, I do not pay so much attention to the world's series games until they are right at hand. There are many reasons why I want to be sure to get into the series this fall. In the first place, "Connie" Mack and I have each won the same number of pennants, four apiece. Mack has taken two world's championship decisions, while I have only one to my credit. Here is my chance to tie him this year. We have each taken one series from the other. Another important reason is that an American league team has won the big series ever since 1910, and I am wager to land it in the National again. I believe I have the best team in the league to accomplish this purpose now. The Pirates brought the last world's championship to the National league in 1909.

If the Giants could go into the series tomorrow I would consider them to be a much stronger club than either of the teams which have played for the world's championship under my management in the past two years. The club has not been weakened any place because none of the veterans are aging yet. Mathewson, who is old in service, is having one of the best years of his career, and his excellent physical condition is responsible for it. Matty is a splendid example of how a man can stick in the big league by observing certain precautions. The big fellow has always saved himself.

My outfield, I believe, is stronger than last season, with Burns improving every game he plays. He will have the confidence of a veteran when the day of the big series rolls around. He was a little anxious at first this spring during the early weeks of his appearance as a regular on a big league club. He has picked up in hitting wonderfully in the last month, and he is going at something like his normal stride now.

In the box, I think the Giants are much stronger than they were either last year or in 1911. Demaree has been added, and he is a pitcher of big league calibre. He has the coolness to appear in any games. Both Mathewson and Marquard are going better right now than they were a year ago. That is the shape my club is in at present, and now the long haul is to keep it right on edge until the first big game.

Of course, a slump is liable to overtake any team, and a persistent slump might drag my club back, within reaching distance of the Phillies. Much to my surprise, it is Dooin's team which is hanging to us better than any other one in the league. Two weeks ago I thought my trouble in the future would come from the Pirates. Clarke's chances of success hung on that series which Pittsburg played in New York just before the Giants left home. If the Pirates had completed their otherwise successful eastern trip by cleaning up in those games, it would have been a tough job stopping them when they returned for a long home stand to meet the eastern clubs.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 8.—Hans Wagner, the greatest ball player of the age, laughs at the idea that Mathewson watches his feet. "Why, it's a joke," says Hans. "He may have watched my feet at the Polo Grounds the other day, but that did not stop me from hitting. I simply was in a slump that's all. I couldn't hit a balloon that day. "I've seen home runs made off 'balls' that were intended to be wasted pitches, but I have never seen a batter hit when he was in a slump."

RING.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 8. — Jimmy Clabby, of Indiana, and Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, fought a tame 12-round draw. The referee threatened to stop the bout in the seventh round if the fighters did not stop hugging. The referee went so far as to say that if they did not fight he would refund the crowd their price of admission.

New York, Aug. 8.—Gunboat Smith of California and Jim Flynn of Pueblo, Col., the two most formidable white heavyweights in the country, will meet in a 10-round bout in New York this Friday night. Despite the fact this Arthur Pelky is supposed to be sporting the white heavyweight championship, Matchmaker Billy Gibson is offering a belt for the winner of to-night's match emblematic of the white heavyweight championship.

Pelky is overlooked in the matter for the reason perhaps that he will never be taken seriously by the New York promoter. Gibson is of the opinion that either Flynn or Smith is the logical pretender to the real championship, and he is offering the belt without regard to Pelky or anyone else in the heavyweight division. This belt proposition, however, will probably nettle on the nerves of Tommy Burns, the manager of Pelky, and the chances are that Gibson will hear from them in short order.

REAR ADMIRAL DAVID BEATTY

In Rapidity of Advancement the Young Officer Has Beaten Even Lord Nelson

By the rapidity of his advancement, Rear-Admiral David Beatty has beaten the wonderful record of Lord Nelson, the greatest naval fighter the world has known. By reaching his present rank in his thirty-eighth year he became the youngest naval officer in that position in the British service, if not in the world's navies; and as commander of the First Cruiser Squadron, the youngest fleet commander afloat—a veritable "infant prodigy" of the sea. There is no denying the fact that Admiral Beatty not only has brains and undoubted ability, but he has what is perhaps more important, the gift of making great friends, and a large part of his success is undoubtedly due to this very gift of making friends in high quarters.

Firm Friendships

In fact, his professional career has been one long series of these firm friendships. First it was Lord Kitchener who admired the personal bravery and capability of the young officer in Egypt and gave him the official push that landed him in the position of commander; then it was King Edward, who first offered him a title and then, when he declined the honor, made him a rear-admiral; later it was Winston Churchill, who fell a victim to the personality of the square-jawed naval officer, and who when he went to the Admiralty lost no time in making him his naval secretary; and finally King George, who has made him his especial protege.

A Rising Hope

Beatty is looked upon as the rising hope of the British navy and a future first lord in succession to the illustrious chosen ones, like "Tug" Wilson and Lord Fisher, who have helped to keep the British Armada in the forefront of the world's fleets, in efficiency as well as in numbers. So determined are those in charge of the navy to pass the young rear-admiral through the intervening steps that, in one case, a special order-in-council was necessary to over-ride the regulations of the service which stood in his way. It was when King Edward wanted to make him a rear-admiral. So rapid had been Beatty's advancement that he had not been able to comply with the regulation which sets forth that before he can be promoted to the position of rear-admiral, a captain must serve at least six years in a time of peace.

His Career

Beatty was born in 1871. Thirteen years later he entered the navy as a midshipman. His first real opportunity to distinguish himself came in the Soudan in 1898, and he lost no time in proving his bravery. In especially trying circumstances he was quite unexpectedly called on to command the gunboat flotilla and so well did he handle his little fleet that he attracted the attention of the greatest soldier of the present day, the grim, stern Lord Kitchener. As a consequence of the latter's high praise Beatty was raised to the position of commander, awarded the Distinguished Service Order, mentioned in official despatches, given a medal and decorated with the Order of Medjidie, fourth class. Then followed a couple of years of inaction. When the Boxer rising broke out in China, young Beatty was in the thick of it. Again he was mentioned in official despatches, awarded the medal with clasps and promoted to the rank of captain for conspicuous service. Incidentally he was wounded and laid up for some time.

Churchill and Beatty

Before King Edward died, Beatty had attracted the attention of Winston Churchill, who confessed to friends that what he liked about Beatty was his strong personality and the serious way in which he took his profession. There are admirals in the British navy who have never even smelled the smoke of the actual warfare. Beatty is not one of those and Mr. Churchill himself a man of action, liked Beatty's record of actual achievement. When Mr. Churchill began his reforms which added to the fighting strength of the British navy, it was to Beatty, largely, that he went for advice. And, in order that he might have the constant counsel of the youthful rear-admiral, Churchill made him his naval secretary. Then when the work of reformation was almost completed and the hour of actual test seemed close at hand, he launched his protege on the high seas in command of a power squadron.

QUICK-WITTED BOB

There Were Two Robert Stewards, but This One Was First to Arrive.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

Robert Stewart, young, athletic, bronzed, and in outing costume, walked up the steps of the Empire Hotel with boldness and defiance. It took lasting nerve to assume a happy, independent air, in his situation. His condition was desperate.

"Just one dollar in my pocket," he soliloquized, "and this is a two dollar a day house. Well, I spent my last change sending a telegram to my brother in Chicago. If he is home he will wire a remittance promptly. I'll risk it," and the young man entered the lobby, registered in a free flowing hand and the bell boy took him up in the elevator.

It was not a very elaborate apartment, that into which Robert was shown, but it was good enough till the funds came, he told himself philosophically. Scarcely, however, had he turned on the gas and prepared for a refreshing wash, when there was a timid yet imperative tap on the door.

"Come in," sang out Robert, and, fat and consequential, yet with a marked servility in his manner, the proprietor of the hotel whom Robert had noted in the lobby entered.

"Oh, Mr. Stewart, sir," almost gasped the pompous boniface, "a dreadful mistake has been made."

"He has found out that I've got only a dollar," mused Robert darkly.

"New bellhop, sir," proceeded the landlord. "Clerk just noticed your name. This way, if you please, sir—if you please," and graciously and solicitously the speaker waved Robert to the elevator, bowed and scraped all the way down three flights, and ushered him into a magnificent apartment on the parlor floor.

"See here," blurted out the mystified Robert," this expense—"

"Ordered, paid for, Mr. Stewart, I assure you," interrupted the landlord. "Expected you, sir. A guest, Mr. Stewart, an honored guest. The best in the house is at your command, sir. Indeed, the whole city. Judge Slattery says so. I shall telephone him and he will be here at once to welcome you, sir. Ah, by the way," continued the voluble speaker, pointing to a suit case lying on the bed, "that arrived this morning. It was only strapped, and we took the liberty of airing your apparel. Ring for what you wish, sir. Delighted to fill all commands—indeed, sir."

"A Dreadful Mistake Has Been Made.

"Well!" exploded Bob, as he was familiarly known to a host of friends back at his home in the east, and he flopped into an easy chair and stared as his visitor obsequiously bowed himself out of the room.

It took quick-witted Bob only a brief thinking spell to understand that Robert Stewart was a common name.

"Two Robert Stewarts, eh?" he ruminated, "and I've arrived first. Wonder where the other Bob is at the other end of the line? Why not!"

What Bob asked himself was, if he dared to carry out the assumption thrust upon him. He had just gone through an experience where frolic and danger were daily concomitants of a rude frontier life. He had been out with a surveying crew, staking off the great Tanipah Valley. The government had encouraged an irrigation project, and land in the valley had gone up on a boom.

There was not a foot of land in the Tanipah district Bob had not gone over. In fact, struck with the future possibilities in view, he had got the owner of a ten thousand acre tract, the choicest property in the section, to give him a ninety days' option on his holdings. The engineering company had defaulted on payment. Bob had thus far arrived at the outposts of civilization, on his way to collect from the company at Denver, to find himself stranded.

"I am supposed to be the Robert Stewart who owns that suit case," he soliloquized. "All right, I'll occupy till he comes, and trust to luck to get out of the scrape."

Adventurous Bob found two suits and the accessories to a perfect outfit. Inside the dressing case he turned up a photograph. Ardent Bob thought he had never seen so lovely a face. He admired this wife, or fiancee, of the other Robert Stewart.

"Lucky fellow!" mused Bob. "Lots of money, too, I suppose. Well, he can't grudge me a good bed and some fine meals. I'll play the game to the limit."

One hour later Bob sat at a banquet table, surrounded, as his companions to make him believe, by "the leading citizens of the town." Bob had donned one of the suits at the hotel. Judge Slattery had called for him. He was whirled away in an automobile to the club. There were introductions, a feast, and, feeling comfortable over a grand meal, Bob beamed on these kind friends who feted and lauded him.

Then the judge and some others led him into a private room. And then they talked business. Bob opened his eyes wide as he learned the details of that business. He was encouraging but uncommunicative. When he got back to the hotel he winked at himself in the mirror and chuckled.

When the train from the east arrived the next morning, a well-dressed young man was conveyed to the Empire Hotel. He approached the clerk's desk with the simple words:

"Robert Stewart."

"Ah, yes, show the gentleman up, boy."

Thus it was that Robert Stewart No. 2 intruded on Robert Stewart No. 1.

The first Bob was tactful. Inside of ten minutes he had explained, and had his double in name laughing.

"You see," he said, "It's lucky I let them take me for you. As I get it, you are out here to buy up a lot of land for an eastern firm. The speculators in this town got options on five thousand acres of Tanipah at rock bottom prices, and expected to put it over on you at a five hundred per cent. advance. Besides that, the land is the poorest you could pick up. If you wish to invest, give my option a show."

Which Robert Stewart No. 2 did, which Judge Slattery found out and slunk into obscurity with his confederates. The belated Bob saved his firm fifty thousand dollars, our Bob made ten, and the original of the photograph turned out to be a sister.

Then the friends learned that somehow they were distantly related. They returned east together, and there was an introduction for Bob to charming Edith Stewart.

"I can't ask you to change your name," observed Bob one evening, after he and Edith had got pretty well acquainted, "but I can ask you to change your home. It was a lucky strike, my coming across your brother. He and I are going into business together. Won't you join the firm as a silent partner?"

Edith was shyly mute for a moment or two. Then she frankly placed her hands in Bob's glad clasp.

"It would be pretty difficult to resist the best friend my brother ever had," she said, "only as to being a silent partner—"

"Yes?" interrogated Bob eagerly.

"If you truly love me as much as you say you do, I can't promise silence in the new home you talk about, Bob, dear—I should be singing all day long."

FREE TRADE WAGES

Hours Are Cruelly Long and the Pay is Miserable

J. F. W. the regular English correspondent of the Toronto Globe, has recently had a little to say about the life of working people in free trade Britain. We quote:

"The London bakers, have scored in a dispute with the employers over the conditions—hours and wages—of work. The conditions are admittedly disgraceful; the work is done in many cases in dirty, underground bakeries, the hours are cruelly long, sometimes a hundred a week, and the pay is miserable 24s or 25s a week. The men have now got 30s a week and a fifty-four-hour week in shops, with sixty hours in factories, where the work is lighter. They are satisfied for the time being, but their next agitation will be for the abolition of night-work and for the inclusion of the baking industry in the Trade Boards act. This is an act that was passed by the present Government in 1909 as an experiment in the prevention of sweating in a few trades, where sweating was notorious."

DIABETES CURED —THE PROOF

We have proof of cases of Diabetes that have been cured by SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES when the patient had been a sufferer from the disease for fifteen (15) years. This remedy is particularly efficacious in cases in which open wounds, add to the sufferings of the patient. It has cured the most stubborn cases after all the usual remedies and diets have signally failed.

We have scores of confidential letters from grateful patients who have found relief in Sanol's Anti-Diabetes. These letters do not comes from people in distant parts, but from residents of western cities and towns. They are convincing.

—Sanol's Anti-Diabetes is no common remedy—it is different from the usual—it is a specific and scientific remedy, prepared for the relief and cure of one disease and one only.

A well-known Government official of British Columbia (whose name will be given in confidence) writes us that on June 12th he commenced the use of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, and that on June the 18th his urine was free of sugar. To prove that wonderful statement he sent us the certificates of the chemist's analysis. "The result," he says, "I regard as highly gratifying."

Mrs. O. Freese, of Milwaukee, made a trip to Kingston in the interest of her son, who is a prisoner in the Portsmouth Penitentiary serving a sentence of five years. The prisoner, who is going under an assumed name, has served three years of his term, and Mrs. Freese had considerable difficulty in locating him.

Mrs. Freese applied to the Justice Department at Ottawa for the matter of his release or parole to be taken up.

Fishermen Find Balloon

While two salmon fishermen were proceeding to look at their nets at [illegible], they observed a balloon about 6 feet in circumference floating on the sea a short distance from the shore. To it was attached a bamboo framework, with smaller balloons at each corner and clockwork mechanism on a centre bracket. It was found that the balloon belonged to the Meteorological Office, London, and, acting on instructions, the fishermen despatched it to that office.

WHERE LIVING IS CHEAP

The food served to the prisoners in the Toronto jail last year cost the city 8 4-5 cents per prisoner per day. The cost of the jail per prisoner per day for lighting, cleaning and general upkeep was 42 1-3 cents, this not including the officials' salaries.

LESSON IN POLITENESS

Because they did not arise and give their seats to ladies in a street car, two Montreal policemen were punished by being forced to serve an extra hour each day for fifteen days. Chief Campeau, Montreal, is determined to make his men gallant, and is trying this method of enforcing chivalry.

Stole Money to Wed

Charles H. Doss, aged [illegible], of Leamington, stole $90 from his former employer in order to marry Miss Grace [illegible], of Leamington. The wedding took place and the young couple went to Detroit to live. A week after the ceremony Doss was arrested for theft, found guilty and sentenced to two years in Kingston. Doss' bride who is but 19 years old, was not in court, and her parents say she will have nothing more to do with him after his release.

Didn't Love It

When a group of visitors was going through the county jail a burly negro trusty was called to open doors and perform other similar duties for the visitors.

"How do you like it here?" one of them asked.

"Like it? Lawd, if evah Ah gets out o' heah, I'll go so far from town it'll take $9 to sen' me a postal card."

Enter Students

Twenty-one professors at the University of Moscow were forced to resign by striking students. Russia must be a gladsome place for a student.

Makes us Tired

"Don't eat when you're tired," says a magazine writer. That's the kind of advice that makes us tired.

Fashion for Jade

If you are lucky enough to own any bits of real jade, or if you are the possessor of even an excellent imitation, it is time to bring it forth. It is shown in hat pins, bracelets, umbrella handles, ornaments for the chatelaine, shirtwaist sets, slipper buckles and side combs.

Railroading and Pictures

Motion pictures will be used by a Georgia railroad to teach elements of railroading to its more illiterate employes.

Travelling Stock School.

Arrangements have been concluded with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway by the Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ministe of Agriculture for Alberta, for a special live stock train to be run over the company's lines throughout the province. The train will be a travelling stock school, run upon the most practical lines and dairying and hog raising will be the special subjects dealt with by lecturers of the provincial department of agriculture.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Dredging, Little Current," will be received until 4.00 P. M., on Tuesday, August 12, 1913, for dredging required at Little Current, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 per cent) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, July 25, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—45519.

SEALED TENDERES addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Toronto Harbour Works," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, August 25, 1913, for the construction of a Sea Wall, Breakwater, Ship Channel and Retaining Walls at the City of Toronto, in the County of York, Province of Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont.; Harbour Commissioner's Office, 76 Adelaide St. West, Toronto; H. J. Lamb, Esq., District Engineer, Windsor, Ont., and J. L. Michaud, Esq., District Engineer, Post Office, Montreal, Que.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent (5 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and marked "Tender for Port Severn Section—Severn Division, Trent Canal," will be received at this office until 2.00 o'clock p.m., on Monday, August 25th, 1913.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on or after July 26th at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at the office of the District Engineer, Public Works Department, Midland, Ont., and at the office of the Postmaster, Orillia, Ont.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada, for the sum of $10,000 made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals, must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,

Insurance Act Cases

Lord Mowbray, Segrave and Stourton, of Allerton Park, near Knaresborough, Yorks, was summoned at Knaresborough Police Curt for failure to pay contributions as required under the insurance act. There were six separate cases. Evidence was given to show that the men, chiefly employed as bricklayers on Lord Mowbray's estate had not had any of their insurance cards stamped.

Mr. Sanders, who represented Lord Mowbray, said his Lordship objected to be made a tax-collector for the work people of the country. A fine of $10 in each of the six cases was imposed.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath
and Dean Hoard

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiay, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rosiay offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XV—The countess finally gets Santos into her clutches and he promises to do anything for her. She gets another letter from Werdenstein asking her to find out why Edison is interested in the Schomburg estate, he having made overtures for its purchase.

CHAPTER XVI—Edison applies personally to Werdenstein with an offer for the property, but gets no satisfaction. Astra and Edison set the date for their wedding. Werdenstein gets a letter from the countess promising to reveal Edison's secrets as soon as the property is turned over to her.

CHAPTER XVII—On the day of their wedding Astra and Edison get a letter from the countess saying she has left the country with Santos.

Napoleon saw and felt that the count was in an extremely happy state of mind, that he was no more in despair, but hopeful.

"I am very glad to see your excellency drop into our circle once more." He grasped both hands of the president of the peace committee.

"The pleasure is mine, your honor," was Napoleon's reply. "My call is not an official one, it is a private matter. That is why I dropped into your home so unceremoniously."

"You are welcome."

"I thought you would be kind enough to listen to me. You remember my last visit here, when I wanted you to sell me, or to help me purchase the Peak Suomeg in Hungary? At that time I thought the place contained the crystals of cirynith, the substance from which my aerodromones are made." Napoleon paused, and the count looked at him cautiously.

"I took some samples of the crystals when I discovered it, and analysed them. To my surprise I found that it has not the same electro magnetic qualities that the cirynith of Ciryne has." He paused again; still the count said nothing. "Now, I am sorry that I have troubled you in this matter, as I do not want the property, for my experiments have proved to me that the crystals are worthless for my purposes."

"But you are mistaken," blurted out the count. He realized in the same second that he had made a mistake, but, after all, what difference could it make? Napoleon smiled outwardly, and gave no sign of satisfaction at having brought this information from the count.

"All I can tell you is," continued he, "that the chemical quality is not the same, and I cannot make use of the deposit, and for this reason I do not wish to interest myself further in the property."

The count could not quite understand whether Napoleon meant just what he said or whether he was a more accomplished diplomat than he believed him to be.

"My main object in coming to you is another matter. I had a friend in my employment in the capacity of manager of the manufacturing of aerodromones. He is a very clever mechanical and electrical engineer, by name of Santos Duprel. He has left me very mysteriously, and in the company of the Countess Rosiay. Of course, Duprel knew all the secrets of my aerodromones, and he could easily betray them, in fact, manufacture aerodromones on his own account. I wish I could find out his whereabouts, as I have a few words to say to him. I know that the Countess Rosiay returned to Germany, and since Duprel is with her I believed that you, through your excellent secret service, would know where he is. I heard that Duprel had some connection with the Princess Rositta of Schomburg Lithow."

"The countess, or rather the princess, is at present on her Italian estate, at the Lago di Maggiore. No doubt she could give information in regard to the man. But I will, myself, order investigation at once."

His hesitating answer told Napoleon plainly that the count was still in doubt, that their preparations were not yet complete. He said:

"I am obliged to you for your kindness, and you may be sure that, should the time ever come when your excellency needs anything from me, you will find me ready to render you assistance."

This finished the formal part of the visit and they talked a short time on ordinary topics. Then Napoleon invited the count to have a ride in his aerodromone.

"That will be a treat. I have been longing for a ride in one." The count evidently accepted the invitation with genuine pleasure. These two men were antagonistic, but not enemies. Their principles were different, that was all. They ascended and at Napoleon's glance Sullivan opened the door and the count was courteously ushered to the comfortable cabin. Sullivan was at the wheel and the bird flew a few thousand feet over the town, going slowly, so that the count could appreciate the easy flight. Napoleon sat by him, explaining the mechanism in simple language.

When the count alighted on his own roof he shook Napoleon's hand warmly and said: "I wish, my dear sir, that we were governed by the same ideals, as I would like you for a friend."

"The time may come when we will have the same ideals," commented Napoleon. The Eagle flew away and vanished from sight.

Napoleon spent a few hours in the capital attending to committee affairs, and the next morning left again. His knowledge of chemistry told him that there should be some natural means of removing the highly developed magnetic quality from cirynith and thus enable one machine to gain control of the other. He decided to make a thorough search through all the volcanic regions of Western America before he settled down to experiment with chemical combinations. He stopped at Ciryne, leaving Sullivan, and visited with his mother a few minutes before he left for the South. Some irresistible power drew him toward the Garden of Eden.

He landed once more on that beautiful carpet of green.

He drank once more from the crystal lake and started on his search.

The bluish smoke from a distant volcano attracted his attention. He neared the active giant, circled over it, then went toward the southeast, where a new marvel of nature called him.

Inclosed by rugged mountains like the Garden of Eden, but a hundred times larger, stretched a green, fertile valley. From the height at which he was flying it looked like an enormous basin, with a large cone of almost perfect shape looming high in the center. It was an ideal volcano, but instead of smoke steam was pouring from its mouth, and on its sides and around the base several geysers spouted hundreds of feet into the air.

The valley evidently was inhabited, as it was highly cultivated, and towns and villages were seen. Napoleon flew toward the steaming giant and circled around it, lower and lower, until, by chance, a liquid from one of the geysers touched the Eagle's wing.

The aerodromone shuddered and the two wings came together with a shock and stuck. The machine fell down helplessly, like a crippled bird.

It had come quickly, yet Napoleon had the presence of mind to turn the tail rudder to break the fall. He did not know whether he was falling to his doom or not; still he shouted excitedly: "I have found it!"

The machine crashed into the marshy ground with terrific force. The man in it was hurled against the wall. He slid down into a motionless heap. His eyes were closed, and the right side of his head was bleeding from contact with the sharp corner of the bench.

CHAPTER XX.

Queen of the Air.

A few days after Napoleon's visit to Berlin the chancellor related to the Princess Schomburg Lithow his conversation with the president of the peace committee.

"My dear count," remarked the beautiful Rositta disagreeably, "you are getting old; you should retire from diplomatic service altogether."

The chancellor took the rebuke as a joke. Rositta had become undisciplined lately, and said what she would.

"What do you mean by that?"

"What do I mean? Can't you see Napoleon Edison's diplomacy? Don't you realize that you gave him all the information he wanted? As I said, it is time for you to retire and give your place to one who is clever enough to take care of it."

"Our opinions differ somewhat, princess. Personally, I am rather suspicious."

She laughed, and all at once turned into a different being.

"Don't take my talk seriously. I am nervous."

"This is a hint to your friend that he may leave?"

"That thought of yours is sufficiently diplomatic. Stay, Count Duprel is coming, and he will want to talk to you."

At almost the same moment Santos entered. The [illegible] man was transformed. His sturdy, [illegible] figure became thin. His whole being expressed the high tension under which he was working. His face looked as if he had brooded over his sorrows, and had become almost sullen. His eyes lit up, however, when they rested on Rositta. She still had the power to do with him what she would.

After greeting the Count von Werdenstein he told him that sixteen aerodromones were finished, tried and stored away, and five more were in the workshops. It was only a question of two or more months until they would be ready for action.

"There is one thing," said the count. "From a military standpoint, it would be advisable for us to watch Napoleon Edison's movements closer. We have the aerodromones and why wouldn't it be a good plan to send out one or two to spy on him?"

"What can he do?" was Rositta's scornful answer. "If he cannot get any cirynith? Very likely he has been searching for a new deposit, but cannot find any."

"I only hope your supposition is true, but I fear him. What do you think, Count Duprel?"

The count only shrugged his shoulders and let Rositta answer.

"We are not afraid of him, and we will go against him." And she looked at Santos encouragingly.

"We will go against him," he repeated.

"All we need, now, is the 'casus belli,'" remarked the chancellor.

"That is simple enough. Request the peace committee to allow a standing army for European nations," said Rositta.

"We will see," said the chancellor, and started to leave. He felt doubtful of his course. He had vague, unformed fears that haunted him. But nothing happened. His American spies reported that Napoleon could not be located.

Ambrosio Hale, Vice President, Delivered a Good Address.

Two weeks later he received news that there was some uneasiness felt in Washington in regard to the inexplicable absence of Napoleon Edison. These reports were repeated day after day.

What did this mean? The Count von Werdenstein was unable to think of a reason for the absence, but he was not the only one who was puzzled. There were many who would have given much to know what had become of Napoleon Edison.

His absence at first had been unnoticed, as Astra felt that he would return at any hour, and turned aside the questions. But when the third week began, and still they had no word from him, she could not bear it any longer. The gray-haired mother, who suffered even more than Astra, soothed her and said she would come to the Crystal Palace at once, to be with her.

That evening Mrs. Edison arrived, and embracing the wife of her son she whispered: "Be strong and brave, my dear girl. You know just as well as I do that he will come as soon as he can. I fear he has had an accident to his aerodromone, but my heart tells me he is in no danger. Above all, we must have trust in God!"

At Astra's request the various papers treated the matter lightly.

Rositta was one who was really baffled by the lengthened absence of Napoleon. She and Santos talked about it seriously, but the little count was as puzzled as she. This disappearance had not fitted into her plans. She wanted to gain a victory over Napoleon, not over America.

Her ambitions were great, but one of the greatest was to humble Napoleon. She had figured out a devilish plan to destroy his base of supplies, Ciryne. Even her husband shuddered when she told about it. He thought of the many days he had spent among the men there, and the pleasant companions that he had left behind.

A tremendous bomb was to be constructed; a bomb of such size that its explosion would cause a genuine earthquake. Great quantities of the highest grade explosives were to be placed in a large metal shell, which would be dropped on the island of Ciryne and blow it into space.

Ciryne was Napoleon's laboratory; there were his aerodromones kept, and if these were destroyed, he never would be able to gain the victory. The fact that Napoleon's mother and all his mechanics were to be destroyed did not influence Rositta's plans in the least.

Seven weeks went by. The situation was the same, except that the flotilla of twenty aerodromones was ready at Suomeg and its crew was practising manoeuvers day after day. They were working on one more machine, as Rositta was superstitious, believing that the number twenty-one was her lucky one.

The European monarchs had all signed a decree demanding the right of restoring a standing army, and this demand had been sent to the peace committee in Washington.

This request was couched in respectful terms, but conveyed the information that in case the same was refused the European countries would act according to their own convictions. No mention was made of the aerodromone fleet, but American secret agents had discovered the existence of the fleet and a shrewd reporter on the Hourly Stylograph managed to get the information. When [illegible] advertised the fact that it was ready to swoop down upon the American continent and conquer it, then the rival papers took it up and vivid fancies were printed; some declared that Napoleon Edison was held a prisoner, and would be compelled to join the European forces to save his life.

In the meantime the congress and the peace committee considered the European demand.

Amrosio Hale, Vice-president, delivered a great address, urging the union to isolate the American continent again.

"What need have we of European commerce and troubles? The American continent is ours, we love it and we can live on it. The Z-ray stations have been kept in order and we can easily cut ourselves off from those warring countries. We will not be the losers." So his address ran. He sat down amid tremendous applause.

However, another orator arose and propounded opposite reasons for open ports and no determination was reached.

Astra and her mother-in-law were sitting in the library at the Crystal Palace depressed and sad. The uncertainty of Napoleon's fate caused long, sleepless nights.

Thus they had lived, day after day, hopefully and fearfully.

The life of the woman who had been the mainspring of all their troubles was different. The Princess Rositta had never been happier than now. The twenty-first aerodromone was finished, and she, like a general, would drill her flying squadron personally.

Rositta had acquired great skill in handling the aerodromone, and she could execute the capturing act very easily. She was loved by the whole crew, which was composed of men from noble families.

These men admired their leader, they were hypnotized by her charms and she handled them so that they were, as one man, ready to give their lives for her.

After a successful maneuver day Rositta gave the order to her men to gather in the large hall. The hall was the schoolroom where Santos taught them the art of aviation in theory.

There were forty men in all—young, vigorous, brave and bold. When Rositta entered, followed by her husband, a cheer rang out: "Hurrah for our princess!"

She walked to the platform, and her clear voice rang through the hall:

"Gentlemen!" The silence was intense. "I have called you together to explain the situation. The American continent has voluntarily taken from us Europeans, children of a different caste, a different race, our most cherished traditions. There is not one among you who is not a nobleman. You all know the situation and Europe's eyes rest on us. Europe is awaiting our action to restore the old order of things. We have the might! Think of these words: 'We have the might!' Therefore, we have the right! The aerodromone flotilla is my own property. Think this over and consider!

Are You Droopy, Tired, Worn Out?

HERE IS GOOD ADVICE TO ALL WHO FEEL AS IF THEIR VIGOR AND LIFE ALL OOZED AWAY.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, "No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Peterborough's Population.

Peterborough now has a population of 22,500 according to the estimate of population of Canadian cities for 1913, which has been given out by Lovell & Sons, directory publishers. The information was supplied by the city clerk.

Mr. Braund Gets Permit.

Mr. R. C. Braund secured a permit to build a store at No. 500 Charlotte street, and the previous efforts of some 87 per cent. of the residents within a certain area west of Park street, have apparently been in vain.

Seven Cars in Ten Minutes.

Yesterday a citizen called at The Times office and stated that the article in The Times regarding motorists not sounding their horns when approaching street corners, was timely. He said he counted 17 cars that passed the corner of George and Hunter streets in ten minutes, only one of which used the horn.

Rural School Exhibit.

The Rural School Exhibition will be an interesting feature of the Peterborough Exhibition, next month. This exhibit is collected from the pupils of twelve rural schools in the vicinity of Peterborough. It consists of Poultry, Crops, and Flowers, raised by girls and boys, and exhibited at the Fair in competition for prizes.

Joy Rider Fined.

Only one case came before Magistrate Harry Rush at yesterday's police court. This was a charge brought against a local joyrider for passing a street car, in his automobile past a street car which was standing on a crossing. The defendant was not present but sent a letter pleading guilty. He was fined $5.

A Sad Case.

Mr. Henry, Superintendent of the Childrens Shelter yesterday visited a home in the South Ward, where a man, his wife and one child live. He found that in all his fourteen years' experience, this is one of the most lamentable cases in local history. Dirt and disorder prevailed. The father is a drunkard. For obvious reasons the names are at present omitted.

Our Contention Sustained.

An inspector of the Fire Underwriters, of Toronto, was asked what would be the outcome if the people of Peterborough did not provide proper water service for fire purposes. In cases of a general conflagration, he said that the company would get an assignment of the claims of the insured and bring action against the municipality. It means also that city property would not be insured, in the expert's opinion.

Horticultural Officers Elected.

The fourth session of the Canadian Horticultural Association convention continued yesterday morning at 9.30. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—H. B. Cowan, Peterborough.

1st Vice-Pres.—Geo. Hopton, Montreal.

2nd Vice-Pres.—T. Adams, Toronto.

Sec.-Treas.—Julius Luck, Montreal.

Executive—S. Jordan, Peterborough; J. Dunn, St. Catharines, and G. Douglas, Toronto.

Raised Mild Sensation.

A mild sensation was created yesterday morning when a young man passed up George street dressed in white from head to foot. His shoes, socks, suit, tie, shirt, hat and hatband was of exactly the same shade. There was one touch of black about his make-up—a coquettish heart-shaped beauty spot clung to his left cheek. stranger we understood, motored to Peterborough from Montreal.

Eels Are Plentiful

Eels are very plentiful just now in the river and canal between Peterborough and Lakefield. Almost every day fishermen pull out eels instead of bass, much to their disgust, as the latter fish look too much like a snake to ever become popular with the fisherman. The other day a party returned with several eels which they caught in the river near Lakefield. Many throw the fish away or return them to the water.

Mr. Henry's Annual Visit.

Mr. Henry, Superintendent of the Children's Shelter is now engaged in making his annual visiting of inspection of children who have been adopted by or hired out to people of this county. He will be about three weeks yet engaged in his tour. Mr. Henry will visit Lakefield, Warsaw, Norwood, Schoyn, Burleigh Falls and other rural districts. Reports given by the child show that they are almost universally happy and well treated.

SINGLE FARE TO HAMILTON.

In connection with the Hamilton Centennial Industrial Exhibition and Old Home Week, the Grand Trunk Railway System will sell round trip tickets at single fare, plus twenty-five cents, to Hamilton, Ont., from stations, Kingston, Renfrew and west in Canada, good going Saturday, August 9th, to Tuesday, August 12th, and at single fare from stations in Canada where the lowest one-way first class fare to Hamilton does not exceed $2.50 (minimum charge 25c.) good going Monday, August 11th, to Saturday, August 16th. All tickets will be valid for return until Wednesday, August 20th, 1913.

The Dumble Relics.

In our issue of yesterday appeared, for the first time, a report of an important find of Indian relics found by Police Magistrate Dumble at White Lake. The Times yesterday interviewed Mr. Tom Hay, curator of the local museum and an expert in such matter. Mr. Hay, who has not, as yet, seen Mr. Dumble's find, says that it may be most important. The alternate layers of ashes and earth, where the articles were found, are significant of great antiquity. He told The Times that the markings on Indian pottery, found in this part of Canada, are no indication of age or tribal significance. Indian pottery found in the Western States tells a true tale of Indian history by the decorations. The designs or tokens of bears, panthers, snakes, etc., tell archaeologists the date and source of production. As soon as the Dumble find reaches Peterborough Mr. Hay will investigate.

WEDDING BELLS.

Denison—Gardner.

Yesterday afternoon a quietly celebrated wedding was solemnized at the Priest's House, by Rev. Father McColl, when Miss Margaret Gardner became the charming bride of Mr. D. B. Denison. The ceremony was only attended by the contracting parties and their immediate friends. The bride's sister, Miss Belle Gardner of New York acted as bridesmaid whilst Mr. B. Rose, G.T.R. uptown ticket agent supported the groom. The bride was becomingly attired in a handsome tailor made travelling dress.

The happy couple left for their honeymoon on the C.P.R. express. They will stop at the Woodbine Hotel, Toronto for a few days and then take a month's tour to Duluth and intervening points, returning here via Buffalo and Rochester, N.Y.

Connelly—Hickey.

On Tuesday morning last in St. Martin's church, Ennismore, a very pretty wedding took place when Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Miss Lillian Hickey, of Ennismore, and Mr. Harry Connelly, of Peterborough.

The bridesmaid was Miss Estella Hickey, sister of the bride, while the groom was assisted by Mr. F. Moloney. At 9.30 the bridal party entered the church to the strains of melodious wedding march, played by Miss M. A. Crough, the organist. The bride wore a navy blue tailored suit and a large white Panama hat, with willow plume to match. Miss Estella Hickey wore a tan tailored suit and a small neat hat.

After the wedding the bridal party proceeded to the home of the bride, where about eighty guests assembled and partook of a sumptuous wedding breakfast. The gifts were numerous and handsome, which testified to the popularity of the young couple. The grooms gift to the bride was a black silk umbrella with gold and pearl handle. To the bridesmaid a gold locket, and to the groomsman a tie pin.

Early in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Connelly left on the 4.33 p.m. C.P.R. from where they journeyed westward as far as Brantford. On their return they will reside at 190 Rink street, Peterborough.

COL. F. S. CODY FAMOUS FLIER HAS FALLEN TO HIS DEATH

In Appearance Almost Exact Copy of "Buffalo Bill" He Attracted Attention

London, Aug. 7.—"Col." F. S. Cody, the famous Anglo-American aviator, was killed in an aeroplane accident at Aldershot to-day.

Cody was trying out a new aeroplane when he met his death. In the machine with him was a passenger named Evans. They were flying over the open country most of which is government land in the Aldershot district and had just reached Government House when their aeroplane was seen to be travelling badly and finally to fall with a crash to the ground. Some people rushed to the spot and found the dead bodies of Cody and Evans lying among the ruins of the aeroplane.

Was Well Known Figure.

Cody was one of the most interesting figures in aviation more especially in the British Isles. He was a real soldier of fortune with a very varied career behind him. He was well known to the public in England as he attracted general attention by his peculiar make-up. He wore a sombrero, a long mustache and an imperial with long hair and was almost an exact copy of "Buffalo Bill."

When he came to England a number of years ago from the United States where he had been a cowboy in the West he had a severe struggle to obtain a start in England. After living precariously for a whole year he attracted the attention of the experts in the British War Office on account of his display of natural gifts of consetruction particularly in aerial machines. He was said to be able to build anything in the way of a flying machine or balloon.

SIX TIMES A BRIDE OBTAINS A DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Cal. Aug. 7.—Nat Goodwin and De Wolf Hopper were put in the discard when Mrs. Sarah J. Tuttle, 62 years old, obtained a divorce from her sixth spouse, Jos. Tuttle on the grounds of desertion.

"Ever married before?" Judge Willis asked.

Mrs. Tuttle was in a deep study for a moment.

"Well—yes—I—er—have buried three and divorced two," she said, somewhat uncertain as to the effect her confession would have on the court

"Well," said the judge. "I'll give you your decree, but remember that number 7 is next, and that 7 is an unlucky number, so be careful."

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Monday is Peterborough's Civic Holiday. It is to be hoped that the clerk of the weather will be in good humor.

Lindsay is going to put a prompt extinguisher on joy-riders who speed their autos in the town limits.

At 11 a.m., yesterday, the city fire alarm bell rang out a call for "No. 100." Something wrong with the System.

Work is progressing fast in laying the C.P.R. tracks on their recently filled in property east of Charlotte street.

The visiting Horticulturists yesterday evening enjoyed a street car trip round the city and went by boat over the lift lock.

Arrangements are proceeding for the big Labor Day celebration held by the Trades and Labor Council on Labor Day.

At 9.50 yesterday the firemen received a call from Chamberlain street, in which vicinity a grass fire was in progress.

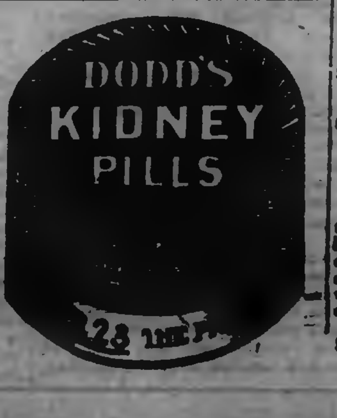
The death occurred in Norwood on Wednesday of one of the most prominent citizens of that village, when Mr. R. W. Waters passed away.

Yesterday The Times was shown some ice used in a place of public entertainment, which was so impregnated with oil that it smelled like oil and left a scum on the surface when it melted.

Lindsay must be getting Americanized. The good old Conservative Warder, in its description of the Sells Floto circus says "Next to Fourth of July and Christmas comes Circus Day."

Last night at tea time the manager of the Oriental Hotel was handed, figuratively speaking, a nice boquet. A deputation of the visiting horticulturists called him aside and complimented him on the splendid way the hotel is run.

Yesterday a local Scotsman was bragging how in "the old country the class of music provided by bands at public entertainment was of a more classical kind than given here. "None of your ragtime music there," he exclaimed. "Yes," replied his friend that kind of music does people in the old Country. They have soap and water in their veins, not good red Canadian blood."



SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Misses Evelyn and Lola Irwin, of Deseronto, are the guests of friends in the city.

ALLEGED SLAYER MAKES ESCAPE

Sault Ste Marie, Ont., Aug. 7—Joseph Larue, held by the verdict of a coroner's jury upon suspicion of having been concerned in the death of his wife on the 11th of March last, escaped from the district jail early to-day by placing a plank against a wall, and is still at large.

The body of the woman was found in the river some time after her disappearance, and the actions of Larue prompted the authorities to hold him. He was apparently unconcerned in her disappearance and it is said had remarked that he would never forget the face of his wife as he pushed her under the ice.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY IN

Carmangay

"The Star of Alberta"

PAST The splendidly strategic site of Carmangay was discovered by a far seeing, shrewd railway engineer attracted to the district by the lure of the finest wheat in the Canadian West. He snapped up lands where the wide canyons of the Little Bow River narrows to a point. Here must all railways cross. The C. P. R. came and the shipping centre created went ahead by leaps and bounds.

PRESENT Carmangay today is a thriving incorporated town, with not less than 53 business places. Her up-to-date electric and natural water supply systems are owned and operated by the people. Carmangay boasts an eight-roomed schoolhouse, two banks and four big elevators, shipping over a million bushels in 1911 and 1½ millions in 1912. Carmangay has coal mines operating, and the entire district is underlaid with coal of finest Galt quality.

FUTURE Carmangay grows as Alberta grows. That means a wonderful future. Four new railroads are heading for Carmangay. Four new elevators are trying to cope with the tremendous wheat yields of the district. The mines are opening up splendid prospects. Carmangay is being rapidly developed into one of the greatest towns in the Canadian West. YOU can just as confidently invest in Carmangay as her own people do, who are building in brick and stone for a tremendous future. Carmangay has her own supply of finest brick clay and stone right at her doors, and will soon supply her sister cities in Alberta.

CANADA WILL REMAIN ON THE HIGH AVENUE OF PROSPERITY

Trade of the Dominion is Already Over Ten Per Cent Ahead--Defeat of Reciprocity Increases Prosperity

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—Every month that has passed since the defeat of reciprocity justifies the action of the people in that respect. Never was the trade of Canada better and with every prospect this year for a bumper harvest the tide of plenty will roll on. Figures just to hand and which cannot be gainsaid by the specious arguments of the Liberal press tell the story.

TEN PER CENT. AHEAD

The total trade of Canada so far is about 10 per cent. ahead of its record of last year. During the month of June last the aggregate trade of Canada, including coin, bullion and foreign merchandise handled, was $93,800,852 as against $86,757,585 in June, 1912. The increase is $7,054,267, or 8 per cent. For the three months ending June 30 the total trade of all sorts was $258,130,854, as against $237,212,779 in the first quarter of 1912-13, the increase being $20,918,075, or 8.8 per cent.

AGGREGATE TRADE.

Deducting coin, bullion and foreign goods, the aggregate trade in imports entered for consumption in Canada and domestic goods exported was $91,576,431 for June, and $250,479,846 for the three months, as against $82,834,080 and $229,242,321 respectively in 1912. The increases are $8,737,351, or 10½ per cent., for June, and $21,237,525, or rather over 9 per cent. for the three months previous.

FARM PRODUCTS.

There was an increase of four millions in agricultural products alone. For the three months' period the principal increases are: Agriculture, $3,953,484; manufactures, $2,133,955; fisheries, $896,854; the mine, $414,662; animals and their produce, $371,533, and the forest, $263,511. The heaviest exports in the first quarter of the fiscal year have been in round numbers: Agriculture, $40,000,000; the mine, $11,700,000; manufactures, $11,500,000.

JUNE IMPORTS.

Turning to imports, the total for June, excluding coin and bullion, was $57,957,006, as against $53,587,310 in June, 1912, the increase being $4,369,696, or 8 per cent. For the three months' period the total was $166,959,570, as against $152,975,545, the increase being $13,984,625, or 9 per cent. Dutiable goods in June were $37,836,560, and free goods, $20,120,446, as against $34,134,417, and $18,852,893 respectively in 1912. For the three months' period the dutiable goods were $110,389,143 and free goods, $56,570,427, the corresponding figures in 1912 being $101,150,548 and $51,824,997 respectively.

OPPOSITION ANSWERED.

Political pessimists who argued that the defeat of the Laurier policy would be the downfall of Canada's position in the markets of the world are surely answered. The Borden policy of the development of Canada along her own national lines is having a beneficial effect.

A Radical Propesal

Before the Wisconsin Bar association a few days ago Judge Donnelly of Milwaukee, predicted that the era of the commercial lawyer is on the wane. His opinion was that lawyers should be hired on a fixed salary by the state to work impartially for justice. This course would, he asserted, do away with a great part of the burdensome court costs and remove the incentive for for the multiplication of litigation. The proposition sounds rather radical, but some very inconventional things have happened.

UNITED STATES NOT A CUSTOMER DOSEN'T WANT CANADIAN WHEAT

Is Already Heavy Exporter and Rival of Canada in Wheat Markets of the World

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—How little the American market really means to Canada from the standpoint of the wheat grower is shown in the United States crop reports for this year. These indicate that the wheat yield will again be over 700,000,000 bushels, or close to the tremendous yield of 740,000,000 bushels obtained last year. In the calendar year of 1912 the exports of wheat from the United States were 60,000,000 bushels, compared with 32,000,000 bushels in 1911. But exports for 1912 would include only a part of the exportable surplus of the 1912 crop, domestic needs having to be supplied after the harvesting, and a large part of the surplus being held over for export this year.

RIVAL NOT A CUSTOMER.

These figures mean that the United States this year will have an enormous quantity of wheat for export. This wheat must be sold in the world's market in competition with Canadian export wheat. The United States is a great rival of Canada as a wheat exporting nation. Yet the farmers of Canada were told that the market of ninety million would furnish them with a demand for their surplus wheat and would mean money in their pockets. While that statement was being made the United States was actually exporting wheat to Canada.

WINNIPEG GIRL KILLS SELF TO ESCAPE AN ENTANGLEMENT

Away From Husband Fancies Herself in Love With Another--Engaged--Fakes Telegram to Say She is Killed Investigation Shows Her Back in Arms of Husband at Parent's Home

Winnipeg, Aug. 8.—Living apart for three years from a husband who had been unkind to her, becoming engaged to another man, preparing for her wedding and then meeting her husband while making a pre-nuptial visit to her home town. Miss Mary Meade, Winnipeg, stirred up marital tangle from which she only escaped by figuratively killing herself and her brother by faked telegrams.

The husband in the case is a man named Chicory, who lived at Luxemburg, Sask. A calloused father making her life unhappy, constrained the girl to marry Chicory, but it proved only little less irksome than her step-father's ill-treatment, and the girl ran away to Winnipeg.

Met Reginald Salisbury.

For three years she worked in a departmental store and during that time met Reginald Salisbury, for whom she conceived a liking, while she thought it developed into a lasting affection.

A short time ago Salisbury, for business reasons, was compelled to take up his residence at Maple Creek, Sask., and "Miss Meade" promised to marry him and go west.

All details of the wedding were arranged, the customary "showers" and presentations being made.

Then the girl decided to "run up home."

She talked of the journey with Mrs. Salisbury, mother of her fiance, and to her confided that she had premonitions of herself and her brother being killed in a runaway.

Told of Fatal Runaway.

She went west and not many days after her departure word was received by her friends telling them of a fatal runaway smash in which Miss Meade and her brother had been killed.

The distance from the station at Radisson where Miss Meade had disembarked to the girl's home, was 25 miles, so that it was difficult to verify the details of the accident and all her friends went into mourning, the young man being almost prostrated.

It was found that Miss Meade had not left the station with her brother, but with her husband.

Then it began to leak out that Mr. and Mrs. Chicory were living with the girl's parents in a quiet and secluded manner and then the whole premeditated scheme was revealed.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Moderate to fresh southeasterly to south-westerly winds with showers in some localities.

A HIERARCHY WAR

The Orange Sentinel says that the French heirarchy of the Roman Church in Canada is constantly at war with the English heirarchy. The English-speaking branch of the church knows that Roman Catholicism is making a fearful mistake in tieing itself up to a movement to force the French language on the entire Dominion. It realizes that the settlers from Europe also object to the French language being imposed on them, and that every public-spirited Canadian will take alarm if the bi-lingual system is pushed any further. Leading English-speaking Romanists, therefore, are in a quandry, for the French element has virtual control, and is running everything with a high hand. It is full of "national," or sectional6 aspirations, and reckless about the sentiments of English Catholics. Nearly all the bishops in the western provinces are French, and so are most of the new clerical papers. Every prelate who opens his mouth to question the wisdom of the French propoganda is promptly knifed by the Quebec and Manitoba archbishops.

The situation is partly revealed by the clipping we are about to quote, which, though a few weeks old, is sufficient for our purpose? It is from the columns of the Catholic Register:

Winnipeg, June 9, 1913.

Editor, Register-Extension:

Very Rev. and Dear Sir.—Is the new French-Canadian Nationalist paper, La Liberte, going to be allowed to abuse grossly and with impunity our leading Catholic paper? Surely you have seen the article on the front page of that paper, May 29th, I think, in which the Catholic Register was reviled most unbecomingly. Does your generous cheque of $500 to Mgr. ——— help to bear out the assertions of La Liberte? . . . . SAD TO SAY, THE ONLY AIM OF SOME PEOPLE OUT HERE, AS ELSEWHERE, SEEMS TO BE THE PROPAGATION OF A FOREIGN LANGUAGE, A LUXURY THE GREAT WEST IS VERY LITTLE IN NEED OF. But if they must keep up their language, can they not do it in a somewhat Christian spirit? Heaping the dregs of its abuse on the English is not likely to further to any very great extent the "parler francais" cause.

W. W. S.

(No, we did not see the paper, and what we do not see we do not mind. WE QUITE WELL UNDERSTAND THE SPIRIT BEHIND A LOT OF THIS SORT OF PROPOGANDA. IT IS NOT A GOOD ONE, and certainly must effect adversely the cause it pretends to help. The object that gentleman had in going West to print a French daily is being carried out. THIS THING WILL GO ON TILL THE LESSON OF FRANCE IS REPEATED. THE PAPER, TOO, SAD TO SAY, IS UNDER AUTHORITY.—Editor Register-Extension.)

It will be noted that the French paper that so "grossly abuses" the Catholic Register is printed with the blessing of Archbishop Langevin; also that the editor of the Register thinks the French movement will go on until it results in the absolute overthrow of separate schools and all the special privileges enjoyed by Rome. For once we agree with the Register. There can be no question that the French fanatics who are dominating Romanism in Canada are strengthening the Orange Association, turning the best type of Roman Catholics against Romanism and hastening the day when Orange principles will triumph.

SAY MAN IS DEAD IN FIRE AT TWEED

Tweed, Ont., Aug. 8.—Fire which started at two o'clock this morning destroyed Chapelles Hotel and the barns with five horses, and also all the contents of the hotel and barns. A report, not confirmed, says one man was burned to death while sleeping in the barn. The buildings and their contents were partly insured. The cause of the fire is unknown.

ANOTHER WRECK ON NEW HAVEN LINE

Two are Killed, Five Dying, Result of Collision With a Freight.

Boughkeepsie, N.Y., Aug. 8.—Speeding forty miles an hour, a motor hand car laden with track laborers crashed into a freight train on the Central of New England Railroad, a subsidiary of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, near Pleasant Valley to-day. Two were killed outright and five were mortally injured.

ASQUITH COOL TO NON-MILITANTS

Admires Their Constitutional Methods in Welcome Contrast to "Crime."

London, Aug. 8.—Premier Asquith gave cold comfort to-day to Mrs. Millicent Fawcett, the president of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, and her non-militant colleagues, when they interviewed him in his official residence in Downing street and urged him to bring in a Government measure bestowing the franchise on women.

The Premier complimented his visitors on their constitutional methods which, he said, were "such a welcome contrast to the criminal proceedings" of the militant suffragettes. He, however, frankly declared that he had undergone no change of heart in the matter and there could be no question of the Government undertaking the desired measure during the present Parliament.

SAYS SOLDIERS WILL NOT SHOOT DOWN ULSTER MEN

North of Ireland Men Don't Think Home Rule Can Be Enforced

Dublin, August 8.—A correspondent of the London Times, who has been visiting Ireland, has this to say:

It appears to be generally assumed in the north of Ireland that, even if the government should venture so far as to place the Home Rule bill upon the statute book without confirmation of its Irish policy at a general selection it would never dare, in the last resort, to enforce the act by means of British troops.

Although British officers are naturally reticent on so delicate a subject, this opinion prevails among those who have given the matter serious thought, and who forsee the possibility line of action in the event of an Irish Parliament being established and met by organized resistance on the part of the Protestant Unionists. There can be no doubt that, should the government's policy lead to civil war, the Ulster Covenanters will number in their ranks not only a large number of retired officers, but many who will resign their commissions whenever the crisis becomes imminent.

The fact that men holding the King's commission should be compelled to contemplate such a situation, however improbable and remote, creates a situation which must even now, have its effect upon the solidarity of the army, upon its discipline and "esprit de corps." If this situation is protracted, the tension becoming more and more acute as the lines of cleavage are more sharply defined, the results, both in the army and the navy, must inevitably be deplorable.

JUDGE CUTS TERM 1 YEAR TO 10 DAYS

Paterson, N.J., Aug. 8.—Recorder Carroll decided yesterday he had been too harsh in sentencing Patrick Quin,an, Industrial Workers of the World leader, the day before to a year in jail for disorderly utterances, and cut down the punishment to ten days.

LIND NEARS MEXICAN COAST, WHOLE WORLD WATCHES CRISIS

Due to Arrive in Vera Cruz To-night and Excitement Runs High

Mexico City, Aug. 8.—With former Governor John Lind, President Wilson's special representative due to arrive in Vera Cruz to-night and in the capital a few hours later, Mexican jingoism was at boiling point to-day.

That there is opposition to the coming of Lind there is no room for doubt, but the question agitating the Americans here is how general and how serious that opposition is.

Various roomers, all of which lack confirmation, are to the effect that Lind will not be allowed to land at Vera Cruz; that he will be allowed to land, but will be ordered from the country as soon as he reaches Mexico city, and that President Huerta will refuse to recognize Lind should he attempt to see the President.

Despite the agitation there has been no anti-American demonstration, but those experienced in things Mexican, are apprehensive of what may occur if the Mexicans should really resent the coming of Lind, and get worked up to a pitch of excitement.

TO PROBE ACTIONS OF CITY OFFICIALS

Supreme Court Judge Will be Asked to Hear Facts as to S. Maddison Ewart.

Vancouver, Aug. 8.—Supreme Court judge of British Columbia will be requested to investigate charges preferred by Alderman McBeath against S. Maddison Ewart, superintendent of the City of Vancouver. Such was the decision arrived at by a special committee to-day.

The charges include drinking during business hours, insubordination, disregard of the orders of the City Council, conduct unbecoming a prominent city official, inefficient discharge of his duties, and it is probable others will be preferred.

MAY GET OIL IN CANADA FOR THE BRITISH NAVY

Viscount Selby Declares That the Possibilities of Gaspe Should be Investigated

London, Aug. 8.—Viscount Selby, chairman of the Eastern Canada Co. has the highest hopes of the oil producing possibilities of the Gaspe Bay district. Shipping facilities there, are, he said, admirable.

In view of the increasing attention being given to the adoption of oil in the Royal Navy and the decision of the Government to secure supplies as far as possible within the British Empire, there opens up the prospect of another large Canadian industry.

GRASHOPPERS STALL A RAILROAD TRAIN

Dodge City, Kan., Aug. 8.—"Train No. 564 delayed forty minutes; stalled by grasshoppers."

This was the report received at the Rock Island depot here today. The train was coming out of Ford when it struck a deep cut where "hoppers" covered the rails. As the engine wheels crushed the insects, the rails became so slippery that the drivers spun round and the train stopped.

The crew with shovels finally scooped the hoppers off the track and covered the rails with sand so the train could proceed.

BIG UNDERTAKING ESTABLISHMENT

Mr. W. Gillett of Millbrook to Open New Up to Date Premises Next 5 Story Department Store

Mr. W. Gillett, the Millbrook undertaker and furniture dealer was in the city yesterday. Mr. Gillett told The Times that he has disposed of his business in Millbrook and is now representing the Toronto Undertaking merger. He intends, he told us to open an up-to-date undertaking establishment on the Taylor Block, next to the big 5-storey department store to be erected on the corner of George and Charlotte streets. His concern will maintain an electric auto and conduct a business exclusively devoted to the undertaking business.

TORONTO OARSMEN EXPECTED TO CUT GREAT FIGURE AT NATIONAL

Boston, Aug. 8.—The Toronto oarsmen who arrived here yesterday are expected to cut a wide swath at the National Regatta, which begins this afternoon. They are a likely looking outfit, and the experts concede that they will take away a good share of the honors. There does not seem to be anybody here capable of taking the measure of Dibble and Butler in the sculling events, and the Don's pair should go well in the doubles. On their arrival here yesterday the Toronto men found it impossible to secure accommodation at the St. Alphonsus Club, where they originally intended to make their headquarters, and as a consequence were shifted to the quarters of the Duluth Club, which is nearer the starting point.

The rowing of the two star single scullers, Butler of the Argonauts and Dibble of the Dons, was watched with keenest interest by thousands of spectators who lined the river banks when the oarsmen were out last evening. Both scullers declared themselves to be in fine condition.

TAKE GANGSTER BESIDE GRAVE

Detectives Hold Off Rescuers at Revolver's Points After Arrest

New York, Aug. 8.—While John Henry Moore was scattering a handful of dirt over the grave of a friend, a gangster whom a policeman shot and killed in a street fight last Saturday, five detectives stepped from among the mourners in Calvary cemetery and arrested him on a murder indictment found against him in 1911. A dozen or more gangsters dashed forward over the grave and attempted to release Moore. The detectives drew revolvers and, holding the gangsters at bay, retreated to the line of funeral coaches, where they entered a cab, taking Moore with them, and ordered the driver to whip up his horses. The gangsters did not pursue, and Moore was locked up.

Joseph Larkin was shot and stabbed to death by the so-called Gopher gang in a Tenderloin dance hall. Moore, who is 22 years old, is accused in the indictment with being one of Larkin's assailants.

13,000 MILES TO BE MARRIED.

London, Aug. 8.—At Torpenhow Church, Cumberland, the wedding was celebrated of Adolphus Manson and Eveline Jackson, who travelled thirteen thousand miles from the North Island of New Zealand to be married in the same church where the bride's parents were married 35 years ago.

YUAN URGED TO FOUND DYNASTY

Pekin, Aug. 8.—The revolutionary forces in the south are being steadily subdued by the northern troops supporting the government of provisional President Yuan Shi-Kai. The rebel leaders disappear whenever the revolutionary centres are menaced by the government troops.

Yuan Shi-Kai's adherents express elation over the successes gained by the loyal armies and advocate the introduction of a dictatorship. It is alleged they hope for the ultimate establishment of a new Yuan dynasty under which they would share in the spoils of office. They contend that any compromise at the present time would place China in a chronic condition of revolution, which they argue would be most dangerous owing to the territorial aspirations of Russia and Japan.

FARMS FOR SALE

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

THE UNDERSIGNED OFFERS FOR SALE one of the best farms in the County of Peterborough, being west half of lot No. 7, and northeast quarter lot No. 8, in the second concession of the Township of Dummer, containing 150 acres, more or less. There is on the property two good dwelling houses, first class outbuildings and four never-failing wells. The soil is clay loam, and the farm is in a fine state of cultivation, with the exception of about 10 acres of bush. There is a good sized orchard and several fruits on the farm. This is a splendid opportunity for any one desiring a first class farm in a splendid locality, as it is only 2 miles from Warsaw.

For further particulars apply to

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 30c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 30c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

A PRE-HISTORIC RFLIC FOUND AT FORT WILLIAM

Crude Copper Hook, Which When Bent Springs Back Like Fine Steel

A crude copper hook, beaten by hand out of native copper, and possibly of pre-historic origin was unearthed at Fort William about twenty feet below the earth's surface. The hook is about seven inches long, and the loop of the hook proper is two and a half inches in diameter. Its sides are flat, beaten four square, and show the imprint of a small flat-faced hammer, and, though slender, this copper hook is so exquisitely tempered that when bent under pressure it immediately springs back into its original position like the finest steel. At the top is a tiny ring, possibly intended for the insertion of a thong or string. It is unquestionably a relic of some American aborigine, but whether it was fashioned by an Indian or by his predecessors, the Mound Builders, will have to be left to the judgment of archæological experts. In the opinion of some the instrument was used for fishing in some bygone age, but the hook is strong enough to easily bear the weight of a man. The men who found the hook assert that clam shells are found in abundance at a depth of thirty-five feet along the route of the main sewer, and this leads to the belief that the section was at one time under water. Undoubtedly some rude-garbed fisherman of the stone age was sorely grieved when the strength of a stone or a marine monster proved too much for his fish-line of thong, and decamped with the hook of copper which he had been at such great pains to fashion.

A Tiny State

The smallest state in the world is Moresnet, on the borders of Belgium and Prussia. Its area is reckoned in acres, not square miles! Its size, in fact, is fourteen hundred acres, just a good-sized farm!

Moresnet was made a separate State in 1815, after Napoleon had been finally crushed at Waterloo. The reason that the little country has remained independent is rather curious. As has been said, the tiny State is on the borders of Germany and Belgium. It possesses what was once the most important and valuable zinc-mine in the whole world. Belgium wanted that zinc, and so did Germany. As they couldn't agree on the amount of compensation to the other, Moresnet remained independent. The tiniest country in the world lies four miles away from Aix-la-Chapelle, and possesses one village. There's not room for two! The total number of inhabitants is under three thousand. Recently Germany began negotiations with Belgium to acquire her tiny neighbor, though the Moresnetians say they prefer to be under Belgium rule, if they can't be independent.

BALL PLAYERS SHOULD NOT DRINK OR SMOKE

Charles W. Murphy of Chicago expressed the opinion that in a short time all managers of big league clubs will be compelled to enforce strictly the clause in the contract prohibiting players from drinking or smoking during the baseball season. "I believe the drinking and smoking clauses can be enforced. If I find otherwise I will switch my team around until I secure the men who will do as I demand," said Mr. Murphy. "I will enforce the new rules if I lose all my stars and if it puts the team in last place." Mr. Murphy says if necessary he will hire detectives to watch suspected players.

MOA NOW EXTINCT

Great Bird of New Zealand Twelve Feet High

A gigantic extinct bird of New Zealand (the moa) possessed the most massive bones of the entire class of birds. The bones of its feet almost rivaled those of the ground sloth, or the elephant, in size. In the museum in Canterbury College, Christ Church, New Zealand, there are two specimens of the moa which measure 12 feet 8 inches in height, such remains having been found in the peat bogs of New Zealand. In the seaside sand dunes and caves were preserved the ligaments holding the bones of skeletons together, also pieces of dried skin and feathers, etc. The moa is more nearly allied in structure to emus, cassowaries, and kiwis than to the ostrich. It closely resembles the kiwis except for its short beak, and for having aftershafts after its feathers.

For a long time it was hoped that in some of the backward mountainous regions of New Zealand some living specimen of the moa might be found. But the expedition of an Australian naturalist, Herr Reischek, in 1877-8 for this object, was fruitless, so that the question of the moa's extinction was considered finally settled, and it is believed to have occurred a little over 500 years ago. The fact that is was flightless—not having a trace of rudimentary wings—no doubt contributed largely to render it an easy prey to its natural enemies, including man, and thus to lead to its early extinction.

HOW ELEPHANTS SLEEP

In One Sense Are Lightest Sleepers—Seldom Lie Down

Whether elephants ever lie down is a question which nature students are in doubt about. One authority, Gordon Cumming, made known the fact that at one time he thought he had found evidence in marks on the ground that the bulls of one herd did stretch themselves out at full length for a few hours' rest at about midnight, but, says Harper's Weekly, he contended that the young and the cows always remained on their feet.

Another authority, Selous, has expressed doubt whether even the old bulls lie down. He tells of one herd that was known to have kept moving and feeding throughout the twenty-four hours. "Except when rolling in mud and water," he says, "it is likely that an African elephant never lies down during his whole life."

However this may be, the most competent authorities seem to agree that this animal sleeps less and more lightly than any other. J. L. Kipling, the father of the writer, has estimated the period of slumber taken standing up to average about four hours in the twenty-four, and his estimate has been employed by the son in an amusing passage for one of his stories, "Moti Guj," wherein the sleep of the elephant is represented as consisting of an hour's fidgeting on one side and a similar period on the other, followed throughout the rest of the night "by long low, rumbling soliloquies."

King Boxes Carter's Ears

While King Alfonso of Spain was recently motoring with the Queen in the outskirts of Madrid he saw a drunken carter brutally ill-treating his fallen horse. The King alighted and helped the animal to rise, and then vigorously boxed the driver's ears, saying as he left, "Now you may go to the King and tell him I have assaulted you."

Kaufman's Epigrams

Mr. Herbert Kaufman, the American writer, is a master of the art of neat epigram. For example:

"Dream to the stars—fling your dares a thousand miles."

"History is the diary of barbarism—the chronicles of civilization are yet to be written."

"A rule is to be only respected until it can be rejected."

"Limits do not exist except in confidence."

"Time is constantly taming into reality our forefathers' wildest guesses."

"Failure isn't a disease of locality—it's a personal habit."

"Half of greatness is grit."

"Self-satisfaction is a rust."

"There's plenty of room for a sky-scraping career—most men are building shanty lives."

The Cold Pack

A cold pack is a fine home substitute for a Turkish bath when such treatment is indicated. It is an ideal way to get up a good, healthy reaction when the circulation is sluggish.

Wrap the patient, naked, in a sheet wrung out of cold water, then wrap patient and sheet in several blankets or in a blanket and a quilt. Swathe him like a mummy. Presently, he will be as warm as toast. After an hour or two the pack should be removed, taking care that the patient is not chilled. A good rub down and then a long sleep will finish the job.

Clerk—No, sir; it's a matter of habit. I used to work in a ladies shoe shop.

Bob: "It was the only thing I had left to lose."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The news that Buffalo Bill has gone into bankruptcy will cause the spirit of many a small boy to be cast down, but none of them will ever think how he bankrupted them.

When a young lady holding an office position secures a leave of absence to take a course in cooking it means something, and, furthermore, it is not hard to guess what it is.

A young Peterborough society man's opinion of his own importance was lessened considerably when he returned to town after a month's vacation to discover that nobody knew he was away.

ROUMANIA MEANS RUSSIA.

The Balkan allies have given to the world the most splendid example of how people who will not hang together will hang separately. No sooner did they drive the so-called villainous Turk into the sea than they immediately fell out among themselves.

It would appear from all the facts that have been shown in this trouble that while these tribes are very brave and resolute fighters they are incapable of a civil organization which represents the principle of self-government connected with a proper conception of the requirements of order.

Some people have been inclined to sentimentally sympathise with the war of the allies against the Turks may now have an idea, a dim appreciation of the task which Turkey has discharged in keeping them in a semblance of order for such a length of time.

So long as Bulgaria is fighting Servia, and fighting Greece, there is no hope of peace in Europe. Bulgaria aspired to be the Prussia, or, in other words, the leader of a great Balkan confederation. Prussia knocked the tar out of Austria to begin with, then gave France a heavy body blow at Sedan. But the difference seems to be, in this case, that Bulgaria, having done the heaviest fighting and being weakened and exhausted by this trouble, has been set upon by the rest of the allies.

It is not necessary to waste any sympathy on the Bulgarians, although it is quite possible to admire the invincible pugnacity of all those races. But surely they might know that the wheel of civilization will sooner or later go over their necks if they continue to misbehave themselves, and are unable to unite in a common government.

The intrusion of Roumania into the war is the most serious thing that has happened so far. Roumania is virtually a vassal of Russia. If there is no explicit consent on the part of Russia there is certainly a secret permission that constitutes the real and grave danger to European peace. If the Balkan states could be confined in a corral and left to fight it out to the famous finish of the Kilkenny cats, not a tear would be shed in any other part of the world. But when Roumania comes in fresh, while the others are exhausted by terrific warfare and exasperated by quarrels between themselves, it means either that Roumania has tried to supplant Bulgaria as the Prussia of the Balkans, or that Russia has played a pawn in a way that may lead to incalculable results.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it soon rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmund J. Christime, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada

THE FALL EXHIBITION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Whilst the directors of the Peterborough Fall Fair are "live wires" and doing good work, a suggestion, respectfully put may not be out of place. I would suggest that they have the three splendid bands of this city, the 57th Regiment band, the Salvation Army band and the Citizens band present. By advertising a massed band of these fine musical aggregations, the gate receipts would be largely augmented.

C. Hamilton.

THE POLICE COURT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I occasionally have reason to drop into the local police court. During the past few months, I have invariably seen, amongst the audience whose morbid taste brings there, a boy who does not work, possibly on account of mental infirmity. I think the Chief of Police might realise that a boy of this mental calibre, cannot have his mind strengthened or improved by being present in such a place.

The company has two steam whaling boats in commission and over 70 whales were captured in one season. CARE OF THE TEETH

Absolute Cleanliness Necessary to Prevent Decay and Preserve Health

Good teeth are not accidental. They are our birthright. If by reason of lack of early training we failed to preserve our birthright, for the sake of our children let's not let the coming generation have poor teeth. Let's teach them habits of cleanliness as regards their teeth. They will thank us for it later.

Teeth kept perfectly clean cannot decay. Decay is caused by bacteria which find lodgment in protected places on tooth surfaces and by breaking down the sweets and starches of food remnants produce an acid that demolishes the tooth substance.

It is regarded as impossible to avoid all decay without constant attention for the purpose of keeping all tooth surface absolutely clean, but with such care as can be given by proper brushing and rinsing the teeth and mouth three times a day and the use of silk floss once a day, it is possible that 75 per cent. of the decay in children's teeth may be avoided.

It is highly important to protect the teeth of children, for with decayed teeth food cannot be properly chewed and improperly chewed food cannot be properly digested. As a consequence proper body development is impaired, progress in studies is retarded and resistance to disease is rendered below par. Constant swallowing of the foul products of decay, combined with the lack of proper assimilation of food, produces anæmia, tonsillar disease, rheumatism and a number of ailments classed as "school diseases." If "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" it is manifestly worth while to avoid these conditions by remedying the defects of teeth which so commonly cause them.

To properly brush the teeth and accomplish the most good, select a medium stiff brush with tufted bristles and in brushing place the brush with bristles up beside the upper teeth and rotate so that the bristles will cleanse both gums and teeth. Brush the opposite way when cleansing the lower teeth. To cleanse the inner surface of the teeth use the end of the brush. Also use the brush on the tongue and palate and finally rinse the mouth thoroughly, forcing the water between the teeth.

The most important tooth in the mouth and the one most frequenly lost through decay is the first permanent molar. The "baby molars" should not be lost until the ninth year of life, but the first permanent molar, which comes in at six years of age, should not be lost at all.

DO YOU KNOW?

That if light colored or white kid gloves are rubbed gently with bread crumbs after each wearing they will keep clean a long time.

That a most effectual trap for roaches is a basin with a little molasses in it. They easily fall into the pan, but can not get out.

That old-fashioned mutton tallow, which can be perfumed with a few drops of essence of rose, is very healing for chapped hands or lips or rough skin.

That the cover of a lard-pail is very convenient to place over the burner of a gas stove when heating something in a small dish or a cup.

That when you clean spiral bed-springs it may be easily accomplished if you use a dish-mop, and keep one just for that purpose. Get the rust out of the springs first with the dry mop, then dampen the mop and go over the metal a second time.

That threads and hairs on a carpet may be swept up, if the broom is brushed lightly round and round, instead of straight along for the threads will be formed in a ball and may easily be picked off the broom.

That the window in the bathroom should always be open at top and bottom, so that a free current of fresh air may be continually coursing through the room.

BAKING POWDER

Here is a Splendid Recipe for the Home-made Article

Eight ounces of cream of tartar.
Four ounces of baking soda.
Four ounces of corn starch.

Place all in your flour sifter and sift at least 10 times.

The only failure comes from not being mixed well. Put into tight dry can and use the same as that you buy. The price is about one-third as much as when purchased at the grocery, and if made carefully and used properly you will find that it is as good as the best patented baking powder.

TURKISH SOLDIERS WITHOUT FEZES

For the first time, when war broke out between Turkey and the Balkan allies, the Turkish soldier went to war without the fez. Mahmud II., when he changed the uniform of his army, tried to introduce the shako, but the opposition of the soldiers was too strong for him. The fez is a poor covering for men on active service; for even the change of its color to khaki did not get over its feebleness as a protection against sun or bad weather.

Hence the headshawl devised some time ago to be worn twisted around the fez. The Turk's devotion to the fez is clearly explained by Duckett Ferriman: "The prejudice against the hat rests on a religious basis. If the form of prayer is rightly performed the forehead must touch the ground. The brim of a hat or the peak of a cap would prevent this."

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A TELEPATHIC CLOCK

Here is a strange yet absolutely true story, according to the Liverpool Post, in which a clock plays a mysterious part: It was a small timepiece, which stood on a mantel-piece in a sitting room in a Liverpool builder's home. At 11.30 one morning the timepiece fell from the mantel-piece to the floor. When picked up it was found to be quite uninjured and still going, as if nothing unusual had happened. There seemed to be absolutely no reason why it should have fallen, but an hour later when the builder came home to his midday meal he remarked that at 11.30 he fell from the top of a building, but happily without sustaining any injury. His wife then described how the clock had fallen at the same time and the couple ponder in vain over the curious and utterly inexplicable coincidence.

A GOLF CHAMPION

Ray an All-round Athlete But he Does Love His Pipe

Mr. Edward Ray, the new English golf champion, is known as "the big man with the pipe." He is never seen playing without a big briar pipe between his teeth, and it is said that the deprivation of his pipe would be sufficient to put him clean off his game.

Like last year's champion, Mr. Harry Vardon, the new champion, hails from Jersey. He is one of the tallest men playing the game, being six feet in height, and he combines breadth with length. Mr. Ray is now thirty-four years of age, and has been playing golf half his life. He is noted for his powerful driving and easy style. Ray is quite an all-round sportsman, and in addition to his facility at golf, is capable of giving a good account of himself at boxing, football and cricket.

How Big is a Bag?

The Department of Trade and Commerce hopes to solve the ancient conundrum, "What is a bag of potatoes?"

In Quebec there is a legal standard of 80 pounds of tubers to the bag. Elsewhere in Canada custom has fixed the weight at 90 pounds. The situation is fruitful in uncertainty to the purchaser of potatoes, and lends itself to manœuvres of various kinds and the Department is collecting information on the potato bag question from various parts of Canada with a view to standardizing the measurements.

THE SEASHORE.

The Seashore Express that leaves Bonaventure Station every night at 8.30, with electric lighted buffet Sleeping Car and the day train, leaving Montreal at 8.30 a.m., with Parlor Card and Dining Cars reach the unsurpassed districts of Long Island Sound that are environments of New London, Conn., where the attractions are—warm surf bathing, fishing, sailing, driving or tramping.

Block Island, Watch Hill and Fisher's Island are three charming spots for the summer visitor and are swept constantly by ocean breezes—the temperature rarely rising above 75 degrees. A week at any of these places will do as much good as a sea voyage.

There is splendid Hotel and Boarding House accommodation at prices to suit all pockets.

TRIBUTE TO SOBRIETY

Liquor Man From Antipodes Says Canadians Most Sober in World

"The Canadian People are the most sober in the world!"

This was the opinion expressed by Mr. W. A. Lloyd, the official lecturer of the Liquor Trades Defence Union of New South Wales, and secretary of the Liquor Trades Defence Association of Western Australia, after travelling through the Dominion while on a tour of the world to study the liquor question.

"I visited South Africa and all parts of Great Britain," said Mr. Lloyd, "with the object of making a first-hand, systematic study of the liquor laws of the Empire; I visited the Continent of Europe also, and must confess Canada appears to me to be the most truly temperate part of the Empire. I am not prepared to say that your restrictive legislation, as applied to the liquor traffic, is responsible for this eminently desirable condition of affairs, but whatever the cause, Canada is to be congratulated on the sobriety of its people. I think that those countries, such as France, which encourage the drinking of light wines and low fermentation malt liquors, have done more to solve the liquor problem than any other countries."

Uses of Water

Of the 70,000,000,000 cubic feet of water which flows into the oceans from the rivers of the United States every year but about ten per cent. has been used for irrigation, five per cent. for power and one per cent. for municipal purposes.

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL.

Chicago, June 9.—The baseball hammerfest opened in earnest here yesterday when two local newspapers printed rumors that Manager John Evers of the Cubs, Callahan of the White Sox and President T. M. Chivington of the American association are to be "canned."

Evers, according to the baseball writers, is to be succeeded shortly by Roger Bresnahan. President Comiskey is discouraged at the White Sox showing and is looking for a new leader and there is a conspiracy in the Eastern end if the Association circuit to get Chivington's job. The customary denials followed the publication of the stories.

The Senators, Naps, White Sox and Red Sox all can offer injuries as their excuse for not doing better, but Connie Mack's Athletics have had to get along without Jack Coombs.

A St. Louis rumor that Miller Huggins will resign the managership of the Cardinals is denied both by Huggins, who said he never thought of the idea, and President Britton, who says he wouldn't accept such resignation even if it were offered.

Walter Pipp has been playing a star game at first base ever since Detroit sent him to Providence, and the rumor is going around that he will be called back in a short time.

RING.

Brussels, Aug. 9.—Jack Johnson may soon be without a country to fight in. England does not want him. He cannot return to America because of the sentence for white slavery hanging over his head. France harbors him, but not enough to allow him to mix with the guests in first-class hotels. Now Belgium has put the ban on him.

Following the announcement that the champion was to give boxing exhibitions in Belgium, the minister of justice yesterday issued an order that all boxing contests in the future should be investigated. This move was made to prevent faking in matches.

The hue and cry against Johnson's exhibiting in Belgium became so great, however, that the minister of justice was forced to issue another edict. Today he put the lid down on all boxing. No further matches, whether between blacks or whites or mixed, will be allowed to be staged in the kingdom.

Toronto, Aug. 9.—The Ontario boxing championships have been awarded by the Championship Committee of the A.A.U. jointly to the British United A. C., Riverdale A. C., and the Judean A. C. The events will be staged at the Arena on Thanksgiving night and the Friday and Saturday night preceding.

Here is what F. Franklin Adams in Everybody's Almanac for July gives for the Glorious 4th:

"July 4th—Independence Day—Jack Johnson signs Emancipation Proclamation on Jeffries' jaw, 1910."

Johnson's solicitor pasted a special delivery stamp on a letter concerning a $1,500 appeal. Flanagan reports that Johnson's reply was not fit for the public prints.

ATHLETICS.

Buffalo, Aug. 4.—One of the most unique athletic meets ever attempted is planned by the Buffalo Newswriters' association, to be held at Crystal Beach on Saturday, August 23. At a meeting of the Newswriters yesterday afternoon it was agreed upon to conduct a meet to be made up of entirely of 200-yard dashes, and among the teams expected to compete are:

Police and firemen, military, business men's organization, newsboys, reporters, fraternal orders, playground boys, boy scouts, letter carriers and carmen, merchants and shopmen.

The meet will be held under the sanction of the A. A. U. and C. A. U., and all competitors must enter in either of these associations before entering the meet. There is keen interest in the races and a large entry is promised. A. H. Kirchhofer has a temporary office at 374 Ellicott Square to receive entries. Handsome prizes will be awarded.

TURF.

New York, Aug. 9. — Margaret Wright, 33 years old, was yesterday convicted in court for "making a book" on horse races. She was placed under probation with a warning from the court that a repetition of the offense would result in a penitentiary sentence. This is said to be the first instance of a woman being convicted for bookmaking in New York city.

In pleading for leniency Miss Wright who gave her occupation as that of a waitress, tearfully declared that she herself was a victim of bookmakers. Nearly all her wages, she said, has been lost in betting on the races.

YACHT.

London, Aug. 9.—King Edward's famous old racing cutter Brittania made her reappearance under racing colors after 14 years' absence at the Cowes regatta, and came in an easy winner, beating the Wendur, the Julnar and the Cariad. King George was aboard the Brittania during the race. The victory was very popular. In the evening the King and Queen gave a dinner party aboard the Victoria Albert, having as guests Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Count Mensdorff, Mme Waddington, Lady Pembroke and Lady Herbert. Lady Herbert is the guests of the Vanderbilts aboard the North Star.

A NOVEL RACE

Two Regiments of British Soldiers in Running Competition

A fine cross-country race of seven miles, in which over 1,200 men of two battalions took part from the colonels to the last-joined recruit, was run at Aldershot.

The race was a sequel to one won by the Hampshire Regiment. The Munster Fusiliers, who were then third, still thought that they were the better running battalion, and the Hampshires promptly issued a challenge, which was as promptly taken up.

With the exception of the sick, the guards, and the men on duty, both battalions turned out in running kit. The conditions stipulated that every man who reached the winning post within twelve minutes of the first man home was to count one point.

The first past the post was Private Barry, of the Munsters. At the end of the twelve minutes 297 of the Munsters had passed the post to 194 of the Hampshires, the Munsters thus winning the race by 103 points. Only about a score of men failed to complete the course.

Big Oyster Beds

In Long Island Sound, Chesapeake Bay, and many of the large open bays and sounds of the Atlantic coast, oyster farming is carried on on a vast scale under from forty to sixty feet of water. Some of these farms are over 20,000 acres in extent. Here the spat (or spawn) is brought from the natural beds and planted, matured, and harvested by steam power, the immense steamers used being capable of catching 200 bushels of oysters per hour from these grounds.

It takes an oyster about three years to grow up, and some do not reach their full growth before the fifth or sixth year. The spawning season is in May, June, July and August, during which months they are not so good to eat as at other times, hence the saying that Oysters are unwholesome in all months that have not an "r" in their names.

Colors and Gas Light

For matching colors by artificial light an Englishman claims to have invented a screen which will filter out the foreign rays of gas or electricity, making their light practically daylight.

Gas Detector

For detecting the presence of coal gas in a room in dangerous quantities simple apparatus has been invented which employs a colored liquid in a tube to indicate its increase in the atmosphere.

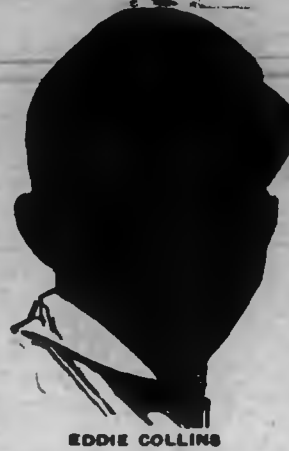
Binding Armor Plate

The objection to armor plate composed of alternate layers of hard and soft steel, which separate under hammering, has been overcome by the insertion of sheets of copper between the plates before they are rolled together to bind them.

KEEP SMILING IS BEST PLAN

Players do Themselves Much Harm by Wreaking Vengeance on the Critical Fans, Says Collins

The most disagreeable feature of the professional baseball player's life, says Eddie Collins, star second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, is the criticisms from the spectators' stands. Frequently this criticism is unjust and unwarranted, but players have to "stand the gaff." In some cities it is worse than in others. Boston to my mind, is the fairest city in the major leagues. There a visiting player receives better treatment and is given recognition for a good play, even though it works to the disadvantage of the home club.



EDDIE COLLINS

The remarks of the boisterous fan are usually of a "kidding" nature, and it depends, nine times out of ten, upon the individual against whom they are directed, how he chooses to interpret them. If a player gives sign that he has heard a remark, he is wise to pass it off with a jest rather than give vent to his feelings and show a frown. A smile beats any other action a thousand ways. "Germany" Schaefer is the best example I know. Of course, he is an exception, but he has always something funny and amusing to say to the bleacherites, and they are really for him, rather than against him.

The primary intention of the fan in shouting and hooting is to detract the player's mind from his work and "get him up in the air." Naturally any player who allows himself to be influenced by such taunts and replies is likely to bring more abuse upon himself and he is always the loser. Nine times out of ten a player cannot single out the person who has called to him, and if he does, his reply is drowned in a torrent of hoots.

"Let 'em howl" is the best way. There have been incidents where an obnoxious fan has sought a front seat and picked on one player continually. This happened on the old Columbia avenue grounds in Philadelphia, when "Rube" Waddell was pitching.

It was afterwards discovered the spectator who aroused Rube's ire and caused him to leap over the railing and beat him up, had wagered a big sum upon the contest, and as he saw the Athletics forging ahead figured the only chance he had of winning laid in Waddell's retirement.

However, his disgusting method of bringing about Rube's downfall resulted in a beating for himself and Rube was allowed to finish and win his game. A three-day suspension followed and Rube took a fishing trip.

There have been numerous similar incidents where a player subjected to abuse sought revenge upon the spot. A story is told of how "Steve" Brodie halted a game, grabbed the score board boy's ladder, climbed up in the bleachers and chased a spectator who had been annoying him.

When a ball player feels he is abused by a spectator he has only to appeal and the umpire will order an officer to evict the insulter. But you can rest assured that while baseball reigns supreme fans will have their say, and the player who can't stand being called a "bonehead" had better give up hope of becoming a fixture.

New Chinese Alphabet

The new Chinese alphabet was adopted by a special committee composed of the most learned men, including Professor Scionghello, professor of Chinese and Japanese at the school of Oriental languages in Naples. At the present time the Chinese alphabet consists of 8,000 characters whereas the new one will contain forty-two characters, twenty-three of which are vowels and nineteen consonants. Four of the vowels are taken from the Greek, four from the Russian, five from the Latin, and one from Chinese. Of the nine remaining vowels two are modified signs and several are reversed ideograms.

Fertiliser Under Seed

A seed drill invented in Australia sows fertiliser three or four inches below the grain to strengthen the roots of the latter in dry soils or seasons.

Millions of Lights

It is estimated that there are 300,000,000 incandescent lamps in use in the United States and that the demand for new lamps totals 100,000,000 a year.

Radium's Power

The breath of mice fed on bread and cheese impregnated with radium gases by an English scientist has been found to affect delicate electrical instruments.

Hailstones 14 inches in circumference were found in Hertfordshire in the year 1697.

Saved by His Muscles

Alfred Loasley, a well-known football player, accidentally shot himself in the leg with his 22-calibre rifle while hunting near Cobalt. The bullet entered the thigh, but was deflected by the remarkable development of the muscles, brought about by his football playing, and the wound did not prove a serious one.

New Use for Thorns

Very sharp thorns can be used successfully as phonograph needles. These substitutes will reproduce sound very clearly and with beautiful tone. The harsh scratching of the ordinary needle is reduced to a minimum, and the thorn is not injurious to the record.

THE COUNTRY BOY BEST FOR BASEBALL

Fresh Air and Varied Work Make for Stamina and Resourcefulness

Other things being equal—and by "other things" I mean natural ability, baseball brains and nerve—I would pick the country boy in place of the city chap for my ball team, says the famous Cy Young. In making this statement am dividing the country into two classes—cities and country—including in the latter division the villages and small towns, which in reality are nothing more than the country, for in them boys have the advantage of country life, which is plenty of work and fresh air.

I am not saying this because I am from the country and return there on the slightest provocation. Still, I believe the fact that I was born and raised on a farm is largely responsible for my success as a pitcher. I was naturally rugged, and my farm work as a boy tended to make me more so. I have seen other pitchers who seemed to have a lot more stuff than I had, fail, for the reason that they were lacking in reserve power.

They would go along splendidly for a few innings, but when the real test came they were lost sight of, and now are all but forgotten, whereas had they had the same early training I received, they might have remained in the game as long as I have. The argument that city boys think faster and are more independent is not a good one. In fact, I believe it is entirely wrong. The country boy must think as fast and as often as the boy in the city, and he is thrown upon his own resources much oftener.

All in all, give me the boy from the country—the boy who has survived the hard knocks—for a diamond star.

GOOD BALANCE COUNTS

Heavy Hitting Teams Not Always the Pennant Winners

Every ball club wants good hitters, but the best hitting teams do not always win the pennant, and many a time a light-hitting, well-balanced team will succeed in finishing ahead of their heavier-hitting opponents in the race for the bunting.

The light-hitting Chicago American club won a pennant in 1906, although it never had a man hitting over .280 and but four players hitting above the .250 mark, and one of these was George Robe, who was used the greater part of the time in utility roles.

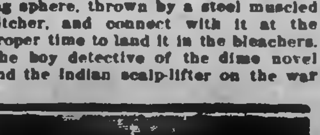
The foregoing is one of the exceptions that prove the rule, and in the majority of cases, the heavier-hitting clubs always finish well up in the race. In 1909 the two clubs which played for the world's championship, namely, Pittsburg and Detroit, led their respective leagues in team batting.

For some time the old Philadelphia National League team, with such wonderful hitters in its line-up as big Ed Delehanty, Larry Lajoie, Elmer Flick, Sam Thompson, Billy Hamilton, Jack Clements, et al., were never able to capture a pennant. In the Southern league it is the exception when the heaviest hitting teams win the gonfalon, as in most cases it is generally won by a well-balanced club that possesses few good hitters.

BATTING EYES

A good ball player, especially a good batter must have the very best of eyesight. It takes the keenest of keen vision to locate a curling, curving sphere, thrown by a steel muscled pitcher, and connect with it at the proper time to land it in the bleachers. The boy detective of the dime novel and the Indian scalp-lifter on the war path are credited with more or less ability as observers, but beside such hawk-eyed heroes of the diamond as Baker and Tris Speaker, the gentlemen of the "thriller" must give way.

SPEAKER'S eyes beat all at sighting signals.



"HOME RUN" BAKER'S BATTING EYES

Grafting an Aroma

German scientists claim to have taken bacteria from tobacco produced in one part of the world, innoculated another kind with them and imitated in the latter the flavor and aroma of the former.

Washing the Cars

A vertical cylindrical brush, as high as a railroad car, driven by an electric motor and supplied with water as it revolves, has been invented for quickly washing the exterior of railroad rolling stock.

Boring Under Water

To enable holes to be bored in under-water rocks no matter how rough the water a Hawaiian engineer has invented a drill standard with a heavily weighted bottom, power being obtained through flexible connections with a vessel.

CANOEING RULES

All canoeists are not canoe fools. The man who knows how to canoe and also knows how to swim, is by no means a fool. He can enjoy one of the most delightful of sports, and grow brown and healthy and add years to his life.

The fool is the fellow who takes out a canoe because it looks like an easy way to show off. He is doubly a fool if he does not know how to swim. And he is worse than a fool if he imposes on others his inexperience and egotism. He is a dangerous fellow, who deserves abatement.

There are two good canoeing don'ts. Don't try to paddle a canoe unless you have been thoroughly instructed and unless you are a good swimmer. Disregard of this don't leads to involuntary suicide. And don't coax a friend to place trust in your inexperience. This means homicide, and places you beyond human sympathy after you are yourself well drowned.

In brief, have a little commonsense. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HERO OF BALL STORIES

Original "Night Watchman" of Will Owen's Sketches Dead

The night watchman of Mr. W. W. Jacobs' diverting stories has passed away. Mr. Will Owen, who illustrated Mr. Jacobs' tales, found the prototype of that night watchman at Deal in the person of Robert Osborn, known to his intimates of the boating fraternity as "Bobby," and Mr. Owen's presentment of him as the teller of amusing sea yarns was lifelike.

"Bobby" Osborn was a feature of Deal sea front. It was impossible to miss seeing him, as, with his huge bulk he occupied an appreciable section of the landscape.

He sold fish for a living, and was noted for his stentorian voice, which was heard to particular advantage in his favorite cry of "Rye Bay Plaice!"

His comrades amongst the fishermen tell some tall yarns of the penetrating powers of Bobby's voice. They say it could be heard as far as the South Goodwin lightship, and that in foggy weather when they heard his call of "Rye Bay Plaice!" they knew they were somewhere within the vicinity of port.

Various artists besides Mr. Owen had selected Osborn as a model. He lived in a picturesque old cottage embowered with flowers and he was rather pleased with the attention of the artists and laughed heartily at his presentment as "The Night Watchman." At his funeral six boatmen acted as bearers.

COACHING BY FILMS

Secrets of Harvard Eights' Style Revealed by Moving Pictures

The successful stroke taught by Coach Jim Wray, of the Harvard Varsity crew may be taught to college and university crews all over by means of motion picture demonstrations. Coach Wray, however, will draw no royalties.

A coterie of operators representing one of the largest motion picture syndicates in the world photographed the Harvard Varsity eight as it sped over the Charles River course in trial spins.

The motion picture company may go into the correspondence school business of teaching college and school crews how to row successfully, for the Wray stroke used by Harvard, together with the famous Courtney stroke of Cornell and the English stroke of Cambridge and Oxford Universities, recently adopted by Yale, are acknowledged to be the three best in the world.

When the film reel is run off slowly the intricacies of the whole stroke are shown even better than Coach Wray himself can show them. The peculiar wrist movement, which is an important factor in the Wray method, is perfectly illustrated on the picture screen.

Blind Man Follows Game

"Seeing" a baseball game by sound is something that the average baseball enthusiast cannot understand, but there is in Pittsburg as enthusiastic a rooter as exists, who since 1901 has attended games, and never seen a play. He is Charles Knight, whose blindness cannot dim the charm of the game. "My acute hearing enables me to follow every detail of the play," he said, recently, in describing his method of enjoying the game. "You see, my sense of hearing is far better than that of persons who have to use their eyes, and I can hear the ball strike the players' gloves and tell exactly what part of the field the ball is in. By the yels or groans of the crowd which follow good plays, hits, errors, etc., I am able to keep track of the event, and by quietly listening to the conversation of fans about me I am kept posted on the score."

Sweden's Arable Land

Sweden is estimated to contain 4,600,000 acres of tilled soil and 1,960,000 acres of meadow land, the rest of the country being in forest or in rocky, unproductive land.

An Auto Chair

An electrically driven roller chair has appeared at resorts which boast boardwalks, a motor, controlled by the chair's occupant, replacing the usual human motive power.

Cause and Effect

According to a Paris mathematician the adoption of Greenwich time as the standard for France has increased the lighting expenses of every French household about one per cent.

Farms for Insane

Instead of imprisoning the inmates in buildings Germany is experimenting with its insane by keeping about 2,000 of them on a large farm.

DIABETES CURED
—THE PROOF

We have proof of cases of Diabetes that have been cured by SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES when the patient had been a sufferer from the disease for fifteen (15) years. This remedy is particularly efficacious in cases in which open wounds, add to the sufferings of the patient. It has cured the most stubborn cases after all the usual remedies and diets have signally failed.

We have scores of confidential letters from grateful patients who have found relief in Sanol's Anti-Diabetes. These letters do not comes from people in distant parts, but from residents of western cities and towns. They are convincing.

—Sanol's Anti-Diabetes is no common remedy—it is different from the usual—it is a specific and scientific remedy, prepared for the relief and cure of one disease and one only.

A well-known Government official of British Columbia (whose name will be given in confidence) writes us that on June 12th he commenced the use of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, and that on June the 18th his urine was free of sugar. To prove that wonderful statement he sent us the certificates of the chemist's analysis. "The result," he says, "I regard as highly gratifying."

Our Aim

It is the desire of the Peterborough Times to present to its readers a book that will be an everlasting memento of their loyal support. Webster's New Illustrated Dictionary meets every requirement and more firmly seals the bonds of friendship between its readers and their favorite Peterborough newspaper. Uverybody who receives the book is delighted with it, and our friends are enthusiastic in their praise of this great educational campaign conducted b8 The TIMES.

Exact Size, Full Leather Flexible Binding

1,200 Pages on Bible Paper

HOW TO GET IT

Present 6 Coupons such as are printed elsewhere (Daily) clipped on consecutive days, and the expense bonus set opposite the style selected, (which covers the items of the cost of packing, express from factory, checking, clerk hire, and other necessary EXPENSE items) as explained under the Dictionary Coupon printed on another page of this issue, and take your choice of these three Books.

The $4.00 WEBSTER'S New Illustrated DICTIONARY (like illustration) is bound in full limp leather, flexible, stamped in gold on back and sides, printed on good paper with red edges and corners rounded; beautiful, strong, durable. Besides the general contents as described elsewhere there are over 600 subjects, beautifully illustrated by three color plate, nearly 50 subjects by monotone, and 16 pages of valuable charts in two colors and the latest Census. Six Consecutive Dictionary Coupons and the Expense Bonus of 98c

The $3.00 WEBSTER'S New Illustrated DICTIONARY is exactly the same as the $4 book except in the style of binding, which is in half leather, with olive edges and square corners. Six Consecutive Dictionary Coupons and the Expense Bonus of 81c

The $2.00 WEBSTER'S New Illustrated DICTIONARY is in plain cloth binding, and black; stamped in gold, same paper, same illustrations, but has all colored plates and charts omitted. Six Consecutive Dictionary Coupons and the Expense Bonus of 48c

NERVOUS DEBILITY

Thousands of young and middle-aged men are annually swept to a premature grave through Early Indiscretions, Excesses and Blood Diseases. If you have any of the following symptoms consult us before it is too late. Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes, with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, dreams and losses, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks, careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, weak manhood, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, sore throat, etc.

YOU WILL BE A WRECK

Our New Method Treatment can cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified, so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers disappear, the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency vanish, the eye becomes bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars. We will cure you or no pay.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Dredging, Little Current," will be received until 4.00 P. M., on Tuesday, August 12, 1913, for dredging required at Little Current, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 per cent) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Heigoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rostay, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the Island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rostay offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Dupret, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIII—The countess gets a letter from Werdenstein offering her the princedom of Schomburg-Lithow for Edison's secret.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XV—The countess finally gets Santos into her clutches and he promises to do anything for her. She gets another letter from Werdenstein asking her to find out why Edison is interested in the Schomburg estate, he having made overtures for its purchase.

CHAPTER XVI—Edison applies personally to Werdenstein with an offer for the property, but gets no satisfaction. Astra and Edison set the date for their wedding. Werdenstein gets a letter from the countess promising to reveal Edison's secrets as soon as the property is turned over to her.

CHAPTER XVII—On the day of their wedding Astra and Edison get a letter from the countess saying she has left the country with Santos.

"Is it right that I—that we—should obey orders that come from powerless rulers? That we, the gallant aerial fleet, should consider those who are held to the ground? That we who have the might should obey anyone else except the one we choose?

"Gentlemen, we were all born to be rulers, or I would not have selected you as my aviators. Gentlemen! You must select one of us for our commander, and we will rule the world!"

"Hurrah for the queen! Hurrah for the queen of the air! Hurrah for Queen Rositta!"

How sweet that sounded to the beautiful woman! A tear glistened in her eye. She ran into their arms and kissed one after another. The last was Santos, and he was the least enthusiastic of them all.

Rositta, queen of the air!

This was her election. When the enthusiasm had somewhat abated she gave them the oath of obedience, the oath that would be kept secret until the day of its world-wide proclamation. They swore to be true, obedient and brave for the queen. And she swore to be faithful and true to her little army.

"We have only one man to fear, and that man is Napoleon Edison. You all know him. Seemingly he has met with some misfortune, as he has disappeared. When he returns we will fight him and win, and then the world is ours!"

That same day while this important thing was happening in Suemeg the American Eagle slowly descended to the roof of the Crystal Palace. It was dark and no one noticed its arrival. The tall man who alighted from the machine seemed weak, but he fastened the machine, then slowly found his way downstairs. After a gentle tap on Astra's private door he entered. Mother and wife were there.

Napoleon had returned at last.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Valley of Xiuh.

The first raptures of the reunion were over. Words took the place of mute expressions of love. Napoleon began to tell his story:

"No one knows of my return, except my men at Ciryne, and they will keep it to themselves. I did not use the 'graph, as I did not want certain people to know that I was here—the papers would get hold of it and by morning Europe would know." He smiled. "They have tried to surprise us, and now we will surprise them." His eyes rested lovingly on the two women who were his nearest and dearest.

"It is exactly eight weeks today since I left Washington to continue my search for something that I felt convinced nature had provided for a certain use; that is, to remove the electro-magnetism of cirynith. I found it, thanks be to Providence. The discovery nearly cost me my life, but I never was happier than the moment when my aerodromone was helplessly falling down. It is a wonder that I came out alive, but, aside from a few bruises, all is well.

"I was circling around an active volcano and the wing of the Eagle was touched by the warm fluid gushing up from a geyser. The wings folded together and the Eagle was helpless. I turned the tail rudder to break its fall, and thus escaped with my life."

A silent prayer went up from the two loving women, a prayer of thanks to Him who had saved him to save America.

"I lost consciousness when the aerodromone struck the ground by being hurled into the beach. When I opened my eyes it was night and I was on a low bed. An ancient oil lamp was flickering on a table at my head. I tried to sit up, but could not. My strength was gone; even my eyelids fell down, down, and I had a feeling that I was falling from a great height. I felt some one come near, and a moment later I felt a cooling bandage placed on my head by deft hands. I lost consciousness again and do not know how long I lay in a stupor, but I think it must have been at least eight days.

"The first clear moment I had I found that I was in the home of some rich Indian family. Later I found that they were Aztecs—indeed, the direct descendants of the Incas. In the clear moments during my fever I saw a very beautiful Aztec girl by my bedside nursing me. She was the daughter of the high priest, to whose house I had been taken.

"When I Opened My Eyes It Was Night and I Was on a Low Bed."

"It was five weeks before I recovered from the terrible fall.

As I regained my strength the old priest, named Xiluhama, assisted me to a porch-like structure that stood before the house, and I beheld a wonderful picture. A few hundred yards away was the smoking volcano, and several steaming geysers were spouting water in the air. At the foot of the cone-like peak stood a great church with strange statues and reliefs painted in vivid red, blue, yellow, black green and white colors. The whole reminded me of the pictures of ancient Egypt. Xiluhama's beautiful daughter came with us and brought cushions to make me a comfortable seat on the long, broad bench.

"The old priest could express his thoughts so plainly that I understood him almost as well as if we were able to converse, and when I was in doubt he took a board and made drawings in a childlike but expressive way.

"I soon realized that he considered me sent as a messenger by their god Itzcoatl. A prophecy made hundreds of years before by one of their great men told them that a deliverer would come as a bird. That reminded me of my Eagle that had, during my illness, been haunting me, as I feared it had been damaged beyond repair. In spite of all it meant to me I had not asked about it. I was led by the priest to the church, through the wide doors of which my Eagle had been carried and placed before the altar. I looked it over carefully and found that it was in good condition, except that the wings had lost their magnetism. I inspected it and found one wing coated by a pale yellow varnish—it was the wing that had been touched by the liquid from a geyser.

"It caused a perfect isolator, and if I had had the presence of mind to use my dry battery at the crucial moment I would not have had the fall; but everything turns out for the best.

"When I was able to work I succeeded in cleansing the wings, and the machine was in working order again.

"Yesterday I thought I was strong enough to leave and I bade my host goodby with the promise that I would return and bring help.

"This is a short recital of my doings during the two months past, and now, my dear Astra, will you tell me all that is new here?"

Napoleon had heard a few things from Whistler in Ciryne that disquieted him, and he was anxious to know the truth. That Astra could tell him best of all. So she began to relate all the important happenings while Napoleon listened attentively, making notes from time to time. Astra spoke of the European decree and all the facts that were officially communicated to her. Then she told of the newspaper rumors concerning the aerodromone fleet and the preparations for war that were supposed to be occupying the time of the European rulers.

"We have nine days at our disposal. I will be very busy for the next few days, but next Monday I will be ready to appear in the congress as the president of the international peace committee."

Early next morning Napoleon communicated with his brother workers in the peace committee, and then left the capital. He spent some hours at work designing a device to be used on the aerodromones. With six machines, equipped with men and barrels, he headed for the valley of Xiuh that evening.

They landed in the valley the next morning and after a peaceful negotiation with the high priest they caught a large supply of the liquid that had put the Eagle out of commission and returned to Ciryne. While Napoleon analyzed the liquid his workmen made several trips between the valley and Ciryne, carrying the liquid away in vast quantities.

Napoleon, after a thorough examination, sighed. "Here is something new. It puzzles me, but it solves the question of superiority in the air."

Napoleon's next move was to try out the new swallow-type machine. It was smaller than the Eagle, but the wings and the tail rudder were comparatively larger. It had not the grace of the Eagle in flight, but its speed was something unprecedented—it shot through the air like a streak.

Two more days passed. The third found every aerodromone equipped with a long tube very similar to the old style fire extinguisher. To this tube was connected a small automatic gun, which protruded through a special aperture in the body of the aerodromone. The lever controlling this gun was within easy reach of the aeroman, and the gun itself was so arranged that it could be pointed in any direction.

The four aerodromones that had been sent toward the west were reporting every few hours. They had seen nothing so far that was out of the ordinary.

It was Saturday evening that the last of the aerodromones was made ready for prompt action. Turning the command of the island over to Whistler, Napoleon returned to Washington. The Swallow made the trip in two hours.

This Sunday was the first real day of rest that Napoleon had enjoyed for a long time. He found perfect peace in the company of his mother and wife. Nobody knew he had returned. The surprise that swept over the members of the staff when he appeared in congress Monday morning was great.

As Napoleon arose the great hall became instantly silent. He bowed he said:

"Honorable President and Representatives, before all else I want to thank you for your kind reception." A loud "hurrah!" stopped him for a moment. Then he continued: "There have been so many changes since I went away that I can hardly express my opinion, particularly in regard to the political affairs of the present. I am very glad to see that congress realizes its duty, and that every member is prepared for action. I place my faith in its wisdom and hope that it will know its duty and do it accordingly.

"Compatriots, I greet you all!"

A sigh of satisfaction swept over the hall when Napoleon, after this short speech, sat down. An air of uncertainty prevailed; they had expected so much from him and had received nothing definite. The speaker of the house then opened the session.

CHAPTER XXII.

The answers of the international peace committee and congress of the United Republics of America were identical in wording, and were duly cabled to all the rebelling monarchs.

Neither the peace committee nor congress gave a thought to consenting to the wishes of the decree of the European rulers, and it is quite likely that the prompt refusal to accede to their demands was not unexpected, for the Count von Werdenstein rubbed his hands contentedly when he read the first dispatch. His first act was to call the Princess Schomburg Lithow on the 'graph. Her headquarters were in Suemeg.

Werdenstein's message found Rositta in the air. She connected the apparatus to the 'graph and bowed to the smiling count.

"Ah, good morning, count!"

"Good morning, princess."

"The Americans refuse our demands," said the count bluntly.

"Ah, indeed!"

"Can you come to Berlin and talk to me?"

She thought for a moment. "Is your answer ready?"

"An ultimatum? Is that what you mean?"

"An ultimatum that says distinctly that peaceful relations will be broken after a lapse of twenty-four hours and that Europe will act as she sees fit," replied Rositta with a firm click of her even teeth.

"I am going to see his majesty now and will communicate with the powers. Replies should reach me by tomorrow morning," was the count's answer.

"Then do so, my dear count, and if one of the powers should refuse it should be considered as an enemy, in league with the Americans. Tomorrow you will kindly call me up again and tell me the results. I will then arrange to meet you."

The count consented, then disconnected his instrument. He went to his majesty and had a gloomy reception. The kaiser listened to the details of the count's plans and shook his head doubtfully. In the end he consented to the ultimatum, remarking that the situation could not be much worse.

Answers consenting to the terms of the ultimatum came promptly, and authorized the count to send it out.

England, however, refused. The Island Kingdom was the only one that sent a flat refusal.

The count shrugged his shoulders indifferently. "Then we will do without England, that is all."

Calling Rositta on the 'graph, he advised her to have her men in readiness.

"Is the ultimatum on its way?" was her eager question.

"It is ready to be sent, already in cipher."

"Then send it and in an hour an aerodromone will call for you. I want you to come to Suemeg to see my fleet." Rositta shut off the current before the count could answer. His dignity was ruffled at her behavior, but since it was imperative that he see her he had to submit to her plan. When the aeroman called for him the ultimatum was on its way and he was ready to go to Suemeg.

Just before he left, however, he sat down to his desk and wrote a letter, then hurriedly folded it and, sealing it in an envelope, rang the bell for his aide de camp.

The Captain von Hochamberg entered and saluted gravely.

"I have a very important mission for you, captain. Take the first train to Hamburg and thence to England. This letter contains a sealed order for you. You must be at the German consulate in Liverpool by 8:00 a. m. tomorrow. If you receive no further orders then you are to follow the instructions that you will find in this sealed letter as quickly as possible. Otherwise return it intact. Here is an order for money and a pass. Secrecy is important!" He shook hands with the captain and dismissed him.

"That makes me feel easier." He sighed and started for the elevator that took him to the waiting aerodromone.

An hour later he was in Suemeg, greeting Rositta. The man who had made her what she was had lost his value in her eyes. He could do nothing more for her, so he could be discarded or destroyed.

"I have called your honor here, to exhibit the fleet I possess, and to show you what we have accomplished and what we can do." The latter words carried a peculiar accent to the chancellor's ears.

Wages No Object.

"Can't you get any work?" asked a woman of the tramp who had applied at the back door for food.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied. "I was offered a steady job by the man who lives down the road in that big white house."

"That's Mr. Oatseed? What was the work?"

"He wanted me to get up at four in the morning, milk 17 cows, feed, water and rub down four horses, clean the stables and then chop wood until it was time to begin the day's work."

"What did he want to pay?"

"I dunno. I didn't stop to ask."—Youth's Companion.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

SO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK OR ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Painful Accident.

Mrs. John Ferguson, who resides in North Monaghan, just outside the city boundary, had a needle and thread removed from her hand yesterday. While attempting to wash out a dress yesterday morning, and while rubbing it on the washboard, the accident happened. The entire needle imbedded itself in the lady's hand, a short piece of thread was left above the surface of the skin. The lady remembered that she had just finished sewing a button on the dress and had placed the needle in the waist part instead of placing it where it belonged. She forgot about the needle being in the dress hence the accident.

Local Man in Trouble.

Lindsay Post of last night, says: "M. J. Murphy, of Peterborough, a soldier who had a creditable record in the South African war, being a veteran of the Hartt's River, came to Lindsay circus day. He became so enamored with Lindsay's new paved roads that he hesitated before going back to his native haunts. This hesitation proved fatal. Murphy proceeded to pour forth his libations in a liberal manner and before night developed a jag that was an incandescent success. This morning Murphy faced the magistrate penniless and penitent, and with a charge of D. and D. hanging over him. The court decided to give him until 10.45 to get on his way to Peterborough.

SINGLE FARE TO HAMILTON.

In connection with the Hamilton Centennial Industrial Exhibition and Old Home Week, the Grand Trunk Railway System will sell round trip tickets at single fare, plus twenty-five cents, to Hamilton, Ont., from stations, Kingston, Renfrew and west in Canada, good going Saturday, August 9th, to Tuesday, August 12th, and at single fare from stations in Canada where the lowest one-way first class fare to Hamilton does not exceed $2.50 (minimum charge 25c.) good going Monday, August 11th, to Saturday, August 16th. All tickets will be valid for return until Wednesday, August 20th, 1913.

The Local Street Cars

Mr. Munro, the efficient manager of the local street car lines, was yesterday asked by a Times reporter, "What's new in your business?" replied, "Oh, nothing much, but I wish the city would hurry the paving of George street from the C.P.R. depot north." Asked "How will you manage whilst this work is in progress?" answered, "When the time comes, the tracks will be temporarily laid on one side of the street. Our traffic has increased so considerably that we cannot afford either for our own sake, or for the travelling public, to have any interruption."

A Sad Case in Monaghan.

Messrs. Supt. Henry of the Children's Shelter and County Constable Bullied went about three miles down in North Monaghan yesterday afternoon to investigate a case that had been reported. They found the home of a family, on arrival where sanitary conditions, to say the least were not satisfactory. The family consisted of father, mother and one child. The mother and child looked fairly clean. The father who seems to be a shiftless individual, acknowledged he had not taken a wash yesterday. The affair said the man looked as though he and soap and water had had an absolute divorce for over a month. The family was warned to get cleaned up within five days, or the man will be pinched as a vag and the child taken away.

Clad Only in Her Beauty.

The police, on Thursday night were notified by residents of East City, living near St. Luke's church, that a young woman was sleeping in the vestry. P. C. Sills went over to investigate. The sleeper, a young woman, 20 years of age, evidently heard the officer coming. She fled, clad in her black hair and adorned by her physical beauty to the dark spots near the church, leaving the outward and visible sign of woman's first thought behind her. The officer gathered up her clothes and took them to the rectory. The girl returned and clad herself in the rector's cassock and lay down to sleep. She was then captured and, after being taken to the police station, allowed to go on her promise to resume work.

A Possible Lindsay Murder

Lindsay, Aug. 9.—A brutal assault which, it is feared, will terminate fatally, was perpetrated at the circus grounds last night, and as a result a circus employee named McLaughlin is lying unconscious in the Ross Memorial Hospital with severe wounds in the head. About 9.30 o'clock Chief of Police Chilton was notified that a man was lying unconscious in the south east corner of the circus ground. Stretched unconscious on the grass was a circus employee with the blood oozing from a bad wound in the head. He was attended by another circus employee—Peter Provencal—better known as "Frenchy."

After McLaughlin had been placed in the hospital Chief Chilton immediately called out the entire force on the case. He also went to the circus grounds and arrested Provencal, who will be held as a star witness. The Chief was unable to get any clue to the perpetrator of the deed last night.

A Blacklister's Fairy Tale

Robert S. Irwin, up on remand after a week, to try and brush up his memory as to whence he, as a blacklister, got his liquor, said he was supplied by Thomas Moore. It was whiskey. He gave Moore a dollar to get the booze. His first story was that he got the whiskey, by mail, from Hastings. Moore was feeling "pretty good" that day. Moore does not belong to Peterborough. He thinks Moore is a river driver. Moore did not know his, Irwin's, name. He described Moore as a clean shaven, middle aged man of medium height. The chief said he considered yesterday's story, as told by Irwin, was as much perjury as that he told the first time. A remand for another week was asked for to try once more to get the cobwebs out of Irwin's memory. Irwin said, "You might just as well give me the three months provided by law, as I cannot tell another story.

Sam Detcher Fined.

At yesterday's police court, Samuel Detcher was charged with having been found drunk. Sam said "I was not too drunk. I was on my feet." Magistrate Rush said "You are here too often. It's a shame for you to waste your hard earned wages. We'll have to fine you $2."

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

It's not a wise trout that bites at a moss grown bait.

The lavatory accommodation at the Court House is being considerably increased.

Tax Collector Jackson of Lindsay has resigned on account of ill health. Mr. Frank McClory is a probable candidate.

Reports state that the steamers plying the waters of the upper lakes are encountering trouble from low water.

Peterborough's florists ably upheld the dignity and good name of the city in their reception and entertainment of the delegates to the convention that was concluded on Thursday.

Twelve pounds and fourteen ounces of 'lunge was landed by Mr. John F. Thornton a few days ago while fishing with Mr. Wm. Morris, near McDonald's Point in the lake.

Those who have read the works of Henryk Sienkiewicz, as translated by Mr. Jeremiah Curtin, may not have been aware that Mr. Curtin was born in Peterborough.

Possibly Joe Shearer, charged with theft yesterday afternoon, when he said "I don't know how many times I've been arrested. I never kept track."

A local merchant yesterday complained to the police, in presence of a Times reporter, concerning the crowds that gather of an evening at the south end corner of Hunter and George streets. This trouble will likely be ended.

Victoria Park is looking well despite the fact that watering is prohibited during the day time. Mr. Clee, the caretaker told The Times yesterday that he is badly handicapped as during legal hours there is no pressure as so many lawn sprinklers are in use.

SUMMER-SPOILED SKIN REMOVED BY ABSORPTION

(From Home Queen.)

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirably surface of tan, dust or grease, often freckles, too, it would seem more sensible to remove such surface than to hide it with cosmetics. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently and gradually, so there's no inconvenience and no detention indoors. Just spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store and use a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry will breed more wrinkles. Better to banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Used daily for awhile this will be found wonderfully effective.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. William Mathieson, of Havelock, was in the city yesterday.

MR. GORDON WINS A SIGNAL VICTORY

Yesterday afternoon his honor Judge Huycke held court in the County Council Chamber. Joseph Shearer was charged with stealing about $14 in cash and some cigarettes from the grocery store of David Manley, near the locks. Manley's evidence given at the preliminary hearing in the police court, has already been given. There was about $5 worth of tobacco and cigarettes stolen. He only discovered the theft next morning. The prisoner asked why witness blamed him for breaking into the store. The prisoner said his sister, Viola, had told him he was blamed for the theft. Witness had not said anything to the girl about the theft, implicating her brother. Witness identified the cigarettes and tobacco, found in Shearer's house as his. He also identified some of the stolen money found on Shearer's person.

To Mr. Gordon, for prisoner, Mr. Manley said he did not remember speaking of Shearer to Mrs. Parks, an earlier caller at his store.

Mrs. Parks said that she was at Manley's store the morning after the robbery. Nothing was said about Shearer.

Detective Newhall said the till levers had been bent. He saw the Shearer brothers hanging about and smoking cigarettes. He saw them arranging some money matters. Eddie, the younger brother got a skiff from Rye's boat house. He arrested them and found cigarettes, etc., similar to those in court, on their persons. Also a five cent piece, bent as described by Mr. Manley. He cautioned Joe twice not to talk, as what he said might be used against him. Eddie the younger boy cried and told of the theft, and where to find the cigarettes buried in their cellar and a handkerchief full of coppers in the attic. Joe had taken 20 five cent pieces to a local hotel and changed them for a dollar bill. Witness got a bunch of keys out of Shearer's pocket. One of the keys fitted the store door. The younger boy said Joe opened the store door and that Joe forced open the till. The younger boy objected to the share he got of the money.

Eddie Shearer, aged 15, said he had been at the Separate School. He knew the value of an oath. He said he went alone to Manley's store and admitted himself with a key. He said Detective Newhall told him if he would tell the truth he would let him and Joe go. He stole about $5.00 in silver and coppers. He lied to the detectives at first. Joe was in bed when he got back after the robbery. He gave Joe 20 five cent pieces to go into Nixon's Hotel and get a one dollar bill.

Detective Mosher next gave evidence. There was no truth in Eddie's statement that the detectives promised to let them go if they told the truth. Detective Newhall also denied the promise as alleged by Eddie.

Joe Shearer, in the box said he had nothing to do with the theft. He got thirty five cent pieces from his brother Eddie. Joe did not know how many times he had been arrested. He had not kept track. He quit a job at the McDonald mill because he did not like the work, and the DeLaval Co. because his arms got sunburned. Joe Shearer was acquitted and Eddie Shearer was sent to St. John's Industrial school, Toronto for a year.

HARVESTING STARTED IN MANY PARTS OF PRAIRIES

Few Days of Cloudy Weather Would Have Wonderful Effect in Filling Out Heads--Manitoba's Crops Ripen Earliest in Twenty-seven Years--All Reports Promise Well

Winnipeg, Aug. 9.—The heavy rain of Thursday was most beneficial to crops, giving wheat, in particular, a chance to finish its maturing before ripening. The weather of the past two weeks had, if anything, been hastening crops to harvesting prematurely, and the retardation which the recent rain has effected will in the end add to the yield.

The Canadian prairie west will soon be in the thick of harvesting operations, and except in a few cases wheat will be ready for the binder between August 15 and 20. A crop well above the average is assured, with numerous fields yielding twenty bushels to the acre.

Manitoba harvesting will be earlier than any years since 1886, when cutting was in full swing about the end of July, and grain, almost without exception, graded number on northern. This year, binders were hard at work at several points at the beginning of this week, while in an average season it is not commenced until about August 10th. The wheat crop looks good and will grade well. Late-sown crops are coloring in the most approved style, namely from bottom and top, leaving a broad ribbon of green in the centre. Large numbers of oat fields are dead ripe, and are being cut, but these will not yield as heavily as those fields that are maturing more slowly. Barley will be a heavy producing crop this season that which has been cut panning out strong. Late-sown barley shows an even stand and prom ses an even heavier yield than that already matured.

C. P. R'S NEW FIRE FIGHTING TANK CARS

Two Cars Being Put Into Service That Will Travel and Operate Together.

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Announcement is made by the Canadian Pacific Railway that they are putting in service two fire fighting tank cars of absolutely new design, the cars having been built to travel and operate together. The cars have been built to the C.P.R.'s designs by the American Car and Foundry Co.

Each car carries a tank of 8428 imperial gallons' capacity. On the end of one there is a 7 by 10 inch duplex fire pump, using steam from the locomotive boiler. The corresponding end of the car has a rack construction on which can carrifd 6000 feet of 2½ inch fire hose.

NO LIQUOR IS GOING INTO NOVA SCOTIA MILITIA CAMPS

Col. Sam Hughes Gives Lie to Sir Frederick Borden's Statement--Some Have Canteen

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—Col. Sam Hughes minister of militia and defence, being shown a despatch wherein Sir Frederick Borden is reported to have said at a public meeting at Canning yesterday that "The statement of the Minister of Militia that there was no drinking in the militia camp" was incorrect, and that hundreds of gallons of beer were going into the Aldershot camp, in King's county, every week, said: "Sir Frederick is on the ground in King's county, is a most compitent judge, and should know, but it is unfortunate, for Sir Frederick's statement, that there is no training camp in King's county, it does not open until Sept. 9.

"Perhaps Sir Frederick is confusing the Permanent corps, which may be in camp at Aldershot during the holidays, and, as the permanent corps have hitherto had their canteen in barracks, there has been no attempt on my part, as yet, to prevent the permanent force, when in camp alone, that is when not in training camp with non-permanent militia, from having their canteen. But when the permanent force, when in camp alone, thereof, is in a training camp with any force of the non-permanent militia then no intoxicating liquors under any consideration may be sold. This concession was applied for this year, but was promptly refused by me.

"As early as May 13, this year, Col. Williams, the adjutant-general, by my direction, wrote to Col. Rutherford at Halifax as follows:

"The minister desires me to point out that he distinctly wishes it to be understood that ninety-five per cent. of the British regulars can get along without their liquor and they are nearly as good soldiers as are the soldiers of the permanent force in Canada. The minister would therefore be pleased to know why there are so many men in our permanent service who insist upon having liquor in camp."

FUTURE OF U. C. C. TO BE DISCUSSED

Toronto, Aug. 7.—A meeting of the Upper Canada College Old Boys' Association will be held at Mr. W. G. Gooderham's office to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to discuss the proposed removal of the college from the present site to a location outside the city. While there is a general unanimity upon the advisability of vacating the present premises, opinion is divided on the best location for the school. Some of the old boys favor a proposal to move twenty or thirty miles out, while others are concerned that the school should at least be kept in York County where they believe it will be more closely associated with the city.

HOURS IN ANGUS SHOPS INCREASED AGAIN

Montreal, Aug. 9.—There is joy in the camp of the workmen at the C.P.R. Angus shops here again. Ever since the announcement was made a week ago that their hours of labor would be cut from 54 to 40, there has been a gloom over the shops. This regulation meant a loss of $4 to each man every week, or a saving to the company of about $8,000 each week. The new hours are 44½ each week, so that the loss to each man is only $2.20.

THE STEAMER OTONABEE STUCK ON EXCURSION

The steamer Otonabee, that used to ply on the Otonabee to Rice Lake on Friday was taking a big crowd of excursionists from Balsover, near Kirkfield lift lock to points on Lake Simcoe. On her return the Otonabee ran out of her proper channel in the "reach," about three or four miles from Kirkfield. Supt. McClellan of the Trent Canal was telephoned to. In the meantime the passengers were landed and walked home. Mr. McClellan, by phone, communicated with the Government tug Bob Hall, which was then at Kirkfield. The Bob Hall succeeded in getting the Otonabee afloat at 4 a.m. Saturday, when the latter proceeded to her present headquarters at Barrie.

PRESIDENT WILSON WORRIED OVER TURN IN MEXICAN AFFAIRS

Conference of Senators of Foreign Relations Committee to Discuss Situation---Jingoes Cause Trouble

Washington, Aug. 9.—The developments in the Mexican situation today are:

President Wilson is much worried over the events in the last thirty-six hours both here and in Mexico.

The President took steps to-day to still the jingo talk which has been rampant among certain United States senators. He will call the senate committee on foreign relations to the White House at 8.30 to-night and give to the committee in detail his reasons for sending ex-Governor John Lind to Mexico. He will ask the co-operation of the committee in stilling the jingo talk and bring about a solution of the problem. Both Democrat and Republic members of the committee are attending the conference. John Lind, commissioner of mediation, sent to Mexico by President Wilson, has arrived in Vera Cruz.

Commissioner Lind will proceed to Mexico City some time to-night. He is expected to arrive in the Mexican capital some time Sunday. A conference of Commissioner Lind and American charge d'affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy will be held at the embassy Sunday. President Wilson and Charge O'Shaughnessy in Mexico City will make public at the same time and following the conference between the commissioner and charge the instructions given by the president to the former.

Hopeful of Reception.

These instructions may not be made public until Monday morning. Despite the report from Mexico, President Wilson is hopeful regarding the reception Commissioner Lind will receive and of settling the trouble without intervention or war. He admits it is a delicate task and one which mighe be lost by misrepresentation and misunderstanding. It was to avoid these latter that the president takes the members of the senate committee into his confidence to-night.

Secretary of State Bryan is attending the conference and will furnish the committeemen with much information concerning conditions generally in Mexico.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

CALLS Y. W. C. A. SLAVERY CAUSE

Florence Crittenton League Head lays Girls Downfall to its Doors

Boston, Aug. 9.—The downfall of many girls may be laid directly at the door of the country's Y.W.C.A.'s according to Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, national president of the Florence Crittenton League of Compassion. Declarations to that effect were made by her upon her return from London, where she was in attendance at the international conference for the Abolition of the White Slave Traffic.

"Lack of social opportunity is certainly one great cause of the downfall of girls," she said.

"The poor girl has nobody to introduce her to the young people she wants to know. The only way she can get acquainted with young men is to deck herself out in the latest feather and the highest heels and the greatest number of puffs and curls she can afford and hang around for a chance acquaintance.

"If she goes to the Y.W.C.A., entertainments there are always too many prying old maids and long-nosed old women to spy out the lovemaking. It frightens the man if it doesn't frighten her. The churches, too, too, have too many older people hanging around. Young people need some supervision, but they need to be by themselves.

"I don't see why the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. shouldn't have even their gymnasium classes together. If the Lord didn't mean men and women to be together, why didn't He let Mrs. Smith have all the girls and Mrs. Jones all boys in her family.

"I don't think it so much the low wages of the girls as the insufficient support of the family before the girl is of working age that makes for her downfall."

THE JOY RIDER.

CORPSE TRANSPARENT UNDER NEW TREATMENT

Philadelphia, Aug. 8. — A new method of giving medical students instruction, which, it is said, will largely obviate the necessity of dissection, will be put into practice at the Hahnemann Medical college at the beginning of the next term. Physicians and surgeons connected with the department of anatomy are now perfecting the process, which originated through the recent discovery by a German scientist of a fluid by the use of which the human body can be rendered transparent.

The fluid which is composed of several oils, turns the flesh into a sort of transparent jelly when injected, enabling the student to study the veins, muscles and bones far better, it is asserted, than if they resorted to the dissecting knife. It is said to be done of the most valuable discoveries in medical science [illegible] years.

PROMINENT LUMBERMAN IS NOW IN THE CITY

Mr. A. E. Guidal, representing the big Jackson lumber interests of Buffalo, has been a guest at the Oriental for some days. The Jackson people own 37,000 acres of hardwood lands in Cavendish township. Mr. Guidal has autoed out, during the past few days, several times to his company's limits and to Burleigh Falls. Concerning his firm, Toronto Globes says:

"Whatever else may be said of the work of the Jackson syndicate in the townships of Kendry and Haggart, on the line of the Transcontinental Railway, it appears that the Buffalo lumberman is endeavoring to carry out his undertaking. In a report received from Mr. J. F. Whitson, Road Commissioner of the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines, it is stated that the Jackson people have done more road construction than any single municipality in the district.

"'They are leaving no reason to regret the cast-iron agreement which you entered into with them. They appear to be carrying it out,' says Mr. Whitson to Hon. W. H. Hearst.

"Around the Mattagami River a number of buildings have been erected, and a school and church set up. The company has also provided a first-class saw-mill, but unfortunately the recent fire destroyed their saw-logs, and the mill will hardly do much cutting until next spring. Over ten miles of roadway have been constructed into the village from different directions and the country is being well opened, says Mr. Whitson."

SON SHOOTS MAN FEIGNING BANDIT

Port Reading, N. J., Aug. 8. — Thirteen-year-old Christian Thompson, camping out today with companions on the beach near his home here, fired blindly with his small rifle at a clump of bushes close to the camp from which three revolver shots had sounded and shot his father through the heart, killing him instantly.

John Thompson, the father, director of a local loan and savings company, had gone to camp to awaken the boys and no doubt thought it would be a joke to do it by pretending a bandit attack. The lad was not arrested.

COMMITTEE REPORTS ON ALLEGED DEALS BY GOVERNOR SULZER

Ceairman Frawley Says There Is No Other Course Than Impeachment Proceedings

New York, Aug. 8.—While Governor Sulzer remains silent, members of the joint legislative committee, which concluded its hearings here yesterday, began to-day drafting a report which it will submit to the legislature on Monday with reference to testimony adduced showing that the governor had speculated in the New York stock market, using therefor contributions which he failed to include in his sworn statement as required by law.

In the opinion of Chairman Frawley of the committee, and of Eugene Lamb Richards, counsel, no further course than to recommend impeachment proceedings is open to the investigators.

Whether the committee will subsequently return to New York to enquire further into the Governor's Wall street deals will be discussed by the committee at a meeting to be held in Albany on Monday prior to the convening of the legisture Monday night. In the words of Chairman Frawley as expressed yesterday, "We've got enough already.'j

Never in the history of this state has a governor been impeached. Snould such a fate await Mr. Sulzer be would be put on trial before the senate and the state court of appeals sitting jointly. The court is now in recess and will not convene until Sept. 29.

COL. GWATKIN MAY KNOW TOO MUCH FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

London Truth Says "Colonel" Borden is Lamentably Ignorant on Military Matters and Correspondingly Touchy

London, Aug. 7.—Apropos of Colonel Gwatkin's appointment as Canadian Chief of Staff, Truth this week says: "The only doubt is not wheth- Colonel Gwatkin knows enough, but whether he is not too knowledgeable for 'Colonel' Borden, who is lamentably ignorant about all military matters, and correspondingly touchy when his ignorance is pointed out to him. If 'Colonel' Borden could not hit it off with General Mackenzie, I don't think he will with Colonel Gwatkin, who is not more likely than his predecessor tosuffer a fool gladly, especially when he is his official chief."

SHE HELD THE FORT AND JUGGED A COP

On Saturday evening a local hotel man paid off one of his kitchen girls. He tendered a cheque for the full week's wages and told the girl she would not be wanted any longer. She refused the cheque, demanding another week's pay in lieu of notice. The hotel man would not be held up and refused. Then this Amazon, who is a strapping big girl ran into the kitchen and grabbing up a formidable carving knife, chased all those in the room out, and defied the proprietor. He tried to reason with the woman, as boarders were waiting lor supper. "Not on your life. No extra wages, no kitchen!" she said. The police were summoned and the girl surrendered on their arrival. She asked leave to go to her room for her hat; before being taken to the station. The cops accompanied her upstairs. The girl slammed the door in the officers' faces, locked it and told them to go to a warmer climate than Canada. The cops burst in the door to meet a sturdy young woman armed with a big water pitcher. This she smashed on one of the officers before being captured. She was then taken in a hack to the station, where she spent Sunday.

INSULT TO HIS NIECE LEADS EX-BANDIT TO CRIME

Milan, Aug. 8.—Calenda, the notorious Calabrian brigand, is again on trial at Catanzaro Assizes in the same grim iron cage in which, in the year 1868, he heard his condemnation to thirty years' hard labor for murders. Hardly had he shaken off his shackles than he was hauled before the Monteleone Assize Court to expiate an outrageous crime for which he served five years in Brindisi convict settlement.

Calenda then expressed his intention of settling down quietly. This he did until 1905, when he heard that a young fellow named Macri had made a boast concerning Calenda's beautiful niece. Mad with rage, Calenda waylaid him with a gun. The shot missed, but a few nights later Macri was found pierced through the heart.

The brigand disappeared, and in his absence he was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. A few days later a shepherd stumbled across a couple of bodies on the mountain where Calenda was known to be in hiding. The two murdered men had given evidence against him. They had been shot in the back by bullets of a pattern that Calenda was carrying. The judicial authorities increased the penalty to one of lifelong incarceration, and caribinieri were despatched to scour the mountain fastnesses in hopes of capturing him.

Meantime Calenda—furnished with a false passport—was on his way to New York. No more was heard of him till 1911, when an Italian detective, dropping into a Brooklyn pharmacy, recognized the ex-brigand in the chemist's assistant. Hence his expulsion from the United States and his reappearance to answer for two murders and two other attempts at murder. This is the fourth time that the court has been occupied in judging his bloody deeds.

MISS ADA DAVIS WINS A BURNHAM WATCH

Rural Public School Section No. 10, Smith, better known as Montgomery's Schoolhouse, standing at the side of the road, three miles this side of Buckhorn, was the scene on Friday night of one of the largest and pleasantest gatherings ever held there. The occasion was the presentation by Mr. J. H. Burnham, of the gold watch won for the Township of Smith at the recent entrance exams, by Miss Ada M. Davis, a daughter of John H. Davis, North Smith. Warden Garbutt, also Reeve of Smith, occupied the chair and welcomed the large and happy gathering in his usual pleasant way. He understood that there was to be a programme after the presentation and would not take up further time than by saying that the public school was a great source of enlightenment and training, and that people must do all they could to make it efficient. He then introduced Mr. Burnham, M.P., who called forward Miss Ada Davis and presented her with a fine ladies' double case, gold watch, which, with its smooth polished surface, looked very attractive in its purple velvet holder. "The revival of interest in education and in our public schools," said the speaker, "should be the object of all those publicly concerned in the advancement of the interests of the people. To the farming population, education is now much more important in a practical sense than ever before. Farming is being brought into line as one of the great, indeed the greatest, of our manufacturing industries. It is no longer a vague indefinite source of food supply. The weather, the yield, the transportation, the available and probable supply are all watched in a systematic and commercial way from day to day. To enable the farmer to keep up with this marvellous development of both system and supply he has improved methods of farming, rural mail, rural parcel post, telephones, &c. The farmer is right in line with all other forms of business and will in future have to be even a better educated and better trained man than in the past. Heretofore many of the best trained young men and women from the country have gone to the centres where their training was of more use and found a greater scope. Gradually this is all being changed. The opportunities are now developing at home on the farm. The extremely high cost of living is forcing public attention back on the farm. There will be a new era henceforth in farm life. The problem of farm help is yet to be satisfactorily solved but that problem is practically the same both in the cities and the country. Everybody will have to lend a hand. In that way the inside as well as the outside work can be done. But the part the public school plays is always the most important. A good school means a bright intelligent capable highly-civilized community. A poor school means the reverse. Gatherings like this used to serve the same purpose in years gone by. The custom is returning. It cannot come back too soon. We must take greater interest in our public schools They are the most important link in the whole chain from beginning to end of active general life. The people meet on common ground there. They are not divided by either religion or politics. Popular education is a great united hearty forward movement, or should be. It is not only a mistake to let it fall behind. It is a grave danger. The acquirement of knowledge and training is what makes a superior people. Its neglect, even partially, means an inferior people. Moreover it best serves the people when all unite to a common end. It promotes solidarity and good-fellowship and power."

Mr. G. C. Wainwright spoke on the prospect of consolidated schools. In New Brunswick four or five schools are run into one and the children are conveyed in vehicles to the new school. This means better results in every way.

Miss Davis made a very nice reply.

FARMS FOR SALE

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

THE UNDERSIGNED OFFERS FOR SALE one of the best farms in the County of Peterborough, being west half of lot No. 7, and northeast quarter lot No. 6, in the second concession of the Township of Dummer, containing 150 acres, more or less. There is on the property two good dwelling houses, first class outbuildings and four never-failing wells. The soil is clay loam, and the farm is in a fine state of cultivation, with the exception of about 20 acres of bush. There is a good sized orchard and several fruits on the farm. This is a splendid opportunity for any one desiring a first class farm in a splendid locality, as it is only 2 miles from Warsaw.

For further particulars apply to

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 35c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 35c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Crossman's store.

Daringly Parisian

This is a bit daring. Well—perhaps, but absolutely proper.

The suit you see is a straight line affair which makes the figure look adorably sylph-like without being in any way unpleasantly tight. The jacket is the handy hip length which can be slipped on in a hurry over a silk waist or a shirt waist. It is constructed very much on the lines of a Norfolk, excepting there isn't any belt; it is more dressy and is a little closer fitting.

The skirt is cut tapering from the hips to the hem. The slash is absolutely necessary if milady wishes to walk. The divided hem, for that's all it is, has a clever trimming of piped satin in white, and is finished off with two sprightly self-covered buttons in the same color.

Softening Water

The easiest way to soften hard water is to boil it. During this process the free carbonic-acid gas in the water is driven off, and the carbonate of lime is then insoluble and shows as a white deposit. It is possible to add a little baking soda or borax to hard water, which will make the water feel soft, but, as they are alkalies, they dry and, thin the skin, taking away its fat.

No Fancy Fighter

Joe Bayley, the Victoria boy who put Billy Allen away in three rounds at Calgary, is not a boxer. His ring methods are not at all polished and he sometimes shows an inclination to use his head and elbows as well as his gloves. He is tough, has a hard punch and great stamina.

WHAT THE LORDS DEMAND.

The House of Lords is now pursuing a definite policy in regard to all the more important measures of legislation passed by the House of Commons. A specific formula has been adopted and used for the rejection of the Irish home rule, Welsh church disestablishment and other bills. It is that the House "refuses to proceed with the consideration of the Bill until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country." What does that mean? It amounts to a demand that the present Parliament shall be dissolved and a new Parliament elected. This plan for the obstruction of legislation is remarkable for its audacity. A dissolution of Parliament does not affect the membership of the House of Lords. As the members do not have to be elected, a general election so-called, does not affect any of them in the slightest degree; they all retain their seats and return in a body — just the old House of Lords is the otherwise new Parliament.

The demand of the Lords is consequently narrowed down to this that the duly elected members of the House of Commons shall vacate their seats, and go and fight for them again at an election, or get out of Parliamentary life. There is nothing whatever in the British constitution which is mainly a matter of practice to warrant this claim of the Lords to a right to throw one House of Commons out and force the election of another. That the peers who represent none but themselves with their doomed hereditary privilege, should assert such a right is positively preposterous. Yet they seem to imagine that they will succeed, for it is evidently in order to get the support of the plural voters for the Unionist party at the next general election that they have rejected the bill to abolish plural voting.

But that election will not be held until the bills now twice rejected by the Lords have been passed into law, through their third reading by the Commons, and their signature by the King. The Asquith ministry is not quite so crazy as to sacrifice the best and nearly finished work of the people's representatives in the present Parliament. Nor is it going to fling away its great opportunity to put an end to the House of Lords, and put in its place an elective and representative House, somewhat similar in constitution to the United States Senate. That is what the people demand; and it is the demand of the people, not of the peers, that will be granted.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which Are Breathed to the Farther Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing, medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at its source disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailments thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and in fact have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently.. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolutely permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00 smaller size, 50c. at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

WHEN BIRDS MIGRATE

Humanitarian Invention to Prevent Devastation of Flocks

Every spring thousands of migrating birds are dashed to death on the lighthouses that surround the British coasts.

A Dutch naturalist has invented a contrivance to prevent this destruction, and experiments are being made with it at the lighthouses at St Catherine's, on the coast of the Isle of Wight, and the Caskets, in the English Channel. Both of these are on the principal migration route, and annually account for the loss of great numbers of birds.

The naturalist takes the view that the birds are not stunned or killed by the impact with the lantern, but are attracted to the light, and keep circling about it until they perish. He accordingly has devised a series of resting-places, which fit on the lantern itself.

Experiments already conducted show the value of this invention, in one instance reducing the mortality from thousands of birds slightly to a hundred during the whole migration period.

AROUND THE WORLD IN SEVEN DAYS

Airmen Think It a Possibility of the Not Far Distant Future With Powerful Hydroplane

There is no mistake about it—the world is growing smaller. Magellan, its first circumnavigator, took no fewer than three years over the task. In 1907 Lieutenant-Colonel H. Burnley Campbell, a veteran of sixty-four raced round it in a little over forty days. This is the record, so far; but it will probably be broken in the no far distant future.

The waterplane, of course, is destined to accomplish this seeming impossibility. It can be done, airmen have no doubt. It is merely a matter of building machines big enough with sufficiently powerful engines and adequate storage capacity.

First will come the flight across the Atlantic—roughly speaking, two thousand miles from land to land.

Then will follow preparations to the greater journey—the crowning aerial achievement of all—the flight round the globe.

This is not so difficult as it sounds. Possibly the flight across the Atlantic from, say, St. John's, Newfoundland to Valentia, on the southwest coast of Ireland will be a more trying ordeal to airmen than any single stage in the round-the-world flight. And for this reason. The North Atlantic is proverbially a rough and stormy ocean, even in summer.

The aeronaut who essays to fly round the world, on the other hand can choose his own route; and this means that he can fly, for the most part, over tropical seas, and in a air of an equable temperature.

Nor need he at any time make a longer land-to-land journey than that which will have to be accomplished by the winner of the trans-Atlantic flight. His jumping-off place, so to speak, will probably be Cape St Roque, in Brazil, whence he will steer a straight course for Sierra Leone approximately one thousand miles distant. From thence he will steer his machine up along the African coast hardly ever out of sight of land, and then through the Straits of Gibraltar, and, by way of the Mediterranean, the Red and the Arabian Seas to Ceylon.

Thence past the "Spice Islands" as the old navigators christened them, he will fly, by way of Torres Strait, out into the Coral Sea and the broad, isle studded Pacific, and so back by way of Panama to his starting-place.

Approximately, the distance travelled by the route indicated will be about 30,000 miles, and this can be covered, by a waterplane of 200 horse power, at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, making 300 hours of actual flight.

Assuming the pilot to fly on an average fifteen hours out of each twenty-four, the remaining nine hours being devoted to resting, he would accomplish the entire journey in twenty days, less than half the shortest time taken for the trip up to now. Or if a waterplane be built of sufficient size to carry three men comfortably so as to allow of a practically continuous flight being made, with only brief stops for petrol and provisions then the world may be flown round in about twelve and a half days.

And even this is not the limit. Experienced airmen expect to be able to construct presently machines, that will be capable of flying at the rate of 200 miles an hour and this, of course, may mean that the world will be circumnavigated aerially in less than a week.—Answers.

SPORT IN CANADA

A Plea for Lacrosse and Other Trials of Strength

The game of baseball is a striking contrast to the sedate, leisurely Old Country game of cricket with its intervals for tea and its innings lasting two or three days. Nowadays there does not seem to be so much written or said about the real Canadian national game: lacrosse. It would be pity indeed if lacrosse were to be allowed to pass and become forgotten to Canada. For a manly robust summer game the pleasure of a well-matched lacrosse battle would be hard to excel. It may not be so entertaining to the spectators, but for a downright test of physical fitness and combination it is equal to any in the field. In modern times the tendency in sport as in work appears to be away from brawn in favor of brain. The midways at the fairs know nothing of the tough old boxing booths where brawny rustics were invited to don the gloves; wrestling on the green has given place to Japanese acrobats and vaudeville turns.

The opportunity to watch a straight bout between burly champions comes rarely. To see such a splendid specimen of manhood as Zybsco, or Frank Gotch, the western farmer, is a stirring incentive to the youth who is inspired to build up a robust constitution. How much better, with all its rough, strenuous work, is the glove fight and the wrestling match, than the morbid gazing at freak animals and fake criminal cars. Happily the sturdy spirit of sport still prevails in Canada; and even if lacrosse has to give way for baseball nothing will displace the stalwart contests of autumn on the Canadian football field and the fast hockey games of winter.

Wants Good Firearms

Germany has prohibited the passage through its customs houses of firearms that do not bear marks showing they have been thoroughly tested by the makers.

Pictures by Wire

A French inventor's process for telegraphing pictures uses a system of hollows and reliefs, the passage of a stylus over which determines the intensity of the current transmitted.

Motor-driven Flat Iron

An electric flat iron invented by a Western man is propelled by a motor-driven roller, an operator having only to guide it and control the current by a switch in the handle.

What is said to the largest clock in the world forms a part of an electric sign in Boston.

WEATHER WISDOM

Strips of seaweed provided that they are not kept in a room warmed artificially—will keep dry and have a dusty feeling in fine weather; but, with an increase of moisture in the atmosphere, they will become damp and sticky, and so indicate a change of weather in the form of rain.

Sea birds, sensitive to pending changes in the weather, fly inland at the approach of stormy weather in quest of food.

The expression "an inch of rain" refers to the marks up a standard rain-gauge, the amount of rain equivalent to the distance between two such marks being represented by nearly 101 tons over an acre of land.

A Hertzian wave weather service has been established on the Eiffel Tower, Paris, whence a code message giving the state of the wind, sea, etc., at six of the principal stations on the Atlantic coast is radiated over the Atlantic Ocean every midday for any vessel with appropriate wireless receivers to pick up.

STEALING FINE ORE

Highgraders Adopt Ingenious Schemes to Get the Metal

Some very interesting methods are resorted to by both men and women "high graders" to bring stolen silver in a crude state out of the Northern Ontario mining district, according to a report of the Provincial police. Several used specially constructed duck bags which fitted in a natural manner about the body, and when loaded merely added to the corpulence of the individual. One woman trusting to the female attire for protection concealed 60 pounds in her skirts, but was intercepted before making good her escape. Another formed a metal belt of the silver ore suspended on strings, but shared the same fate.

CENTURY OLD CANOE

Relic of Indians Washed Ashore at Niagara

During a gale which swept Lake Ontario there was washed up on the beach at Niagara-on-the-Lake an old dugout canoe, which caused the townspeople a good deal of speculation, as judging by its timbers it is certainly very aged. The strange craft came ashore in two sections, which, put together, made a canoe of twenty-five feet. It is a dugout, made of a huge tree trunk, as it is nearly six feet wide. It is entirely covered with bark. The supposition is that it was an old Indian war canoe which sank in the Niagara Riber maybe a century ago. Becoming embedded in mud at the bottom of the river, it lay there for many years until loosened by ice or a shift in the current. The Niagara Historical Society have possession of the canoe.

Phones in Theatres

On the back of each seat of a new London Theatre there will be coin in the slot telephones to enable persons with defective hearing to listen to what is being said on the stage.

Ball Bearings Hard

Minute measurements of ball bearings on the axles of a New Jersey trolley car that had travelled about 150,000 miles in four years showed that they had resisted abrasion almost perfectly.

THE SEASHORE.

The Seashore Express that leaves Bonaventure Station every night at 8.30, with electric lighted buffet Sleeping Car and the day train, leaving Montreal at 8.30 a.m., with Parlor Card and Dining Cars reach the unsurpassed districts of Long Island Sound that are environments of New London, Conn., where the attractions are—warm surf bathing, fishing, sailing, driving or tramping.

Block Island, Watch Hill and Fisher's Island are three charming spots for the summer visitor and are swept constantly by ocean breezes—the temperature rarely rising above 75 degrees. A week at any of these places will do as much good as a sea voyage.

There is splendid Hotel and Boarding House accommodation at prices to suit all pockets.

HUGE SLAV EMPIRE

Ambitious Plan of Franz Ferdinand of Austria

According to the Vienna correspondent of The Paris Journal a friend of Archduke Franz Ferdinand is authority for the disclosure of an ambitious plan of the Archduke's

In a word, the Archduke aims at the creation of a vast Slav Empire of the south under the Crown of the Hapsburgs.

The new confederation, according to the same authority, is to include the autonomous kingdoms of Hungary, Bohemia and Poland, each with its own personal ruler; Servia, with its frontiers extended, and increased by the inclusion of Slavonia; Montenegro, enlarged by a part of Dalmatia and part of Herzgovina, and the other Balkan states.

Poland is said to have been quick to grasp the plan and has signified unanimous adhesion, and Bulgaria and Servia are said to be favorably disposed toward the scheme.

Drink and Lunacy

Some idea of the appalling ravages made by the drink scourge in present-day France may be formed by the terrible series of statistics showing the relation between alcohol and madness which specialists attached to the principal Paris lunatic asylums made public.

These figures reveal that since 1868, when exact records were started, the proportion of male lunatics whose loss of reason is caused by drink has increased 14 per cent. to 47 per cent.; while on the female side the percentage has risen from less than 2 to 20.

TENNIS.

Chicago, Aug. 9. — Championship tennis teams from four sections of the United States will start play at Onwentsia to decide which pair shall meet Maurice McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, of San Francisco, for the national doubles title to the challenge round at Newport on Aug. 18.

Pairings for the opening matches pit Heath Byford and R. H. Burdick Western champions, against W. M. Washburne and Gustave F. Touchard, holders of the Eastern title. John Strachan and Clarence Griffin, Pacific coast champions, will meet J. B. Adoue and Robert Shelton, the South's representatives. The survivors will clash tomorrow in the final match.

Byford and Burdick are conceded an excellent chance to win their way into the challenge series.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 9.—Leach Cross and Joe Rivers were matched for a 20-round bout on Labor Day at the Vernon arena. It is a part of the present plan to have the winner of the Cross-Rivers match meet Willie Ritchie on Thanksgiving Day, provided the champion retains his title on Labor Day.

Ritchie has been offered matches on Labor Day with Tommy Murphy at San Francisco and Freddie Welsh at Victoria, B.C. He has not decided which offer to accept.

BASEBALL.

With the puncture of Cleveland's winning streak Monday at Philly, Connie Mack's boys have their best chance of the season to eliminate the Naps from annoying them in regards to the American League pennant. Three more games are to be played before Joe Birmingham moves Jackson-Lajoie & Co., over to Washington. If Connie's fellows can cop two more, the Naps will take a hefty slide towards third place, giving the Athletics their lead of nine and a half games, which ought to be enough to ward off the opposition that Walter Johnson can furnish for the balance of the season.

The manner in which the Mackmen whaled their opponents, using a recruit twirler, shows the class of the two clubs

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Ed Reulbach, last of the staff except Overall, who helped win pennants for the Chicago Nationals, was traded today to Brooklyn for Pitcher Ed. Stack.

Mike Mitchell, outfielder, upon whom waivers had been asked by the Chicago Nationals, has been claimed by Pittsburg.

TURF.

London, Aug. 9.—Prince Palatine, the horse for which J. B. Joel the South African capitalist, paid the record price of $250,000 this week, has proved somewhat of a disappointment in his initial race as the costliest race horse in the world, for the race for the Good Wood cup. Although there were only six runners, Prince Palatine failed to finish among the first three and reached the winning post in a distressed condition.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Uhlan, 1: 58, owned by C. K. G. Billings, of New York, champion trotter of the world, will appear at Goshen during race week Aug. 19 to 21 in an attempt to beat his world's record, 2: 02¾, over the historic half-mile track. It will be his only appearance in the East this season

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 9.—The veteran driver "Pop" Geers broke the streak of bad luck which has been following him for the past few weeks by piloting him for the past few weeks by piloting the blind clot Etawah to victory in the $10,000 Horseman futurity for 3-year-old trotters at Recreation Park.

KEEP YOUR RAZOR IN PROPER SHAPE

Easy to do so If You Follow the Barber's Advice—How to Use a Strop

"Razor in good order, sir?" asked the barber as he wiped the blade.

"Fine!" murmured his customer "Beats me how you keep the edge on them that you do."

"Oh, that's a matter of knack! I suppose that you've never thought that your razor might want a rest. After you've used a razor for a while you can't get a good edge on it. Put it by for a time—two or three months clear—and you'll find it will come all right.

"Shaving is really only a matter of getting and stropping properly; and that anyone can learn if only they will go the right way about it."

"Stropping, of course, you'll have to do before and after shaving. The secret of stropping is to strop lightly on a strop that gives a grip, taking care to give the last turn on the side that comes next the skin. Then, if there's any slight turn on the edge, it doesn't pull. Most strops are all right if they're attended to occasionally; but, if they're not, they get too hard and smooth to do much good. A plain piece of belting is as good as anything. Rub this on the wrong side with olive oil till it's soaked completely through. Then take a little powdered vegetable charcoal—the same stuff you get for medicine—and rub it well in on the right side. A strop like that has grip enough to give an edge to any razor that's not tempered too hard.

"Given a razor in perfect condition, you can provide yourself as good a shave as any barber can. Lather well; the more time you spend with the brush, the less you'll need with the razor. That's my experience.

"And don't forget to dip the blade into hot water before you start. A razor-blade under the microscope is just like a saw, and if oil or grease collects in the gaps, it won't shave clean. The hot water removes the grease.

"And, by the by, don't keep your razors in the bath-room. The fine edge will be destroyed by rust if you do Keep them in a dry place."

BUILT LIKE A BIRD

Another Step Towards Solving Problem of Successful Flight

The Etrich monoplane, of Austrian make, stands out as one of the most remarkable designs of this class of aerial machine, and it represents a type that bids fair to be more permanent than many other models which from to time have created sensations.

The monoplane has fallen into disfavor with the military authorities in several countries as a consequence of an unfortunate series of accidents, which were debited rather unfairly to the machine without taking sufficiently into account the variable human element.

Of the Etrich monoplane, it may be said that it is designed to remedy some of the defects which have been pointed out in monoplanes. Great strength and automatic stability to a high degree are the two most notable features. It is birdlike in appearance, and the wings are curious in that they are curved backwards and upwards at the ends. The tail is birdlike also From tip to tip the machine measures no less than 48 feet, an enormous width for a monoplane. Its length is 37 feet.

The wings are the weakest part of the monoplane as a rule, and in the Etrich a very remarkable method of construction seeks to remedy this. Three main spars project from the central body, and the cross-ribs are secured to these and then covered with fabric. A cantilever bridgelike structure of steel tubing supports the main spars and thus gives a degree of strength to the planes which enables them to be made of ample dimensions. The rear part of the plane is built up of bamboo ribs covered with fabric so as to form a flexible trailing edge. In this again there is a suggestion of bird formation being followed. The wing-tips are turned up at the rear, and natural stability to a high degree is obtained thereby. The pilot also has control of the wing-tips. The central body is made of steel tubing strongly braced and the front part is covered in with metal sheeting. The largest machine is a three-seater, and it has an engine of 120 horsepower. The Etrich monoplane is largely used in the Austrian army, and by its strength, power, and reliability, it seems peculiarly well adapted for naval and military work.

Britain's Best Customer

India to-day is the best British customer in the world. Of every hundred pounds' worth of British products and manufactures, she takes fourteen pounds ten shillings' worth —or more than one-seventh. For the last fiscal year her purchases from the United Kingdom reached the vast total of nearly 265 million dollars, while those of Germany, the next best British customer, aggregated less than 200 million dollars. The value of the British manufactures and products exported to India far exceeds that of those exported to Canada and the United States combined.

School for Straphangers

In Dusseldorf, Germany, a campaign of education is under way for street car riders, the idea being to facilitate the service and to avoid many of the dangers to which passengers often expose themselves unnecessarily. Fifty per cent. of the accidents are due to persons alighting or embarking while the vehicle is in motion, and for the purpose of demonstrating the proper and approved methods of performing these operations a moving picture exhibition was devised. The result is very satisfactory and a great improvement in the condition of affairs is noted.

CARE OF MILK AND CREAM

It is impossible to produce clean milk and cream unless the cows, stable, milker, utensils, and separator are clean.

To wash milk utensils use, first, cold water for rinsing; second, warm water containing a small quantity of good washing powder for cleaning; third, boiling water or steam for sterilising.

Use a metallic strainer; it is practically impossible to keep cloth strainers sweet and clean and free from bacteria.

Skim the milk as soon after milking as possible, and cool the cream at once.

Skim a cream testing from 35 to 45 per cent.—the richer the cream the better it will keep. By skimming a rich cream, more skim milk is left at home for feed, and there is also a smaller bulk on which to pay express charges.

Do not mix warm, new cream with cold cream until it has been cooled.

Keep the cans of cream in a tank of cold water until time of delivery.

Wash the separator thoroughly after each separation.

Deliver the cream to the creamery or cream station early in the morning.

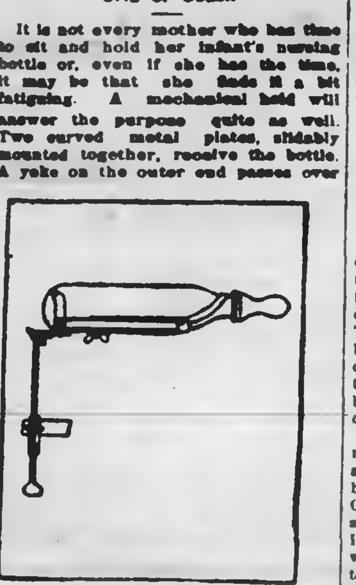
Deliver the cream not less than three times a week during the summer, and twice a week during the winter.

Protect the cans of cream from the sun by covering with canvas or with a wet sack while on route.

HOLDS BABY'S BOTTLE

Adjustable Arm Clamps on Side of Crib or Coach

It is not every mother who has time to sit and hold her infant's nursing bottle or, even if she has the time, it may be that she finds it a bit fatiguing. A mechanical hold will answer the purpose quite as well. Two curved metal plates, slidably mounted together, receive the bottle. A yoke on the outer end passes over the neck of the bottle and curved spring arms at the other end engage the lower end of the milk container. This holder is mounted on an adjustable standard which can be clamped to the side of the baby's crib or coach or wherever be happens to be. The horizontal arm can then be tilted to any angle so that it is directly in front of the infant's mouth, and he can pull away to his heart's content while mother attends to other duties.



SAVES MOTHER'S TIME

USED WOODEN BULLETS

Turkish Soldiers Too Stupid to Recognize Manoeuvre Cartridges

New light is thrown on the rout of the Turkish troops in Macedonia by the discovery that, besides being badly organised and badly led, they were in great part provided with dummy cartridges and dummy bullets. Mr. William Le Queux found such bullets on the battlefield, and Mr. Frank Magee, another war correspondent, brought back to England from the battlefield of Kumanovo cases of these cartridges thrown away by the Turks in their flight before the Servians. The cartridges were packed in clips of five, and had ordinary metal cases, while the wooden bullets were painted red.

It is stated that the cartridges were supplied to Turkey by German firms. They were intended solely for the use in manœuvres with the Turkish Mauser rifle and were labelled "wooden manœuvre cartridges." By what means they came to be served out to soldiers facing the Servian shells and bullets is unknown. Wooden bullets should be harmless at any distance over a few yards.

A remarkable yet simple enough explanation of these wooden bullets was supplied by Mr. Frederick A. Harrison, of the English firm of Maxime and Co.

"I don't know," he said, "whether there is some veiled suggestion in the report that these cartridges were 'made in Germany.' As a matter of fact, they were only put together in Germany. My firm supplied not hundreds, but millions of these wooden bullets to Germany, as well as most other countries in Europe, from our factory. They are made to be used at manœuvres only and were certainly introduced for that purpose into the Turkish army by the German instructors. Owing to the confusion of the war and the ignorance of the Turkish army store officials, some of this manœuvre ammunition evidently was served out for use in the field.

"The painting red of the bullets was intended, of course, to distinguish the 'wood' from the real bullets, though the weight should have been a sufficient indication to any but the newest recruit."

To Sugar Dates

When stuffing dates for a confection, instead of rolling each one separately in powdered sugar, put a tablespoonful of the sugar in a glass jar. Then put in the jar about a cupful of the stuffed dates, seal the jar and shake well. You will be surprised to see how evenly the dates are dusted with the sugar and how much time is saved in doing.

Paintings by Cave Dwellers

A remarkable archaeological discovery was made at Bacon Hole, a few miles west of the Mumbles, Wales by two distinguished French professors, Messrs. Breuil and Sollas. It consists of paintings which are definitely known to belong to the Aurignacian period—the oldest period of cave dwelling. At the level of the eyes may be seen ten horizontal bands of vivid red, arranged in a vertical series of about one yard in height.

EFFE[illegible] OF FEAR

The Response of the Body When an Emergency Arises

In a paper on the subject of fear and its effect upon the human body, prepared by Dr. G. W. Chile, a London physician, it is explained that under the influence of fear the organs of the body are divided sharply into two classes—those that are stimulated, and those whose work ceases temporarily.

Under the first classification come nerve systems, which cause movement—the mechanism for raising the hair, the respiration, the sweat glands, and, it is found, the thyroid gland and the adrenal gland.

On the other hand, the entire digestive functions are paralysed. So far as we know, the organs stimulated increase the efficiency of the animal either to fight or flight. The increased action of the muscles of the heart increases the efficiency of the circulation; the secretion of the adrenal gland causes a rise in the blood pressure; the increased activity of the thyroid gland causes an increased activity of the tissues, and the production of glycogen is a symptom that the body is preparing fresh supplies of energy, increased respiration is necessary to co-ordinate the supply of oxygen with this manufacture; even the sweat glands and dilated nostrils are playing their part. The digestive organs cannot help, they can only hinder; so the body does the best it can by shutting off the nervous current to them and saving the vital force which they would consume.

Thus, because fear first rose from injury, its phenomena are due to a stimulation of all the organs that add to efficiency in self-preservation, and a stoppage of those which are noncombatants. Fear takes many forms in civilized society, but nature has only one means of expressing it physically, and that does not alter.

A PERILOUS POSITION

Many Attempts Made on Lives of India's Viceroys

There is only one case on record of the actual assassination of a Viceroy of India—the Earl of Mayo being fatally stabbed by a prisoner in 1872 during a visit to a convict settlement. The murder had no political motive, but during recent years, as a result of the unrest which followed the partition of Bengal, the life of a Viceroy has been aimed at on more than one occasion.

In November, 1909, Lord Minto was making a tour of India, and during a procession through Ahmedabad two bombs were thrown at his carriage. One was cleverly intercepted by the sabre of a sergeant of the Inniskilling Dragoons; the other hit the umbrella which was being held over Lady Minto and fell harmless to the ground. The culprits were never discovered.

In November, 1910, when Lord Minto was holding his farewell reception at Calcutta, three natives who had got in with forged passes, were arrested on the charge of shadowing the Viceroy. Lord Minto escaped other perils. During the trial of some conspirators in 1908 one of the prisoners confessed that their plans had included a plot to assassinate Lord Minto, Lord Kitchener, and other high officials. The informer was afterwards shot dead in his cell by a fellow prisoner.

In November, 1907, Lord Minto was making a prolonged tour, when the officials got wind of a plot against his life, and the Viceroy's tour was cut short. In February, 1909, while his lordship was at Assam for a few days' shooting his train passed a spot where a few hours previously a bomb was thrown at a passing train, and the coincidence gave rise to disquieting suggestions at the time.

Lord Minto's predecessor, Lord Curzon, was also once in peril. During the hearing of the Kolhapur bomb case in April, 1911, one of the prisoners confessed that at the Delhi Durbar of 1891 four men were deputed to kill Lord Curzon as he was passing in the procession, but the courage of the conspirators failed at the last moment.

Other distinguished Indian officials have been in peril. Four attempts were made in the course of three years to murder Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, thrice bombs were hurled at the train in which he was travelling, and once a native fired at him in a lecture hall in Calcutta.

"Whip" Coined by Burke

The parliamentary origin of the term "whip" goes back to 1769. In that year, writes Sir Courtenay Ilbert, "there was a great debate in the House of Commons on the petition against the return of Col. Luttrell for Westminster in the place of Alderman Wilkes, who had been expelled from the House by its order. The king's Ministers made great efforts to bring their followers together from all quarters for this debate. Burke, who took part in the debate, referred to these efforts, and described how Ministers had sent for their friends to the north and to Paris, whipping them in, than which, he said, there could not be a better phrase. The phrase thus adopted and commended by Burke caught the public fancy, and soon became popular."

Passive Resister's Court Dress

Edward Burton Reeves, a passive resister, appeared before the Norwich magistrates in what he described as his "court dress," and was fined $1.25 for assaulting a rate collector. He wore a red jersey on which was inscribed in white letters, "For God and home in every land." On the back of the jersey were the lines:—

Not once nor twice in our rough island story
The prison cell has been the path to glory.

One New York office building has electric wires enough to more than reach across the continent.

FARMER AND CROW

Thieving Bird is Not Welcome Regardless of His Virtues

On the Pacific Coast a heated discussion raged around the crow, that pert, competent bird who has outlived the guns and traps of man for many, many years. Opinions as to his merits and demerits were sharply in contrast, the farmer taking a firm stand against the ornithologist, and each evincing for the other that degree of contempt that is always shown when science and casual observation clash.

The farmer, as a rule, is no bird lover, because his life puts him in a position where he notices the depredations of birds, and does not furnish him the opportunity of seeing the good his feathered visitors perform. He is naturally scornful of all theories which postulate that the bird pays his way by his destruction of pests. The crow dining on some parasitic bug, beetle or fly does not attract his attention as does the crow in the cornfield or elsewhere in the crops.

Against this the man of science brings a bill of fare of the crow, with statistics concerning the contents of the crow's stomach, all of which counts but little with the farmer, who knows what he sees with his eyes.

As an academic discussion there is perhaps little interest in the morality of the crow and his keeping of the commandments. His activities, whether they be good or bad, affect the farmer for the most part, and the farmer turns down his thumbs and demands the life of the crow. The farmer is the one who will suffer or profit in either event and as for the crow he is quite capable of looking after his own interests. He is a merry vagabond who finds his sustenance and joys everywhere.

A SHARP-EYED BOY

He Picked Out in Crowd Grandfather He Had Never Seen

"I don't know my own son. I am afraid I will never find him in this crowd, and I have been waiting eight years for this," complained an elderly man at the Montreal station as he looked searchingly about among the hundreds of immigrants who had just arrived. Just then a little child not more than four years old ran up to him, and, pulling at his coat, cried out: "Why here's granda." The child's mother was about to reprove him for speaking to a strange man when a stalwart Welshman just behind the child called out:

"Baby Jim is right. It is grand-da."

Thus was the re-union of the Morgan family consummated.

The elder man had left the old home eight years before when his son was but a lad of fifteen, and had been working in Ontario in an effort to raise the money to bring the rest of the family to Canada. He has had his share of hard luck, however, and the years passed without the object being attained. The son was prosperous enough in Wales to take unto himself a wife. For some years he worked as Mr. Lloyd George's gardener at the house which was burned by suffragettes.

The father finally prospered and sent the money to aid his son to come to Canada, bringing with him the wife and child which his father had never seen.

The elder Morgan had sent his picture home to England, and the little boy had been taught so carefully about his coming to see "grand-da" that his bright eyes were the first to notice the grizzled workman, who had aged so much that his own son barely recognized him.

AN OLD SCHOOLHOUSE

Took Nearly a Century For Toronto to Grow Out to It

The oldest landmark on the banks of the Don River, which flows through Toronto, disappeared when the one-roomed log schoolhouse which stood in Todmorden for well on to a century was torn down in order to make way for modern homes.

All the Todmorden children of several generations were educated in its solitary room, which accommodated about seventy pupils. There was a bell tower, but no bell was ever installed. The building was abandoned when it became too small, in 1889, and after that it was occupied by market gardeners. The last teacher was Mr. Tom Gould of the Customs Department at the Toronto Postoffice.

Value of Sugar Beets

A noteworthy fact concerning the sugar beet crop, so extensively grown in Kent County, Ontario, is that, far from exhausting the soil, the sugar beet renews it for other crops. This fact is clearly proven by German statistics, where, in 20 years, the wheat yield was increased from 20 to 40 bushels per acre, largely as a result of rotating with sugar beets. Similar results have been noticed in Kent County wherever other crops have been planted following the beet crops.

The sugar beet, too, is a deadly enemy to weeds, and leaves clean fields behind it. This is true, also, of tobacco, which is extensively raised in the same district.

Examine Old Masters

The surest way to determine the age of a painting, according to a London chemist, is to analyse the pigments.

A Trunk Carrier

A baggage truck invented by a Californian has hooks on the handles to permit it to be carried with its load upstairs on a man's shoulders.

Cement Dust Valuable

Dust from cement mills has been found valuable as a fertilizer as it contains a large percentage of potash.

DIABETES CURED —THE PROOF

We have proof of cases of Diabetes that have been cured by SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES when the patient had been a sufferer from the disease for fifteen (15) years. This remedy is particularly efficacious in cases in which open wounds, add to the sufferings of the patient. It has cured the most stubborn cases after all the usual remedies and diets have signally failed.

We have scores of confidential letters from grateful patients who have found relief in Sanol's Anti-Diabetes. These letters do not comes from people in distant parts, but from residents of western cities and towns. They are convincing.

—Sanol's Anti-Diabetes is no common remedy—it is different from the usual—it is a specific and scientific remedy, prepared for the relief and cure of one disease and one only.

A well-known Government official of British Columbia (whose name will be given in confidence) writes us that on June 12th he commenced the use of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, and that on June the 19th his urine was free of sugar. To prove that wonderful statement he sent us the certificates of the chemist's analysis. "The result," he says, "I regard as highly gratifying."

Boon to Rifle Clubs

To prevent the accumulation of old ammunition which deteriorates if kept in store, the Militia Department at Ottawa decided to supply rifle clubs with cartridges free, subject to a certain measure of control. Hitherto the clubs have had to pay for their cartridges. The cordite cartridges are the ones chiefly affected by aging.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Dredging, Little Current," will be received until 4.00 P. M., on Tuesday, August 12, 1913, for dredging required at Little Current, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent. (5 per cent) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

AUGUST 25th—From Toronto and North Western Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hanaibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the Island of Ciryne, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Helgoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the Island of Ciryne in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Ciryne. Countess Rosiny offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIII—The countess gets a letter from Werdenstein offering her the princedom of Schomburg-Lithow for Edison's secret.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XV—The countess finally gets Santos into her clutches and he promises to do anything for her. She gets another letter from Werdenstein asking her to find out why Edison is interested in the Schomburg estate, he having made overtures for its purchase.

CHAPTER XVI—Edison applies personally to Werdenstein with an offer for the property, but gets no satisfaction. Astra and Edison set the date for their wedding. Werdenstein gets a letter from the countess promising to reveal Edison's secrets as soon as the property is turned over to her.

CHAPTER XVII—On the day of their wedding Astra and Edison get a letter from the countess saying she has left the country with Santos.

CHAPTER XVIII—Santos perfects a machine and is made a count by the emperor of Germany. He marries the countess, now princess of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XIX—Edison finds a new deposit of cirynith and builds a new fleet of airships. He accidentally discovers a liquid that will render opposing airships helpless by removing the magnetism from cirynith. He is injured while making the discovery.

CHAPTER XX—His long absence causes great uneasiness in Washington. Santos completes 21 airships for the countess. The aviators of the fleet elect her queen. She plans to master the world. Edison returns to Washington.

CHAPTER XXI—He equips his airships with a contrivance to render opposing machines helpless.

CHAPTER XXII—Werdenstein sends an ultimatum to America. The princess declares her fleet is ready and invites Werdenstein to inspect it. He then discovers her real plans and returns to Berlin in despair.

"I am quite curious to see everything, my dear princess."

"Your curiosity will soon be gratified, as I have already given orders to my men." She placed an emphasis on the "my."

The chancellor only bowed; then after a pause he said:

"I also have some orders for you, princess, from his majesty the kaiser!"

She waved her hand airily. "We can talk about it later."

The princess led him at once into the open and pointed toward twenty-one aerodromones that were stationed on the plateau, glittering in the sunshine. The uniformed aeromen stood at attention by their machines and saluted the princess and the count as they passed in old military style between the two rows of aerodromones.

The princess led the way to the machine that was decorated with the princely crown, and pulling a silver whistle from her pocket she blew it. The well-trained men jumped into their machines and sat at attention.

She blew shrill blasts on her whistle and the fleet shot up into the air as one bird.

The Count Santos Duprel was at the wheel and Rositta commanded the fleet. The second line of machines was signaled to reverse their flight and the first line followed her. After they had separated from each other a mile or so both lines turned toward the other, and the chancellor at last understood the significance of the maneuver when red pennants were hoisted on the eleven machines comprising the princess' fleet and blue on the ten opposite.

The aerodromone "Princess" made a detour and took a position on the right wing of the line; then the sham battle began.

The princess could not resist the impulse to show her prowess. Santos flung their aerodromone into the fight; they dodged and turned, each trying to gain in elevation. Finally, with a quick spring the "Princess" evaded its enemy and slid between its wings from the back and the next moment the enemy was a captive.

"I Tell You, Woman, to Stand Before Me."

It was an exhilarating sport.

"I congratulate you, princess," said the count to the intoxicated Rositta.

The "Princess" carried the captive machine back to Suemeg with ease. The other machines returned, one after the other, all enthusiastic and discussing the tactics of air warfare.

After the inspection dinner was served, in which the whole squadron took part, Werdenstein greeted several of them as old acquaintances and friends of those good days when the armies held their own and when he was planning to conquer the American continent. The times had changed. Now the air men ruled—at the command of a beautiful, bold woman, whose only motive seemed to be vanity.

These gloomy forebodings were warranted sooner than he expected. Only appetizers and soup had been served, when Count de Korona stood up and addressed the gathering:

"The pleasure of greeting the world-famous chancellor, the iron-handed man of the German Empire, has been given me. It is a great honor for us to have you at our feast, and we, the conquerors of the air, greet you, who are considered the representative of all the European powers."

Rositta smiled sweetly at the chancellor, who was watching the speaker in amazement. After a short pause, de Korona continued:

"We greet you as such, as a representative, and I, in my comrades' names, ask your excellency to be with us in heart and drink to the elected queen of the air, who is distined to be queen of the world. Long live our beloved Queen Rositta."

The huzzas that thundered through the hall told the chancellor plainly that this was no pleasantry. His suspicions had not been without foundation. He paled and when the tumult died away he stood up, calm and determined and without a word left the hall.

This action made Rositta furious, but she did not show her indignation. "The chancellor seems to have lost his appetite," was all she said.

After the dinner was over, she gave a few curt orders and the aeromen proceeded into another hall beautifully and regally decorated. At the far end stood a magnificent throne.

Rositta retired to her own apartment, while two men went to invite the chancellor to the throneroom. They found him soberly pacing the distance between the entrance gate and the first hangar.

He followed them. Rositta sat on the throne with a glittering cirynith crown on her head. She was more beautiful than ever.

The Count von Werdenstein was led before her. He showed no surprise. His face was calm and his whole attitude expressed disinterest.

"I have requested that your excellency come to Suemeg, for I have a message that I want brought before the whole world."

The count looked at her steadily, and without waiting to hear her further words he said in his strong, penetrating voice:

"I tell you, woman, to stand before me. Tell me your petition standing. Then I may listen to it. Do not forget that I represent the Emperor of Germany."

Had these words not been spoken in such deadly earnestness some of the audience would have found the scene ridiculous. As it was, it was grave and embarrassing and every one stood stunned.

The blood left Rositta's cheeks and it took almost a minute for her to recover her composure. Then she rose and pointing at the chancellor, said in a shrill voice:

"Take him away—back to Berlin quick or I shall forget myself and kill him!"

An hour later an aerodromone landed the chancellor in Berlin. He retired to his library and sank into the chair before his desk in despair. The weapon that he had counted on had turned against him. He, too, was glad that he had sent Captain Hochamberg on his mission before the visit to Suemeg.

The next day four aerodromones started from Suemeg. They were carrying, suspended from their bodies a tremendous bomb. Their orders were to reach the island of Ciryne by morning of the coming day.

When Washington received the news that the European monarchies, with the exception of England, had sent an ultimatum, most people simply smiled and asked: "What can they do? Napoleon Edison can take care of them."

Captain Von Hochamberg waited in vain for orders to reach him at Liverpool, and at eight o'clock he opened the sealed order. There was another sealed envelope in the packet and this order: "Take this letter personally to the address mentioned in the quickest possible manner."

The sealed envelope was addressed to "Mrs. Napoleon Edison, Washington, U. R. of A."

The captain left the German consulate and hurriedly secured a stateroom on the quickest route to the United States, and at eleven that morning he sailed for New York.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Second Victory.

It was the Tuesday before Thanksgiving day.

No one would have thought that the sunshiny, clear sky would soon be the field of the first aerial encounter.

Napoleon took leave of his wife and mother, assuring them that as soon as he had finished his task he would hurry back to them. After another embrace from Astra he ascended to the roof of the Crystal Palace and stepped into the Eagle. He was alone.

He floated slowly toward the east.

His preparations were complete. Jerome Whistler had marshaled all the men together and they had taken the aerodromones from the island. The busy little place was as silent as the grave this Tuesday morning.

Napoleon rose high in the air and connected his 'graph with young Sullivan who, with his three helpers, had been patrolling the Pacific Ocean all night. Young Sullivan told him that they had sighted four blue-flagged aerodromones headed for America an hour before. They were grouped together and carried a large, heavy object.

Napoleon told Sullivan to stop them and make them drop the object into the ocean. If they refused to obey Sullivan was ordered to use his judgment in his treatment of them, but they were not to be permitted near the coast. Young Sullivan bowed and the connection was broken.

The young man was using the Hawk, the machine Santos Duprel had used. He went straight forward to meet the four strange aerodromones that were approaching slowly, being handicapped by the tremendous weight they were carrying. He signaled for his three men to come to his assistance. They answered from the north and south and he knew that they would hasten to him. He sped onward, meeting the four strange aerodromones. They had slackened their pace and the foremost answered Sullivan's "Hello."

"What do you want?" he asked in German, through the speaking tube.

"I want you to drop that balloon that you are carrying into the ocean right here!" replied Sullivan, decidedly, in the same language.

"We'll drop it in good time, my friend."

When the four aerodromones refused to stop their flight toward Ciryne, Sullivan made a dart forward and upward and those in the burdened crafts, knowing the significance of that upward dart, rose also.

It Struck the Metal Shell of the Bomb and the Next Second an Explosion Came.

"Will you drop that?" shouted Sullivan.

The answer was a hail of bullets. Sullivan was surprised to see that they bored into the protecting shell of his machine. They did not entirely penetrate the cirynith. "That is something new," thought he. After the return to Ciryne he examined those bullets and found each tipped with diamond chips.

He saw, in the distance, two other aerodromones coming in answer to his call for assistance.

The four hostile aerodromones continued their fire, and finally Sullivan pulled the lever that discharged the collected lightning. It struck the metal shell of the bomb and the next second an explosion came that sent the flock of machines high up into the air. Sullivan's 'dromone, being to one side, did not suffer the shock that the others had, and he succeeded in spreading the wings and checking the upward flight.

The nature of cirynith was such that the aerodromones escaped without much damage, but had the explosive found a greater resistance than air there would have been great havoc among the machines.

The awful shock in the air was felt by Napoleon, who was circling above Madeira. He knew what had happened, as his aerial instruments told him that the disturbance had been in the air and not on the earth's surface. Ciryne was safe. He had been waiting for Rositta, but now, fearing that her fleet had been diverted to another course, he hastened to meet her.

Just as he sighted the Spanish coast he saw, spread out in a great crescent, seventeen birds. He recognized the "Princess" as the glittering bird in the center, leading. His powerful telescope showed that the Princess Rositta and two men were in the foremost machine.

He began to elevate the Eagle, without advancing, and the flotilla of the Princess Rositta also glided upward. Thus he knew that he was seen.

He still faced them and the distance between them was rapidly diminishing. He watched the oncoming Princess closely and saw that one of the two men was Santos, strangely changes. The ruddy cheeks were pale and he seemed taller. The other man was a stranger, dressed in the uniform of Rositta's fleet.

Hardly two miles separated the Eagle and the Princess when Napoleon turned and flew at full speed toward America. The Princess followed. The larger bird slowly gained on the retreating Eagle. Rositta's eyes glowed with excitement; the man whom she feared, loved and hated was running from her.

It seemed as though they gained on him with more rapidity; half a mile, then a quarter, then only yards were between them. Rositta was now sure of her prey and clutched the railing behind Santos, whispering sweet and encouraging words in his ear. She shook from the excitement of the chase and never noticed that the sixteen aerodromones had been left far behind.

The Princess was hardly a hundred yards behind the Eagle when she began to rise slowly. The distance was diminished to fifty, twenty-five yards, when something happened that opened the eyes of the pursuer.

Napoleon made a dip, enforced by the power of the wings, so quickly that the Princess had sped onward several miles before they could check its flight. Rositta looked back and saw the great Eagle shoot forward, with its wings touching the smooth water now and again, thus seeming to give twice as much speed. The student was willing to learn and imitated Napoleon's action, getting on his trail just as he passed beneath him.

They quickly passed from the horizon of the sixteen other aerodromones. Napoleon was again far in advance when he began to ascend rapidly. As he rose, he saw with satisfaction the faint blue line of the American coast.

The Princess was pressing him closely, rising as he rose. The Eagle slowed down and let them come nearer, then he turned about and faced them. They were rising, each trying to gain in elevation. Rositta cried to Santos: "Why can't we rise faster?"

"There are three of us and only one of Napoleon."

"Did you hear that, Sulamov?" sharply said Rositta. He bowed submissively.

"Your ancestors were always ready to die for their sovereign; are you?"

"I am!"

"Thank you!" She smiled at the Russian and pointing to the side door of the aerodromone, continued: "This way, my boy, we are too heavy."

Sulamov kissed her hand and opened the door calmly. With a last ardent look, he jumped.

The Princess leaped upward, gaining rapidly on the Eagle. Rositta urged Santos and watched Napoleon, who was following every move of the attacking Princess closely.

He could have dipped again and run away, but that was not his game.

They almost touched, and the Princess Rositta shouted through the speaking tube: "Give up, Mr. Peace President; you have no chance!"

Indeed, it seemed so; the larger bird made a leap toward the Eagle that was below her, but a twist of the steering wheel saved him. Napoleon was watching the east anxiously, and Rositta's eyes were focused on Napoleon. She felt sure that he was helplessly prolonging the surrender.

This dangerous play went on until Napoleon could see the widely extended fleet of aerodromones with his naked eye. He dipped downward, and stopped in the air, about two hundred feet above the surface of Pamlico Sound. There the Eagle awaited the Princess. As she made a desperate rush for him, he escaped again, almost by a miracle, then turned and darted after the Princess madly, changing from the pursued into the pursuer. They rose upward together and Napoleon waved a smiling salute to the princess.

"I Sleep Soundly" Feel Like New"

ALL WHO LACK VIGOR, THOSE WHO ARE DISPIRITED AND WORN OUT SHOULD READ THIS CAREFULLY

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Stoney Lake Regatta

The steamer Stoney Lake will run special trips to Stoney Lake on Civic Holiday to enable people to attend the annual Regatta.

Handsome Wedding Stationery.

Up-to-date Wedding Invitations, Announcements, Calling Cards, At Home Cards, Business Cards, Etc. Our workmanship and stock is par excellence. Times Job Rooms.

Milkmen's Excursion.

The milkmen of Peterborough held another excursion down the river on Saturday. At the wharf a by-stander remarked "The milkmen certainly seem to take to water," but the by-stander's middle name is "Kidder."

Former Local Collector Moves.

Referring to a former local Collector of Customs, who for some years has been manager of a big gas plant at Brazil, Ind., the Brazil Daily News says: "Rufus Stevenson left this morning for Alberta, Can., where he expects to locate. His family will join him in a few weeks."

Factory Employe Hurt.

Ernie Young, of Weller street, an employe of the Wm. English Canoe Co., sustained serious injuries while assisting in carrying a canoe down a flight of stairs Saturday morning. He fell off a high platform. He was hurried to Nicholls Hospital. It is feared his skull is fractured.

A Moulder in Trouble.

A local moulder spent Sunday in the Hotel de Thompson. It seems that on Friday night the moulder was ordered from a street corner by P. C. Sills. He vowed vengeance. When Sills was arresting a young woman Saturday night, he interfered and was pinched.

A Late Caller.

A few days ago a family living in the North Ward went to their cottage at Stoney Lake, leaving a servant girl in charge of the house. At one o'clock in the morning, a passerby heard a noise in the house. He thought that possibly the water taps had been left open after our recent water famine and investigated. A well known local young man was found in the house, as the servant had possession of the keys, a charge of burglary was not laid.

Another Find of Relics.

Adverting a number of articles which, last week, appeared in the Times regarding a valuable, from an archaeological standpoint, of Indian relics, found at White Lake by Police Magistrate Dumble, it might be added that Mr. Willoughby, of Saskatoon, a grandson of Rev. Mr. Willoughby, formerly of Peterborough, found a large quantity of Indian pottery, stone knives and bone needles in the same vicinity.

The Assailant Escaped.

Lindsay, Aug. 9.—Chief Chilton received information to-day from Provincial Detective Brodie, who is accompanying the Sells-Floto circus through Canada, that the man who struck McLaughlin (a circus man) on Wednesday night, Aug. 6th, when the circus was in Lindsay, has disappeared, making good his escape from the town and taking no chances of travelling with the company to Belleville.

To-day's Program.

The program for to-day includes a morning and afternoon baseball game at Riverside Park between the Petes and Guelph, and as both teams are playing good ball, the fans will be treated to two fine contests. For the members of the 57th Regiment the ranges will be open in the morning. At Stoney Lake the annual regatta will be held, commencing at one o'clock. The C.O.F. are running an excursion down the river. The S.O.E. are also holding an excursion to Stoney Lake.

Bowling Tournament To-day.

The Dominion Lawn Bowling Tournament opens in Toronto to-day. The following members of the local Bowling Club leave this morning to take part in the events: Rink No. 1—R. M. Waddell, (skip), R. J. Soden, D. H. Moore, D. H. Kerneghan. Rink No. 2—J. E. A. Fitzgerald, (skip), J. W. Renwick, —Voaden, and John Maynard. These are some of Peterborough's best bowlers, and we hope to see them return with some good prizes. Mr. Waddell is one of the umpires chosen by the association.

Of Interest to Farmers.

The Times is in receipt of a communication from Mr. E. S. Hopkins, B.S.A., representative for the county, regarding the annual meeting of the Menie District Ayrshire Breeders' Club, to be held at Menie, on Wednesday the 20th. A judging class will be conducted by Prof. Barton, Professor of animal husbandry at Macdonald College, Quebec. Mr. G. C. Publow, Chief Instructor for Eastern Ontario will give an address. A lady speaker will also be present and deliver an address on Woman's Institute work.

Hen Stops Automobile.

On Saturday morning, a big white Brahma hen stood in the centre of Water street, just east of the National Hotel. An auto was coming north and neared this member of Canada's most productive agricultural product (after wheat). A Times reporter yelled "Toot your horn, don't you see that chicken?" The driver replied "—— a hen anyway," and he blew a blast. The hen started in a straight line towards the North Pole and kept right in the centre of the road. The joy rider tooted and tooted, and tooted some more, but the hen didn't give a hoot whether it was chased or not. At the Bank of Commerce the auto driver stopped his rig to save the hen.

Former Local Girl Entertains.

Brazil, Ind., Daily News: The dance given last evening by Miss Eris Stevenson at her home on North Walnut street, in compliment to her guest, Miss Catherine Smith of DeKalb, Ill., was one of the most enjoyable social affairs of the week, and the evening was devoted to having a general good time. About 14 couples were present and the young ladies were attired in middy blouse suits. The lawn and verandah were beautifully decorated in garden flowers and Japanese lanterns, and the interior of the home was embellished in cut flowers. The parlors were arranged for the dancing and music throughout the evening was furnished by Miss Nelle Yocom. At the intermission a luncheon was served.

SINGLE FARE TO HAMILTON.

In connection with the Hamilton Centennial Industrial Exhibition and Old Home Week, the Grand Trunk Railway System will sell round trip tickets at single fare, plus twenty-five cents, to Hamilton, Ont., from stations, Kingston, Renfrew and west in Canada, good going Saturday, August 9th, to Tuesday, August 12th, and at single fare from stations in Canada where the lowest one-way first class fare to Hamilton does not exceed $2.50 (minimum charge 25c.) good going Monday, August 11th, to Saturday, August 16th. All tickets will be valid for return until Wednesday, August 20th, 1913.

Blacklister Jailed.

At Saturday's police court, Thomas Tierney, a blacklister, was charged with having been under the influence of liquor. He pleaded not guilty. He was arrested by P. C. Tucker. Tierney's face looked as though he had passed through a threshing machine. He denied having had any liquor. The Magistrate asked "Did the drain in which you were found rise up and hit you?" P. C. Tucker said he found Tierney lying near the Campbell Milling Co. plant. He had to bring Tierney to the station in a rig. He smelled liquor off Tierney. Tierney said he was in a Hunter street hotel, but got nothing to drink. P. C. Brown said Tierney was much under influence of liquor when he arrived at the station. Tierney was too much under liquor when arrested to make any statement. He smelled liquor on Tierney. The chief said Tierney's family had asked to have him sent to jail. He went up for 30 days in default of a $10 fine.

WEDDING BELLS.

Jamieson—Roy.

A quietly celebrated wedding was solemnized at St. John's church on Saturday morning, by Rev. Robert Gay, of St. Michael's church, Toronto, when Miss Gladys Marion Roy, daughter of the late R. M. Roy, became the charming bride of Mr. Melville Jamieson, of St. Thomas, formerly of Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson left for a short honeymoon, after which they will take up residence in St. Thomas.

ACTRESS AND NAVVY

Kiss the Reward for Preventing a Street Accident

Outside a jeweller's shop in Paris stood a splendid motor-car. Towards this, after purchasing a bangle, tripped a dainty little actress, exquisitely dressed. But the pavement was being repaired, and a loose stone caused the lady to stumble. She would have fallen on to a heap of débris had it not been for a burly laborer, who threw his arm round her waist.

With a grateful smile she turned to the man and thanked him sweetly. Then she offered him a piece of silver, but he shook his head. The lady blushed, and there was a moment's hesitation. Then, raising her veil, she offered her delicate cheek to the son of toil. "Kiss me, sir."

And the big navvy, blushing like a schoolgirl, but with the manner of an old-time gallant, imprinted a kiss on the fair one's cheek. The navvy turned to his companions, and said: "What an angel! I won't wash my face for a month!"

Tempting the Postman

At Edinburgh a young man pleaded guilty to having endeavored to induce a postman to detain or delay letters, and to having faudulently obtained from the postman two letters addressed to a Leith bookmaker, stamped with official postmarks indicating that they had been posted at Dunfermline before 10.45 a. m. on a certain date, and to having enclosed in one of the envelopes a coupon offering to make a bet on the result of football matches played on that date, which matches had, as he already knew, been played earlier in the day. He was put on probation for six months.

Much Gold Stolen

Despite the precautions which are taken to prevent theft, it is said that gold to the value of $5,000,000 is annually stolen from the mines on the Rand, South Africa. This thievery is done systematically and although a corps of detectives are employed for the purpose of detecting theft, there have been no convictions for a long time. There is a woman who has grown very wealthy in the business of buying gold, and although the officials are sure of her nefarious calling, all efforts to trap her have been unsuccessful. Special laws have been passed to meet the requirements of the gold mines, but even that has been ineffectual.

Do You Realize What This Means to You, Mr. Business Man?

MADE THE JOKE COMPLETE

Mrs. Brown Took Advice That Was Good, and Also Had a Little Fun Out of Incident.

Mrs. Brown, telephoning to a friend one morning, happened to say:

"I have such a bad sore throat. I'm afraid I cannot go to that dinner party tomorrow night."

Just then something went wrong with the connection, and she heard a strange voice break in:

"Gargle your throat with baking soda, and I think you will be able to go to your dinner."

"Who is this speaking?" asked Mrs. Brown, startled.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered the voice.

Mrs. Brown was greatly amused, and decided to try the remedy. Her throat improved and she went to the party. During dinner she chanced to overhear the gentleman opposite say to his neighbor:

"I had an amusing experience the other morning. I was telephoning and the wires became crossed. I suddenly heard a lady's voice say: 'I have such a bad throat I sha'n't be able to go to that dinner party.' Just for fun, I broke in and said, 'Gargle your throat with baking soda and you'll be all right.' The lady's voice in reply sounded rather surprised. I wonder if she took my advice."

Mrs. Brown was greatly tempted to reveal her identity as the heroine of the episode, but she decided that she could get more fun another way. She made careful inquiry of her hostess as to the gentleman's full name and address, and next morning called him up. When he answered she said:

"I just wanted you to know that I took your advice, gargled my throat with baking soda, and was able to go to the dinner."

"Who—who is this speaking?" came an astonished voice from the other end of the wire.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered Mrs. Brown, laughing, and rang off.

Of Course He Knew.

"Willie, can you tell me what a vegetarian is?"

"A vegetarian is a person who lives on vegetables," replied Willie.

"That is correct. Now, I wonder who can tell what an octogenarian is?"

"I know," replied Eddie.

"Well, what is an octogenarian?"

"A noctogenarian is a person that knocks the other genarians."—Chicago Record-Herald.

FATAL WOUND WAS HIDDEN IN MOUTH

Newark, N. J., Aug. 8.—An autopsy today disclosed the hidden wound that caused the death of Mrs. Emma Corduan, found dead last night under the bed in her home. The coroner's physician said a sharp, round instrument had been driven through the roof of the woman's mouth into her brain.

The police thought the wound could have been inflicted with a rat-tail file, and are looking for William Corduan, the murdered woman's husband, who is a filemaker.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S POLICY IS TARGET FOR LONDON PRESS

Chronicle Doubts if U. S. Would Care to Face Task of Subduing Mexico

London, Aug. 12. — The Daily Chronicle in an editorial to-day says it considers President's Wilson's demand that President Huerta renounce the Presidency of Mexico a curious experiment in foreign diplomacy and one scarcely likely to be carried through easily.

"A proud race like the Mexicans, and the President with a fairly strong backing," the editorial says, "are very unlikely to surrender, and we doubt if the United States would really care to face the stupendous task of reducing Mexico by force of arms. Mr. Wilson's demands for a general election almost border on the ludicrous because there is no such thing in Mexico as an election by ballot as the ballot is understood in great democratic countries."

Arguing tnat it is impossible for Mexico to obtain money until the United States Government recognizes Huerta and that without money the country is bound to drift into anarchy! The Chronicle considers that the best and safest course would be to recognize Huerta and give his Government an opportunity to redeem his pledges of progress. If he failed then it adds, the time will have come for stronger action.

DR. HASTINGS SAYS LICENSES SHALL BE PROMINENTLY SHOWN

Old Wooden Bedsted Must be Replaced by Metal Ones for Each Boarder--Shower Bath for Every Floor--Must be Cleanliness Everywhere

Toronto, Aug. 12.—Changes of an exceedingly drastic nature will have to be made in the manner of conducting lodging houses in Toronto when the rules and regulations governing such establishments, issued by Dr. Hastings, M.H.O., this morning, have been given endorsation by the local Board of Health.

In the future no building in the city shall be used as a lodging house until a license has been procured from the Health Department. Also the license must be conspicuously displayed in the office of the place.

The old method of jamming humanity into every foot of space available will have to be abandoned, as six hundred cubic feet of air space will have to be provided for each bed, the number of lodgers to be determined under the Public Health Act. Also, the placing of one bunk above another will be a violation of the regulations.

No Comforters Permitted.

Nothing but iron or metal bedsteads shall be used, and there must be one of these provided for every sleeper, which will effectually do away with the habit of lodging house frequenters of using the floor as a resting place in the event of no beds being available. No comforters shall be permitted, blankets taking their places. Clean sheets and pillow slips are compulsory.

In many lodging houses it is customary to have a cubicle for each bed. In the future this is not compulsory, but where it is in vogue the partitions of the cubicle must not be run to the ceiling, two feet of intervening space being required.

On every floor there will have to be a shower bath with both hot and cold water, one wash basin off every twenty-five beds, and a water closet for that number. The floors themselves will have to be scrubbed thoroughly twice each week, while all walls, beds and furniture will have to be cleansed once at least every fortnight.

No dry sweeping will be permitted, as the floors will have to be sprinkled with a solution of sulphuric acid or some other disinfectant before the sweeping operations commence. Sweeping will have to take place every day.

Woodrow Wilson is living up to his reputation when he opposes and exposes the selfish interests that would for gain, bring about a military invasion of Mexico.

ANOTHER OBJECTION TO TRENT CANAL WORK

Yesterday a gentleman prominently interested in the steamboat business on the Trent Canal waters, had a talk with The Times concerning condition in that popular waterway. He fully agreed with a prominently expressed opinion of The Times that grave errors have been perpetrated in the construction of the Canal. What stuck in our informant's crop (if a slang expression may be pardoned) is the construction work near Healey's Falls. Here, our informant tells us round a curve of the river below Trent Bridge, is an island. The engineers in charge of the canal, instead of following the regular six foot channel of the river in a straight line, to get their dredged nine foot channel, have gone out of their way, and the more direct way of the canal, to carry the proposed channel round an island, thus making the course of the canal a mile and a half longer. Our informant claims that not only does this add a mile and a half to the canal but makes a rigid curve difficult for a string of barges to negotiate.

TURKISH ARMY MUST LEAVE ADRIANOPLE

Powers Have So Determined, Is the Statement of Sir Edward Grey.

London, Aug. 12.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Sir Edward Grey, secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, replying to questions, announced that the great powers had agreed on a policy regarding the Aegean Islands and autonomy for Albania. He said the powers expected Turkey to heed their wishes in the matter of Adrianople. He said that the powers had hinted to the Balkan States that there is nothing to prevent them demanding a cash indemnity from Turkey if the Porte disregarded the will of the powers.

Grey added a warning to the Balkan States, admonishing them that they must not take for granted that the failure of the powers so far to interfere in the Balkans, means that no one will intervene if there be sufficient provocation.

RESENTS COMMENT ON RECOGNITION OF HUERTA

London, Aug. 12.—In answer to the comment of American papers concerning Great Britain's recognition of President Huerta of Mexico, the British Government has issued a statement to the effect that the comment is based on a misconception, and that the recognition was of a Provisional President, pending an election, and was done on the advice of the British Minister to Mexico as being likely to assist in the restoration of order, an important consideration, in view of the large British interests in Mexico.

The statement also pointed out that the French and German Governments had recognized President Huerta after a reception given by him at which the American Ambassador had made a congratulatory speech on behalf of the foreign diplomats.

NEW CATHEDRAL FOR PETERBORO'

Local Roman Catholics Are Reported About to Erect A Larger Place of Worship

The Times is informed that arrangements are in progress for the construction of a new Roman Catholic Cathedral in Peterborough, to replace the present building known as St. Peter's. We are not in a position to give details as our information is not previously given for publication by the Church authorities. The information leaked out, howver, and was given to The Times as substantially correct.

For sometime it has been an open secret that the present Cathedral is not sufficiently large to supply the needs of the congregation, and, we understand, it was the intention of His Lordship, late Bishop O'Connor, to construct a very much larger building than the present church.

SENSELESS WHEN FOUND ON STEPS

Mr. Slack, Commercial Traveller, Died in Hospital—Was Soon to be Married.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—Coroner W. J. McCallum opened an inquest to investigate the death of Mr. Crawford G. Slack, 149 Grenadier road, who died in the Western Hospital after he had been picked up in an unconscious condition from a door step at 11 Marmaduke street. The post-mortem examination revealed a fractured skull, which caused death. The inquest was adjourned until the 18th.

For several years Mr. Slack who was well known in the city as a commercial traveller, has been subject to fainting spells, and it is thought that he fell from a door step in Parkdale.

Mr. Slack was the only son of Mrs. Crawford Slack, of St. Mary's. The young man was shortly to be married to a Toronto lady. Recently he was employed by the Canadian Tungstolier Company, and for some years travelled for S. F. McKinnon & Company, and for Boyd, Brummell & Company.

WESTERN FARMERS ARE TURNING A GREAT MEASURE OF SUCCESS

Decided Movement, Particularly in Northern Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in That Direction--Uncertain Crops of Last Couple of Years Having Their Effect

Prince Albert, Sask., Aug. 12.—Agricultural experts, railway magnates, newspaper editors and politicians have for years been preaching at the homesteaders of the west that they must go in for mixed farming, if the present difficulties that beset the western grain grower, are ever to be cured. It has been pointed out that grain growing is very much of a gamble, that it is exhausting on the soil and that as long as wheat is almost exclusively grown there is bound to be an annual car shortage and grain blockade.

There are signs that at last the western farmer is beginning to realize that there is good common sense back of all this preaching by the orists and there is a decided movement particularly in Northern Manitoba, Northern Saskatchewan and Alberta, towards mixed farming. The uncertain crops of the past couple of years has had its effect in conv'ncing the farmer that it is foolish to depend solely upon one crop, which may be wiped out by a three-minute hail storm, be caught by the frost, or ruined by rust or dried up by withering hot winds. They are learning by sad experience, that it is better to raise cattle, hogs and sheep and to go in for diversified farming, which is not as seriously affected by crop failures and which is better paying in the end.

Grouse are reported to be scarce in England, but sportsmen will never be at a loss so long as they can count upon a bold pheasantry, their country's pride.

EVELYN THAW IN BANKRUPTCY

Files Voluntary Petition That Admits Liabilities of $8054

New York, Aug. 12. —Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who arrived from London on the Olympic last Wednesday to be greeted at the pier with a summons calling upon her to show cause why she was not in contempt of court for leaving America during the progress of a suit brought against war by the Gorham Company filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy this afternoon.

Mrs. Thaw, who is to make her American debut as an acrobatic tango dancer at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre and roof garden on Monday, had time her bankruptcy petition, filing it as soon after her arrival as possible so that her first week's salary for tangoing would not get into the schedule of assets.

According to the petition filed today she has liabilities of $8054, with assets totalling $250, consisting chiefly of wearing apparel, which, of course, is exempt. There are 12 creditors.

She gave her profession in the petition as that of actress, and her address as 130 West 45th street, but it was learned to-night she is living at the Hotel Brevoort

WEST CITY RESTRICTED TO RESIDENTAL BUILDINGS BY COUNCIL'S RULING

Bylaw to This Effect Resurrected Last Night and Secures a Two-Third Majority Vote---The Original Opposition Stood to Their Ground

At a special session of the City Fathers last night, Ald. Duffus resurrected the by-law to restrict to residential buildings only the area lying between Weller and King streets, and Charlotte street and the western boundary, including Victoria Heights, defeated at Council's last meeting by lack of a two-third majority vote in its favor. While the by-law last Tuesday night, secured a straight majority vote, it fell short by one ballot of the two-third majority needed to secure its adoption.

Last night, however, the measure gained its two-third majority on the following division:

AYES—Ald. Buller, Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus, Langford, Anderson, McIntyre and the Mayor.

NAYS—Ald. Green, Johnston and Duncan.

Ald. Buller, who was absent at last meeting when the by-law was first fathered by Ald. Gordon, voted for the measure, and his ballot gave the majority required by law in such instances.

The original opposition was in evidence in Aldermen Green, Johnston and Duncan.

Ald Green did not like the turn things had taken; it savored too much, he said, of "getting together." The resurrection of the measure he characterized as ill-becoming, not authoritative, and which even if passed would not prove good law—certainly not justice. He would venture to say that 30 per cent of the citizens who signed for the by-law were not in the best position to do so. That is to say they had mortgages on their property and the rights of the mortgagees had been waved. He still had the courage of his convictions and strongly opposed the measure.

Ald Gordon maintained his original views on the question and contended that, while there had been some "getting together," still everything was quite regular. "At last Tuesday's meeting, he said, "Ald. Buller was not present, and to-night Ald. Langford did not put in an appearance until the eleventh hour."

Ald. Buller contended that it had been practically agreed that Mr. Braund would dispose of his property at the corner of Charlotte and St. Joseph streets, were this by-law carried, and interested citizens had subscribed the purchase price for said property in order to relieve the situation. This agreement still stands good and as the great majority of citizens within the given area had signed for the by-law, he thought that district should be restricted to residential buildings only.

Ald. Langford could not find sufficient opposition to the measure to warrant his voting against it, and he would, he said, support the by-law in response to the almost unanimous affirmative petition.

SPECIAL SESSION.

The City Fathers met in special session last night, Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also present Aldermen Duncan, McIntyre, Gordon, Gillespie, Johnston, G. Walter Green, Buller, Duffus and Anderson.

The plans and specifications for the Reid incinerator were discussed in detail, and the Property Committee will meet Mr. Reid this morning to close the deal for constructing this widely recommended Reid Incinerator

A few communications were referred to their respective committees.

Mr. Shearer was conceded the right to deposit his garbage, for collection, in the lane over which, with others, he has, as property owner, the right-of-way.

TO OPEN NEW STREET.

A by-law to authorize the purchase of sufficient lands to open a 66 foot street from Bolivar to Patterson streets, was adopted unanimously.

CRUSHED STONE.

A by-law to authorize an agreement with Messrs. Mitchell and Stothart for crushed stone passed its first and second readings. The by-law provides that the corporation shall have the privilege of crushing, free of charge, on Mitchell's and Stothart's quarry in Smith, the stone thereon, and Mitchell and Stothart will deliver same at the following rates: To any part of the city as far as Smith street at 75c per cubic yard; below Smith as far as Sherbrooke street at $1.00 a yard; below Sherbrooke to Townsend streets at $1.25 a yard; and in East City at $1.00 and $1.25 a cubic yard, according to distance. No charge to be made for the value of the stone, only for cartage as above outlined.

The agreement hinging upon this by-law will be further discussed by the Board of Works before the by-law's final reading.

THE DATE IS NOW SET FOR COMING ELECTION EAST YORK

Nominations September First and Voting to Take Place One Week Later

Toronto, Aug. 12.—The official announcement was made this morning at the Parliament buildings that Mr. Alex. McCowan, M.P.P., for East York, had resigned his seat in the Legislature, and that his appointment as Sheriff of York County to succeed the late F. T. Daville, would follow in the near future.

The bye-election consequent upon Mr. McCowan's resignation will be held on Sept. 8th, the nominations to be on Sept. 1st. Mr. Joseph Edward Francis, of Thornhill will be returning officer.

Possibilities.

In the list of local Conservative standard-bearers, Mr. George S. Henry, a former reeve of York Township and warden of the county, is considered a probable nominee of the next East York Conservative convention. He is a past president of the Conservative Association of the township and is a prominent member of the Provincial and County Associations and Commissions dealing with good roads. Other aspirants are Mr. W. H. Pugsley, of Richmond Hill, Reeve of the township, who has already declared his willingness to stand in the event of a bye-election. Mr. Alex Baird, of Scarboro township and Mr. Robert Miller, of Stouffville.

SENATOR GEO. A. COX IS NOT PLEASED WITH HIS ASSESMENT

Houses Yield Seventeen Per Cent But He Thinks Tax Bill Too High

Toronto, Aug. 12.—A representative of Senator George A. Cox appeared before the court of revision at its session in the City Hall this morning to ask that instead of assessing the Senator as the owner of four small places in the city to substitute the name of Mrs. Amy G. Cox, his wife, as the property has since been transferred to her. The court promised to make the necessary substitution providing the deeds are produced some time during the day. The lots in question are situated at 73, 89, 93 and 97 Bleecker street, and are occupied respectively by Fortine Ottom a chauffeur; Thomas Woodhouse, a gardener; Parugine I. Grace, a chauffeur and J. Frederick Bayes, a gardener.

Seventeen Per Cent.

"You haven't the slightest idea of what you are talking about," the court urbanely informed Mr. J. B. Tremaine, of 32 Davenport road, who upon being refused a reduction in the rate of assessment of his two houses at 424 and 426 Sumack street, accused the officials of the Assessment Department in heated tones of "boosting land values on credit sales instead of on a cash basis. "The fact that the appellant purchased his two houses three years ago at the exceedingly low figure of $900 each and without making any extensive improvements, is now realising 17 per cent. on his investment in house rent led the court to throw out the appeal.

A Proper Owner.

The court readily agreed to cancel the assessment on the income of Margaret A. Lee, who has purchased a lot at 3 Waitland Place, and has become a property owner. The appellant lives herself at 72 Galley avenue.

The assessing of property at 120 Rose avenue at the rate of $45 a foot is entirely uncalled for in the opinion of Miss Elizabeth Dodds, of 73 Triller avenue, who is the owner. The court apparently agreed with her to reduce it by $10 per foot. The house on the property is very old, so $100 was knocked from its assessed value.

FARMS FOR SALE

Advertisements under above heads, 20 words and under, one insertion, 15c.; 3 insertions, 25c.; 6 insertions, 40c.

THE UNDERSIGNED OFFERS FOR SALE one of the best farms in the County of Peterborough, being west half of lot No. 7, and northeast quarter lot No. 6, in the second concession of the Township of Dummer, containing 150 acres, more or less. There is on the property two good dwelling houses, first class outbuildings and four never-failing wells. The soil is clay loam, and the farm is in a fine state of cultivation, with the exception of about 20 acres of bush. There is a good sized orchard and several fruits on the farm. This is a splendid opportunity for any one desiring a first class farm in a splendid locality, as it is only 2 miles from Warsaw.

For further particulars apply to

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 25c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

EDUCATION IN JAPAN

Children Are Given Good General Training, With Some Specializing

The annual report of the minister of state for education in Japan is in many respects an inspiration and an example to all who are engaged in educational work. It is not a mere record of good work done, although in this respect it is remarkable when we remember the short time that Japan has been in contact with western civilization; it is full of suggestive ideas, and those in supreme command insist on the necessity for all the work being of an educational nature, which would develop the powers of the students. On the one hand, special means are taken for the nurture of efficient teachers, so that the teaching staff of every school should be made complete and perfect, while, on the other, honor and encouragement are given to all persons of merit who are connected with education. At the same time profound attention is paid to the moral education of pupils and students. While a good general education is given as a foundation, special attention is paid to every department of technical education.

THE BITTER PILL

"There is more willing helpfulness in humanity than many ever find out," declared Sir Henry Irving. "In most of the troubles of life we can find the clever brain and the good heart to freely assist us if we only use sense. But then there comes, perhaps, a restraining force. It is a bitter pill for some people to swallow—the confession that one fails oneself to see the way, or has not the strength to pursue it. Everyone has occasionally to make such a confession—if one is bent on doing the best. It is only confessing one is human, after all, and paying the other person the compliment of believing he is human enough to extend the hand. There is more brotherhood in the world than many imagine."

FAMOUS STAMP COLLECTIONS

Lord Crawford's Was One of the Most Extensive in the World

Stamp dealers in all parts of the world are discussing the sale to a London dealer of the bulk of Lord Crawford's great collection. What he sold was probably one of the finest collections of foreign stamps in the world, and what he retains includes the finest collection of United States stamps, and a collection of British stamps second to that of King George alone. Before the sale Lord Crawford's collection was the finest that the expenditure of unlimited money and the research of half a lifetime ever accumulated, with the possible exception of the collection of Count Philipps la Renetiere, said to be worth about $5,000,000. Lord Crawford's collection of United States stamps, however, was unrivaled, and no matter what amount a collector might be willing to spend in the effort, he could not duplicate the collection because of the peculiar circumstances in which some of the unique specimens were obtained.

PIGEON PETS NEXT TO DOGS

The Racing Pigeon Will Return Home Even After Years a Prisoner Elsewhere

The pigeon is probably the most plastic of all domestic pets, with the exception perhaps of the dog. There are far more varieties of the bird than of the dog, and it was the favorite medium of many of Darwin's investigations, because a new generation was born every year, and in ten years one might make a marked alteration in any desired direction, while with the dog only two or three developed generations could be produced in the same time. England and Scotland are the great homes of the pigeon breeders, though nearly every European and Asiatic country has distinctive local types. In England, however, the varieties from most parts of the world have been brought and improved by the art and patience of the British breeder. What country first developed the messenger pigeon is a matter of dispute. The probability is that before the dawn of history the peoples of Asia had domesticated the wild pigeon and had begun the development of its homing instinct.

Home of the Homer

In modern times Belgium has been the great home of the pigeon that is erroneously called a Carrier, and is properly called a Homer or a racing or messenger pigeon. The racing of pigeons is the national sport of Belgium, and the man who has not a loft of these birds is as much an oddity as the Canadian who owns neither a cat nor a canary. In favorable circumstances these racing pigeons will fly 600 miles in a day. As great a single flight between daylight and dusk as 750 miles has been recorded, but it would be assisted in all probability by a gale blowing the bird along. Pigeons have been known to return home a distance of 2,000 miles, but would be some weeks on the journey. All pigeons have some of the homing instinct, but in none is it developed as in the racing pigeon, which will return to its own home after having been kept a prisoner for years, even though the distance is hundreds of miles.

Flying All Day

Another very remarkable member of the pigeon tribe is the Tippler, a bird much smaller than the Homer, and especially trained for its ability to keep flying about its own loft for many hours, and at a great height. In England the Tipplers have been turned out at dawn and have flown through the longest day of the year, not dropping to the roof until the signal was given after night had fallen. On several occasions Tipplers have remained flying for eighteen hours. Somewhat akin to the Tippler in its delight of high flying is the Tumbler or Roller, the latter being a superior variety of the former. This bird is distinguished for its ability to throw backward somersaults in the air. A good Roller spins backward in a dozen or a score of rapid somersaults so swiftly and neatly executed that the keenest eye cannot count them. Very frequently these birds roll to the ground and dash themselves to pieces. Another member of the Tumbler tribe is the Parlor Tumbler, which has such an uncontrollable impulse to tumble that it cannot rise from the ground at all, though its wings are as able as those of any other bird, but merely seems to throw handsprings a few inches above the floor.

Popular Fancy Pigeons

Pouteres, Jacobins, Fantails, Owls, Turbits, Orintal Frills, Magpies, Carriers, Nuns and Dragoons are some of the most highly specialized of the pigeon tribe. For a single Magpie the sum of $500 was paid by an English breeder. On several occasions $1,000 has been paid for single Carriers, and once at least for an Owl. Nor are high prices to be wondered at, since in England a good pigeon can probably win $100 worth of prizes in a year. Racing pigeons can often win hundreds of pounds for their owners in a single race, for the chief contests are the great betting events. It is obvious that if a pigeon can earn $1,000 for a man he makes an excellent bargain when he buys it for $500. There is also to be considered the value of its progeny. Tremendous sums are wasted in the fancy in the course of the year, but competencies are amassed too by the shrewd breeders who have mastered some of the mysteries of the art, and can continue year after year to produce birds closely approximating to the standard of excellence.

COLD TEA IS BEST

Many of the Best Shots Swear by That Beverage

Dr. Claye Shaw has been telling us that many men shoot much better after a luncheon, which includes a certain amount of alcohol, than they did before. I very much doubt whether the experiences of our shooting readers will confirm this theory. Personally I have always noticed that men shot best during the first half of a day's sport, either with drawn birds or in walking them up. It stands to reason that a man's hands and nerves are steadier when he is fresh and untired, than they are after a spell of tiring work. Everyone appreciates the recuperative effects of a light hot lunch by the covert side, but the man who adds whiskey or other spirits to his bill of fare handicaps himself for the remainder of the day. Many good shots of my acquaintance swear by cold tea as their only drink when shooting.—London Sporting and Dramatic News.

Making the Doctor Hurry

A lodger's concern for the welfare of his landlord gave rise to an unusual charge of assault at Hamilton, Scotland. Thomas Devine, a miner, pleaded guilty to striking Dr. [illegible] Paterson. Having gone to fetch the doctor for his landlord, Devine expressed dissatisfaction with the pace at which the doctor was walking, and, apparently by way of emphasizing the necessity for more alacrity, Devine struck the medical man a blow on the left shoulder with his fist. He was fined [illegible].

PILING UP THE BURDEN

Mr. Lloyd George is reponsible lor the statement that twenty-six years ago the combined expenditure upon all the navies of the world was less by fifty million dollars than the present year's expenditure upon the British navy alone. If so high an authority had not told us that we would be inclined not to believe it. And the startling thing about this increase of burden is that its rate of growth has been most marked in quite recent years. The inference is forced on us, therefore that if nothing radical is done to check the progress of this process of increase, the next twenty-six years will repeat the record of the last twenty-six. It is true that Britain's trade report for the past year was most encouraging, showing handsome increases in the business done, but the added burden of taxation prevents the people getting any benefit or relief from such increase. The waste of armament may not be its greatest evil, but more and more it is becoming evident that such waste is nothing short of a hideous crime against society.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

If the Unit?d States keeps up its present attitude toward the situation in Mexico, it will eventually be landed in one of the dirtiest and most disagreeable wars which has ever occurred. That is a consummation into which loud mouthed pacificators in talk, but in talk alone almost invariably introduce their countries.

The position of the United States cannot be otherwise than encouraging to the insurgents, and opponents to the Huerta government. This great country, naturally charged with the guardianship of Mexico and of South America and specifically endowed with the right to prevent any one else from interfering through the Monroe doctrine, appears to be taking a course likely to render the turmoil in Mexico everlasting.

It is true that the elimination of Madero was not a very pleasant business and to a certain extent, put a blot on the character of the present administration. Nevertheless, the government Mexico now enjoys, or if it does not enjoy it, at least tolerates, makes for the maintenance of order, the resumption of activity and the relief of the people from the horrors of civil wgr and brigandage. In these circumstances it is pure foolishness not to support that government as the acting authority in the country, and it is rather worse than foolish on sentimental grounds to give encouragement to intolerable civil conditions in a country which is geographically so intimatelt connected as Mexico with the United States.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually by Cararrh

Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. Its rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

"I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months price $1.00; small size 50c; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

WARBLES ON CATTLE

May be Exterminated by Systematic Effort and Much Patience

One of the very harmful insect pests of live stock is the ox warble fly. The grubs in the backs of cattle are a source of irritation, and the punctures which they produce seriously reduce the value of infested hides for leather products. The flesh around the wound is sometimes so changed by the inflammation set up by the grubs that it is unfit for sale and must be discarded. This causes substantial loss, especially as the more valuable cuts are most frequently affected.

The adult ox warble fly is half an inch long, very hairy and dark in color. During the summer the female deposits eggs upon the heirs of cattle particularly on the legs just above the hoofs. The animal licks the hair where these eggs are placed, and the larvae hatched from them are carried by the tongue into the mouth. The young maggots pass into the gullet and penetrate its walls. From the gullet they migrate to the back, where they may be found under the hide during the late winter and early spring months. Small lumps or swellings on the backs of cattle indicate the position of the grubs. Each swelling is perforated by a small hole, through which the mature grub emerges from the warble cell in the spring and early summer. They then enter the pupa stage, in the ground or under rubbish. In from three to six weeks the adult fly escapes from the pupal case through a circular opening in one end.

Every farmer should make a thorough and systematic attempt to exterminate this pest. This may be accomplished by the destruction of all grubs during the early spring months. The grubs when ripe may be extracted by squeezing the warbles between the thumbs. All extracted grubs should be destroyed. This will reduce the number of adult flies, consequently fewer eggs will be laid to produce grubs the next season.

THEY LIKE FARM LIFE

Titled Farmer Not Disappointed With Canadian Venture

Two members of the English nobility who are interested in farming in Canada and like it are Lord Somers and Mr. Clement Leveson Gower. Lord Somers is the present representative of an ancient title, and for over a year has been on his farm near Toronto.

"Quite up to expectations," said Lord Somers, when interviewed while passing through Montreal. "I like the life in Canada very much, and my venture promises to be successful. It is all I hoped for."

Mr. Clement Leveson Gower is a relative of the Duke of Sutherland who has vast interests in British Columbia, and, like the Duke, is interested in the colonization and agricultural development there. Mr. Gower is a man of fine physique, and had a high reputation as a cricketer in the old country.

The Oldest Presbytery

Nearly a century and a quarter ago the Presbytery of Truro, N.S., was organized and stands in the honored position of being the most ancient in the Dominion of Canada. At the time of its formation, it consisted of five ministers and two elders. Owing to paucity of laborers it could do little to supply the spiritual necessities of the sparse population.

Here and there throughout the Maritime Provinces there were several families of Highlanders who had emigrated from Scotland who were not privileged to enjoy the ministrations of the Gospel. One of their own number, after the formation of the Truro Presbytery, the Rev. J. McGregor, D.D., was the great pioneer of the Presbyterian Church in Nova Scotia.

B. F. Ackerman, Peterboro, Ont., contemplates erecting a wholesale distributing warehouse for harness and horse clothing business, in Red Deer, Alta.

HAIR OF YAK TAILS

Brings Ten Dollars an Ounce as Commercial Commodity

Among the many animal products imported for a wide variety of purposes from foreign lands is white hair. It is of various sorts and has a wide range in value. White hair of the Syrian goat, known as Asiatic white hair, comes from Syria, Persia and Tibet. The body hair of the Syrian buck grows to sixteen inches in length, the beard to twelve inches; but in a lot of 15,000 or 20,000 pounds there might be found less than 25 pounds of 16-inch hair. All the lengths are utilized.

The long white hair of the Syrian goat is as fine as human hair, in place of which it is used for some special purposes, principally for the making of theatrical wigs and beards. To prepare it for these uses it is put through various washing processes and is combed to free it of all foreign substances and to straighten and smooth it. In this first finished state it is put up for market in little straight rolls or bundles. It is also sold in partly manufactured form, made up into curls and weaves of various shapes and sizes.

EXCITING BOAR HUNT

Lord Hardinge Proved Himself Adept With the Spear

In the course of a recent tour in India Lord Hardinge had an exciting experience at Lallgarh, to which place he had motored to take part in a boar hunt. The hunting party consisted of about half a dozen spears, and the beaters who entered the coverts drove into the open a fine herd of pigs amongst them a boar which, separating itself from the herd, gave a capital run to his Excellency, the Maharajah Captain Medlicott, and Thakur Gopi Singh. The boar proved full of fight and as the huntsmen closed upon him he turned and charged straight at the Viceroy's horse. His Excellency took the boar cleverly on the point of his spear, getting well home in the shoulder. Twice more, however, the pig charged before he was finally despatched. A pig, 190 pounds in weight, Lord Hardinge's victim proved the biggest of the bag of ten.

Boy Hanged on a Trapeze

The Birmingham coroner investigated a case in which the thirteen-year old son of Mr. Leonard Albrecht was accidentally hanged on a trapeze on which he had been practising. The boy had been taught gymnastics at school, and in a loft at home had fitted up a trapeze. In some unexplained way he got his head fast in a loop formed by the rope, and was found hanging in the loft dead. A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Navigating With no Chronometer

The French sea captains who take their vessels across the Atlantic every spring to fish on the Newfoundland Banks navigate almost exactly as they did in the days of Columbus. Of the 280 French sailing vessels on the Banks last year 240 were fitted out in Normandy and Brittany. Their captains found their way across the trackless wastes of the ocean without difficulty. They take observations for latitude, but they have no chronometers and are unable to tell their longitude except by guesswork.

BIBLE HISTORY

A Lecturer Brought to Light Some Interesting Facts

At a lecture delivered by Herbert Bolton, the director of the Bristol museum, some very interesting facts in connection with Bible history were brought to light. He pointed out that the museum is rich in illustrations bearing on Bible history. He showed his hearers a set of carpenter's tools brought from the little village of Nazareth, probably similar to those in use at the time of Jesus. He mentioned that the Capper Pass collection of antiquities served to give a clear idea of what the Roman people were like in the Master's day. Specimens of the precious stones and gems which formed the foundation of the New Jerusalem, as recorded in the book of Revelation, were shown, also "tear bottles" and other ancient vessels from Corinth.

Passing to Old Testament history, mention was made of the examples of Assyrian sculpture, possessed by the museum, which were discovered at Nimrod, the ancient Calah, and including the figure of one of the most famous kings of Assyria, Ashur-Nasir-Pal.

Another interesting exhibit was a few Babylonian clay tablets inscribed with cuneiform writing, and among them was one bearing the name of a city (Erech) mentioned in Genesis x:10. Two Babylonian bricks bore the name of Nebuchadnezzar, and a head and bust of an official who acted as taskmaster to the Israelites; also the head of one of the Pharaohs, [illegible]

The museum collection included samples of Egyptian pottery, jewels, beads, etc., which illustrated the kind of treasures which the Israelitish people borrowed when they spoiled the Egyptians, while a priceless possession consisted of a vase, which was once the property of the Pharaoh of the Exodus, and formed part of an offering to one of the temples. However interesting Bible study may be, it can be made most fascinating and instructive when accompanied by illustrations of the times and people who actually lived in those far days. The Bristol citizens are to be congratulated on the [illegible]

BICYCLE.

Boston, Aug. 12.—The board of control of the National Cycling Association, the governing body in this country, has assigned to the Revere track the race which decides the middle distance championship of America. The final heat of the championship will be for 50 miles on the night of Aug. 23, and there will be four starters.

There are eight aspirants for the title of middle distance champion of America, and the two heats will each have four starters with two men to qualify for the final. At the present time there about a dozen pace followers but the N. C. A. limited the starters to the eight best men.

SWIMMING.

San Francisco, Aug. 12. — Duke Kahnamoku, the Hawaiian swimmer who holds the championship of the Pacific coast broke three world's records the 25, 50 and 75 yard in an exhibition at the Olympic club.

Kahnamoku lowered the 25 yards swim from 11.6 seconds held by Daniel S. to 11.3. He lowered the 50 yard from 23.6 held jointly by Wickham, Sullivan and Kuszagh to 23.4. In the 75 yard he broke his own world's record of 39.6 and fixed a new mark of 37.4. The new records are official.

BASEBALL.

Hans Wagner, the hero of all baseball heroes, has an interesting career. Wagner, the big German, was born in what is now Carnegie, Pa., on February 27, 1874. His father, who is still living, was a coal miner in those days, and he decided that John P. should help him in his work. So Honus was packed off to the mines to help dad every day. Hans was not lazy, but he didn't like the black darkness of the earth's interior, and many a warming he received for playing hookey from the bituminous secretion and scampering off a game of baseball with other kids in the neighborhood.

A correspondent recently approached the big fellow and asked him to tell how he came to break into baseball. Honus pondered a moment, and then spun the following yarn about his early experience :

'I broke into baseball by posing as my brother Al. We were playing ball around home. Al received an offer from Canton, Ohio, before he was offered a place with the Mansfield, Ohio Club, in the same league. The day he got the second offer he turned to me and told me to go to Mansfield. I got there early in the afternoon, and a man named Taylor recognized me. He had seen me play. The club was hard put for a third baseman, however, and Taylor decided to take a chance with me.

"It so happened that Mansfield played Canton that day. My brother was in the line-up of the Canton team, and the pitcher, "Toots" Barrett, was also from Carnegie, or Mansfield, as it was called in those days. They regarded me as pretty much of a kid, and when Canton got away to a good lead early in the game Barrett let up in his pitching when I went to bat. He wanted to see me make good and figured that a couple of hits more or less would not affect his rating any. I make a couple of hits in this way, and then came the nine inning. Never will I forget it. Mansfield was three runs in the bad when we went to bat. They needed four to win. We filled the bases and it was my turn to bat."

Who is the quickest thinker in base ball ?

What's the use of asking ? Why, it's none other than Miller Huggins. The St. Louis manager admits that fact, says so himself, and then passes out the following line to talk to back up his statement :

"Two of our St. Louis players were on first and second bases, with but one out. The man on second base was a slow runner. I was at bat, and it was my intention to sacrifice along the base line.

"We were playing against Pittsburgh, and as soon as the pitcher pitched the ball he started for the third base line, and I knew he hoped to get the ball and a play for a forceout at third.

"I saw what was coming and had just time to shift the position of my bat and to bunt the ball right down the line to the pitcher's box. As the pitcher had left his position, the bunt went for a single, and with the bases filled, we subsequently scored enough runs to win the game."

Huggins, though, is generous enough to give other players credit for displaying a bit of brains every once in a while. Said he :

"Last year, the Louis club, in a game with Chicago, had a man on second another on third, with only one out. A St. Louis batsman hit a fly ball out of Jimmy Sheckard.

"Sheckard got all ready to throw the ball to the home plate, anticipating that the runner on third would try to score. But just as Sheckard drew back his arm to throw he saw that the man on third did not leave the bag, but that the man on second, expecting that the player ahead of him would try to score, had started from second to third.

"Quick as a flash, Sheckard, with the same motion, wheeled and let the ball drive to second, where he got his man by two feet."

(By Hal Sheridan.)

New York, Aug. 12. — If you look back through the dizzy hot days of June and July, and penetrate the rains of April, you may remember that back in the early spring Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington team of the American league, dropped some remarks of rare wisdom. The "Old Fox" was discussing left-handed pitchers past, present and future, but mostly past, and in touching upon the future opined that all was rack and ruin.

"There ain't no such animal as a good port-sider (apologies to the navy for using 'port.' ") was Griffith's opinion. And just to show how much we may not know, in spite of great knowledge, Griff had on his pay roll one of the best left-handers that has appeared in many years, at the very time he was sitting up nights weeping bitterly and bewailing the decay of the species. The reference is to Mr. Joseph Boehling.

Cinconnati, Aug 12.—Manager John J. McGraw of the New York National League Club and several of his players exchanged fisticuffs late Thursday night, according to The Commercial Tribune. Trouble is said to have been brewing among the players ever since McGraw traded Otis Crandall, the veteran pitcher, for Larry McLean. Crandall was very popular among the club members, and there was much bitterness felt at his loss. According to The Tribune, the fight with McGraw occurred when five of the players, who should be spending the evening together, were accosted by McGraw at midnight and taken to task for their late hours. The players passed hot words, particularly about the Crandall trade, and several blows were struck. Two of theplayers with cooler heads prevented the matter from becoming a general fight and the party finally returned in a body to their hotel, McGraw with a bleeding nose as a result of the affray. There was no other damage done, however.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—To determine whether a majority of baseball bugs prefer to read a story of the game immersed in slathers of slang or recited in the purest of English, the sport editor of a Chicago paper today printed two versions of yesterday's Cub-Phillies combat and extended Chicago fans an invitation to ballot on their preference. The opening paragraphs are as follows :

Slang—Stupendous swatting by the invading Phils put the bee on the intermittent Cubbers yesterday. With Alex. the Great workin' lab miracles while three Trojah flingers were floundering about in approved bush league fashion, Skipper Dooin and his sprightly troopers made merry with a vengeance, giving Evers and Company the once-over at regular and stated intervals.

English—By hitting three Cub pitchers to every corner of the field, Philadelphia yesterday defeated the Cubs 16 to 3 at the West Side park. The trio of tallies represented compliments of Grover Cleveland Alexander, in Quakertown, known as "the Great."

FIRST TRIP HOME IN FORTY YEARS

Pioneer of the West Went in With Lord Strathcona and Saw the Country Develop

After forty years' absence from Montreal, Leon Pare, fur trader, bonanza wheat rancher and pioneer of the Duhamel district of Alberta returned to his home city for a visit to his relatives. Mr. Pare, whose career has been an active one, was born in St. Sulpice, L'Assumption County, Que., some eighty years ago. It is more than forty years since he left Montreal for Fort Garry, as Winnipeg was then known, in company with Donald Smith, now Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal. The old man gives the following account of the trip:

"There were more Indians than white people at Fort Garry when Donald Smith, governor of the Hudson's Bay, and I arrived there in the summer of 1872. We travelled by train from Montreal to St. Paul, by way of Chicago, and the overland trip by stage from the Mississippi River to the company's post at Fort Garry was anything but pleasant. We had a rather rough time of it, but to me the novelty offset the hardships. Then, too, I recalled that Smith had walked alone from Fort Garry to Montreal and return. Travelling in a stage coach, of course, was easier than walking."

Becomes a Trader

Pare remained at Fort Garry six months and entered upon five years of service for the Hudson's Bay Company at Fort Qu'Appelle and Carleton. From the Indians who came to trade at Fort Qu'Appelle he heard of the large fur catch on the Battle River, and was told of the opportunities for making money. He severed his connection with the company in 1878, and became a trader, with headquarters near Camrose.

From Duhamel Pare made three trips overland to Winnipeg, travelling in a Red River ox-cart.

He would leave in the early spring with a load of furs and return late in the fall. At Duhamel Pare had an exciting time during the Riel Rebellion. One night his little trading post was surrounded by Indians and half breeds, who told him that all the white men had to be killed. As Pare was the only white man for many miles around, it would not take them long to finish the job. They wanted Pare to open his store. When he refused they forced it open, using a big log as a battering-ram. The old Hudson's Bay lock was so strong that the frame broke before the door and by carrying the door away entrance was gained. The invaders took all the goods in the store and departed. A few days later they returned for more goods, saying he was deceiving them. They succeeded in locating his catch of furs and carried them off as well. This was the end of the disturbance, as the Indians were summoned to help Riel at Batoche.

Takes up Ranching

"After I quit trading," Pare said, "I took up ranching in the Duhamel district. It was a wilderness, the only other white man in the territory being Father Bellevaire, who looked after the Indians. Later, I went in for mixed farming and made lots of money. Neither Calgary nor Edmonton could boast of more than a handful of people when I first saw them. There was not much at Calgary when I went in with a catch of furs on the first train sent out over the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Hudson's Bay Company's trading post in Edmonton was then known as 'the last house in the world.'"

Slips in Oratory

Even the most facile speakers are guilty of unpardonable errors in their oratory. Mr. Arthur Balfour on one occasion spoke of "an empty theatre of unsympathetic auditors," and Lord Curzon of Kedleston remarked that "though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Mr. Asquith once stated that "redistribution is a thorny subject which requires delicate handling, or it will tread on some people's toes."

Mr. St. John Brodrick, when a member of the House of Commons, told that assembly that "among the many jarring notes heard in this House on military affairs this subject (mobilization) at least must be regardedd as an oasis."

In a debate on the London Education Bill Mr. Walter Long said, "We are told that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

The late General Redvers Buller, desiring to convey that there was little to be gained by so-called Army Reform, declared that "the Army is honeycombed with cliques and kisses go by favor in this web of axe-grinders."

Likes Canada Best

Rev. Father Lebeau, of the Archbishop's palace, Ottawa, returned from a tour of France, England Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt and the Holy Land and made this statement:

"After visiting all the European countries and the Eastern ones, too, I find that I never appreciated Canada so greatly. There is a spirit of liberty here which I found in no other country I was in. There the rich are rich and the poor helplessly poor. Here in Canada we know how to enjoy life as they do not."

Strength of Concrete

A concrete motion picture theater recently built in England is 80 feet long by 45 feet wide and 18 feet high, yet the walls are only two inches thick.

Known Centuries Ago

Asphalt was known to the ancients and is said to have been used as a binder in masonry by the Babylonians.

Wages No Object.

"Can't you get any work?" asked a woman of the tramp who had applied at the back door for food.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied. "I was offered a steady job by the man who lives down the road in that big white house."

"That's Mr. Oatsead? What was the work?"

"He wanted me to get up at four in the morning, milk 17 cows, feed, water and rub down four horses, clean the stables and then chop wood until it was time to begin the day's work."

"What did he want to pay?"

"I dunno. I did'nt stop to ask."—Youth's Companion.

NO OPERATION FOR GALL-STONES

No operation will be necessary for Gall-stones, Kidney-stones, or Gravel—SANOL, the German remedy discovered by a great German scientist, will surely relieve the agony of the sufferer from these complaints. It will also cure with equal certainty and promptness kidney trouble, lumbago, and all other diseases caused by the presence of uric acid in the system. It is also most valuable as a preventive for these diseases and will often prevent a serious illness if taken when the first symptoms appear.

Save the pain, danger and cost of an operation by using

SANOL

Relief will be rapid, the deposits will pass off rapidly and without pain. We have addresses and strong testimonials—some written from residents of Winnipeg, to the number of 300. We have 27 testimonials from one small Alberta town. We have a most convincing testimonial from one Winnipeg lady who passed several large gall-stones, after taking one bottle of SANOL. We are willing and anxious to furnish you with the addresses of these people.

An immigration man persuaded N. F. Lamborn, a native of Denver, to visit Saskatchewan some three years ago. He did so and bought a 2,300 acre farm near Herschell, Sask., and he now has sufficient money to allow him to live in comfort for the rest of his life.

He bought 2,300 acres for $12 an acre and sold the farm for $55 an acre, getting $126,500 for the land he bought for $27,600. He had 1,240 acres in flax his last year on the farm. This crop netted him $37,800; he got 27,000 bushels of flax for which he obtained $1.40 per bushel. Mr. Lamborn made his living for three years and in addition cleared a profit of some $150,000.

A cubic foot of water heated to the temperature of steam under 70 pounds pressure contains as much energy as a pound of gunpowder.

Minimized Ice Danger

On the steamship Royal Edward from Bristol, was Dr. Meyer Coplans, bacteriologist of public health in the University of Leeds, Eng. Dr Coplans made the voyage for the purpose of testing an apparatus he has invented as an aid to navigators in fog and haze and for detecting the presence of icebergs. His instrument "nosed" the presence of icebergs three miles and a half away and sounded an alarm on three occasions in the vicinity of ice.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERES addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Toronto Harbour Works," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, August 25, 1913, for the construction of a Sea Wall, Breakwater, Ship Channel and Retaining Walls at the City of Toronto, in the County of York, Province of Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont.; Harbour Commissioner's Office, 78 Adelaide St. West, Toronto; H. J. Lamb, Esq., District Engineer, Windsor, Ont., and J. L. Michaud, Esq., District Engineer, Post Office, Montreal, Que.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent (5 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,

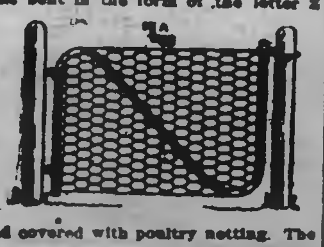
FOR A GARDEN GATE

Gas Pipe and Poultry Netting Answer all Requirements

The use of old gaspipe to make gates is a new idea that originated with a small railroad company that owned a quantity of pipe and had a number of gates to make. The pipe was bent in the form of the letter Z and covered with poultry netting. The hinges used were made of heavy wire bent in the way shown at Fig. A. The hook par. fitted into a large screw eye fastened into the gate post. The gates are durable, cheap and easy to make and the idea might be utilised with profit by people who want to make attractive gates that will last.



Horse Safety Pins

Safety pins for horse blankets patented by a Pennsylvanian are provided with wire hooks that engage harness on a horse and prevent a blanket falling off.

Horse Power Differs

The horsepower, as used as a unit of measurement on the continent of Europe, differs from the English and American horsepower by more than one per cent.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

The Isolated Continent

A Romance of the Future

By
Guido von Horvath and Dean Hoard

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent. The invention had saved the country from foreign invasion, and the continent had been united under one government, with Prudent as president. For half a century peace and prosperity had reigned. The story opens with President Prudent critically ill. His death is hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Werdenstein of Germany that he has at last succeeded in penetrating the rays. Dying he warns his daughter Astra that this means a foreign invasion. He tells her to hurry to the island of Cirync, but dies before he can tell the location of the place.

CHAPTER III—Napoleon Edison calls on Astra, informs her that he was a pupil of her father's, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance which, he says, will solve the problem of flying.

CHAPTER IV—Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Werdenstein and offers him the secret of making gold.

CHAPTER V—He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an aeroplane.

CHAPTER VI—Astra is inaugurated as president. She receives a message from Edison, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Heligoland and has just escaped. He announces that the confederated fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

CHAPTER VII—Countess Rosiny, a spy, becomes a prisoner in hope of securing Edison's secret. She falls in love with him.

CHAPTER VIII—She agrees to join him in an attempt to escape. By the use of fireworks he summons a curious flying machine which resembles a monster eagle. He escapes and sends his message to Astra.

CHAPTER IX—Edison calls on Astra as promised. He tells her his plans for defense have been completed, but that he will give fuller details at his workshop on the island of Cirync in the Pacific. They make the trip in three hours. His plans are based on the peculiarity of the new substance, cirynith, which is lighter than any known metal and is practically indestructible.

CHAPTER X—The Europeans succeed in passing the line of isolation, but find that the Americans have established a second one. Edison delivers a note to von Werdenstein in his flagship demanding that the fleet be withdrawn. Edison is attacked, but by the use of some mysterious power he destroys two warships and several aeroplanes.

CHAPTER XI—Realizing his helplessness Werdenstein withdraws his fleet and consents to universal disarmament.

CHAPTER XII—Edison's mother is ill on the Island of Cirync. Countess Rosiny offers to go and comfort her, hoping to discover Edison's secrets. She begins to weave a net around Santos Duprel, Edison's assistant.

CHAPTER XIII—The countess gets a letter from Werdenstein offering her the princedom of Schomburg-Lithow for Edison's secret.

CHAPTER XIV—Edison and Santos start in search of a new deposit of cirynith, their supply being almost exhausted. They find it on the estate of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XV—The countess finally gets Santos into her clutches and he promises to do anything for her. She gets another letter from Werdenstein asking her to find out why Edison is interested in the Schomburg estate, he having made overtures for its purchase.

CHAPTER XVI—Edison applies personally to Werdenstein with an offer for the property, but gets no satisfaction. Astra and Edison set the date for their wedding. Werdenstein gets a letter from the countess promising to reveal Edison's secrets as soon as the property is turned over to her.

CHAPTER XVII—On the day of their wedding Astra and Edison get a letter from the countess saying she has left the country with Santos.

CHAPTER XVIII—Santos perfects a machine and is made a count by the emperor of Germany. He marries the countess, now princess of Schomburg-Lithow.

CHAPTER XIX—Edison finds a new deposit of cirynith and builds a new fleet of airships. He accidentally discovers a liquid that will render opposing airships helpless by removing the magnetism from cirynith. He is injured while making the discovery

CHAPTER XX—His long absence causes great uneasiness in Washington. Santos completes 21 airships for the countess. The aviators of the fleet elect her queen. She plans to master the world. Edison returns to Washington.

CHAPTER XXI—He equips his airships with a contrivance to render opposing machines helpless.

CHAPTER XXII—Werdenstein sends an ultimatum to America. The princess declares her fleet is ready and invites Werdenstein to inspect it. He then discovers her real plans and returns to Berlin in despair.

CHAPTER XXIII—Edison's new discovery enables his fleet to overcome and capture the fleet of the princess. He leaves the princess in South America to pass the rest of her days where she can do no more harm.

CHAPTER XXIV—Peace again reigns and Astra and Edison are happy in the possession of a son and heir.

The aerodromones of the latter were approaching steadily. She seemed to have forgotten them entirely in the heat of the pursuit, while she was the aggressor, but now, when Napoleon turned against her, she quickly turned to the stylograph and gave orders to her fleet to close in upon them, but not to interfere until it was necessary for her safety.

Napoleon plainly heard the message and waited until she had broken connection, then he faced her machine and unhurriedly pulled a lever that was connected with the tube that had been lately attached to all his aerodromones. A thick stream of white liquid shot out and landed squarely upon the left wing of the Princess. The bird trembled. Santos calmly turned on the emergency dry battery and, like a great wounded bird, the Princess began to settle downward. The white stream was stopped, a deft turn of the wheel, a well-directed move and the Eagle slipped between the wings of the Princess, and she was a prisoner.

Rositta was as pale as death. The terrible disappointment of losing, when victory was so near, made her faint. Then she remembered her fleet and signaled orders quickly.

She had not noticed that Napoleon, just before he turned on the liquid that had disabled her machine, had hoisted a red signal, and a great fleet of aerodromones rose from the coast along North Carolina and silently closed in on the fleet of the enemy.

The formation of Pamlico Sound made this maneuver easy and Napoleon had cleverly led Rositta and her fleet into the trap. He turned his Eagle landward and, weighted as he was, moved slowly away. His men had been fully instructed in regard to their action and Whistler led them.

As soon as Santos realized what had happened, he turned to the door and opened it: "Come, Rositta, my wife, it will be sweet to die together."

"Idiot!" she shrieked.

He looked at her and knew. He turned to his master, who waved a friendly hand at him, and said sadly: "Napoleon, forgive me. I was blinded."

He jumped into the sound and the waters closed over him. Rositta had not even glanced at him as he fell. She stepped into his place in the doorway and had her foot on the first rung of the ladder that led to the top of the machine when he touched the water. Napoleon opened the door for her, without saying a word.

When she was in the upper machine she stood looking at Napoleon, who was awaiting her further action.

At last she said: "With you I would go down there." Then she flushed and an exquisite little smile appeared on her face. "You devil of a man! You have won again! What do you intend to do with me?"

He looked at her sadly as he replied in a measured voice:

"I will make a queen of you."

"Oh, thanks! That is kind. I presume you have selected a very beautiful country?"

"Yes, Rositta Rosiny, a very beautiful country. You will have everything you need—it is a veritable Garden of Eden.

She looked at him in alarm, then looked toward her fleet. Every one of her aerodromones had been captured.

They reached land. Napoleon called up Whistler and, giving orders regarding the empty aerodromone that he was leaving on a sandbar, released it from the electric clutches of the Eagle. Then he flew up again, with Rositta sitting motionless and unseeing on the bench. Sending the Eagle toward the south, he turned on full speed.

The man who had outwitted his enemies was silent, watching the rich country run backward under him. Neither spoke on the long journey southward to the Garden of Eden.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Dawn.

A small house had been erected near the Crystal Lake. It had two rooms and kitchen, that was all; but it had been pleasantly and well furnished with everything a lone woman might want. When Napoleon assisted Rositta from the aerodromone he led her into the pleasant living-room. She followed him obediently, as if in a trance, seating herself in the chair indicated without a word.

"This is your future home, Rositta," he said, simply.

She did not reply, but sat looking out the window, at the clear lake and the steep mountain sides that overshadowed the little valley forbiddingly. A strange fire shone in her eyes. She stood up slowly and cautiously and stepped to the window. She looked out at the beautiful green foliage and the blooming flowers for a long time, and Napoleon did not disturb her. Her actions commanded respect.

A smile appeared on her face, a smile that reminded Napoleon of his own mother;- it expressed mother love, the most holy of all.

"See—see how green the grass is! How blue the sky is! How mild the air, and the water of the Lago di Maggiore is as smooth as a mirror." She beckoned to Napoleon. "Just look at that sweet little girl, see how she runs on the shore—she is after a butterfly. Don't you see her, man! Don't you see her?" She gasped these last words hoarsely and grasped Napoleon's arm. A nameless terror had his noble soul in its grip.

"My Son, Thou Shalt Be a Citizen of a Happier and More Peaceful Age."

"Answer me, do you see her?" She began to sob. "Ah, don't say no—say you see her. She is my own little girl. She is good and not like her mother. She is good, I say! She must be good to be happy." She sobbed wildly. Turning to Napoleon she screamed: "Speak! Oh, speak to me, or I shall go mad entirely."

He took her hands in his and in a mild voice said: "Rositta, be quiet; you don't know what you are saying."

She pushed him away. A wild look came into her eyes.

"You fiend! You have killed me, and I'll kill you now!" Her hand slipped into her bosom and a short gilt Venetian dagger glistened brightly. She darted forward blindly and just missed Napoleon. Her dagger struck the wall fiercely. The blade broke and fell with a sharp clink to the floor. The next moment she fainted in Napoleon's arms.

He carried her to the sofa and brought fresh water to revive her.

For two long hours her soul traveled through unknown regions where there is neither time nor distance. When she opened her eyes again she was not the same youthful, vivacious Rositta. She had become old.

She did not speak for a long time, and Napoleon had the patience to await her pleasure, notwithstanding his neglected duties at Washington.

At last she sat up and said weakly: "Napoleon Edison, you have won. You are strong; I am weak. The Queen Rositta is dead. The only one I ever truly loved, my little daughter, is dead, and now I can mourn the rest of my life. You may go, Napoleon. That kiss of yours on the roof at Helgoland—that kiss given as alms—is responsible for all I have done." She offered her hand. "Please go; there are many awaiting you. I want to rest in this solitude."

Napoleon took her hand. "Good-by. Should you need me, there is a special signal arrangement in the other room; use it." He left, and she watched his form disappear in the dark night. The man she had once feared, loved and hated was gone, and, it was strange, but she found all these conflicting emotions gone as well.

That was the last ever heard of the once-famous Princess Schomburg-Lithow, the ambitious Queen of the Air.

En route to Washington Napoleon talked with his men on Cirync. Whistler told him that his instructions had been carried out to the letter and Sullivan told of the successful capture of the four aerodromones from the west.

It was ten o'clock in the morning when he sighted the capital, and Congress was in session.

The newspapers had already described the battle between the Eagle and the Princess and the capture of the whole aerodromone flotilla. Whistler had reported to the proper authorities, but no one knew what had become of the Princess Rositta.

Loud shouts filled the chamber when Napoleon came in. Representatives left their chairs and, lifting him up, carried him on their shoulders to his chair. He stood there a moment and the enthusiastic audience became silent.

"Gentlemen! Representatives of the United Republics of America!

"I have to tell you that the dangers surrounding us, caused by the designing and ambitious Princess von Schomburg-Lithow, are dissipated forever. Her fleet of aerodromones is in my possession and will be disposed of as you see fit.

"This act of force, committed by me alone, was done in the interest of peace, according to the twelfth chapter of the international peace pactum, that holds the president of the peace committee responsible for peace between nations.

"The manufacturing of aerodromones is my exclusive privilege for the next seventeen years, according to patents secured, and, since I believe this abortive attempt to crush liberty will not be repeated, I take pleasure in offering my sixty aerodromones to the United Republics of America, to be used in accordance with arrangements to be made. I will reserve the right of ownership and the engagement of aeromen for the machines."

An enthusiastic "hurrah!" sounded and after quiet was restored Napoleon continued:

"The men captured on the Princess' fleet are to be returned to their respective countries and tried as conspirators against the world peace committee and I have no doubt that amicable relations will soon exist between all the nations.

"The United Republics of America is a monument to Freedom and Peace. These two conditions create satisfaction, wealth and advancement of such character that we are nearer the Almighty, who created man in his own image."

Napoleon was interrupted here by an attendant, who slipped a small envelope into his hand. It was addressed to him in his mother's well-known handwriting. He tore it open, ran through the lines and his face became radiant with happiness. He waved his hand toward the waiting audience and without another word quickly left the hall.

His erratic actions would have caused uneasiness if his face had not been so expressive of happiness. He had hardly reached the exit when the representatives cheered once again. He waved his hand in acknowledgment and dashed out.

He raced to the elevator that carried him to his aerodromone and in a few minutes he was on the roof of the Crystal Palace. He quickly descended to the apartment of Astra, his wife.

His mother awaited him outside the door; their embrace told much.

A minute later the great man, the hero, the patriot, the inventor, was kneeling at the bedside of a smiling, happy mother, murmuring broken phrases of joy at her well-being.

At the mother's request, with shaking hands in fear of hurting him, he raised the little, kicking boy and, as he kissed his son, he said with wet eyes:

"My son, thou shalt be a citizen of a happier and more peaceful age."

* * * * *

There is little more to say.

That afternoon Napoleon looked through the mail that had accumulated and found Count von Werdenstein's message addressed to Astra. He carried it, together with other urgent letters, to her. She asked him to read it to her.

"Your Ladyship: My secret service agents have informed me that the Princess Schomburg Lithow is planning to overthrow the present peaceful balance that exists all over the world.

"I was reared a man of arms and I have been a believer in our glorious traditions. It has taken a long time for me to realize the blessings of Equality, Liberty and Fraternity, but I have realized them at last.

"I regret that I have not the power to crush the princess' conspiracy, for which I, personally, am to blame. On account of my inability to do this I beg your ladyship to inform your honorable husband of the contents of this letter. He is the only one who can check the uprising, and I hope this will find him prepared.

"For the future, I intend to do all I can to make the coming generation a better and more contented one. I intend to try to follow the example set by the man whom I now appreciate.

"In the hope that my warning will reach you in good time and will be of service to your ladyship, I remain, with sincere regards,

"VON WERDENSTEIN."

"I am glad that a man like the count has seen the light," was Napoleon's simple comment when he had finished reading the letter.

Astra's eyes rested lovingly on Napoleon, then wandered over to the crib in which their baby boy slept.

They both felt the dawn of a happier age.

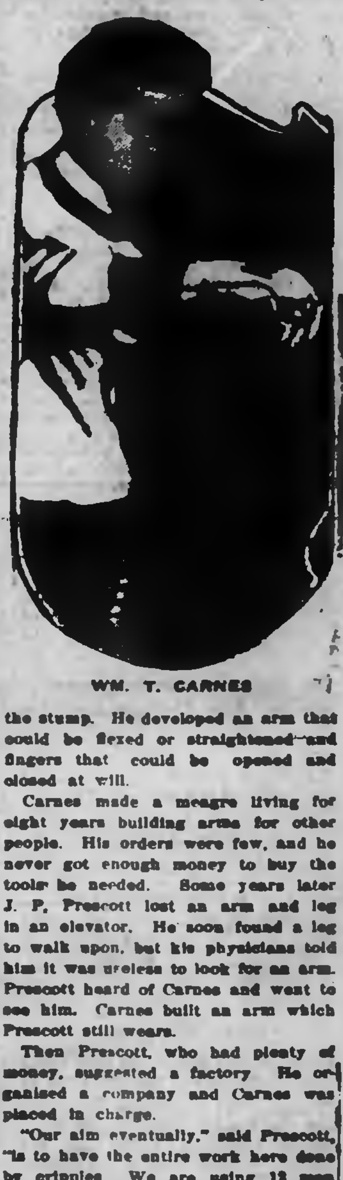
A CRIPPLE FACTORY

All the Employes Are Shy a Limb But Earn a Living

In Kansas City, Mo., there is a three story factory where armless men and women make artificial arms for other armless people. Wm. T. Carnes, who has only one arm—his left— is manager of the plant. Ten years ago Carnes, then a machinist, was working in a shop at Pittsburg. His right arm was caught in a cog wheel and later amputated above the elbow. When he left the hospital he looked in vain for an arm that was serviceable, so he started to make one himself. He studied anatomy of the arm and fingers and combined their natural principles in an arrangement of steel levers, ratchet gearing and crank so that they would readily respond to the muscle force and nerve impulses of the stump. He developed an arm that could be flexed or straightened and fingers that could be opened and closed at will.



WM. T. CARNES

Carnes made a meagre living for eight years building arms for other people. His orders were few, and he never got enough money to buy the tools he needed. Some years later J. P. Prescott lost an arm and leg in an elevator. He soon found a leg to walk upon, but his physicians told him it was useless to look for an arm. Prescott heard of Carnes and went to see him. Carnes built an arm which Prescott still wears.

Then Prescott, who had plenty of money, suggested a factory. He organised a company and Carnes was placed in charge.

"Our aim eventually," said Prescott, "is to have the entire work here done by cripples. We are using 12 men and a girl now who are 'disabled' like Carnes and me."

Carnes can do anything any man can do—slower, of course, but just as well. The secretary of the company is an expert pool player, but he has only one arm of real flesh and bone. Carnes shaves himself and manicures his own nails.

About the office and factory there is joking and laughing. Everyone feels he is giving service for value received, and incidentally helping someone else along.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't Care."

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose, and, indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and billiousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all disease of the stomach liver and bowles. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Nighthawk Mascot.

Yesterday afternoon at the Ball Grounds, a nighthawk came flying in front of a Peterborough batter in the second innings. This bird must have been a harbinger of good, as just there the batter made a hit and two runs came in. The nighthawk flew under the fence to the west and was captured by a boy with his hat.

To-day's Ball Game.

To-day's ball game, the last home fixture of the week, will be called at 3.15 o'clock instead of at the usual 3.45 hour. The earlier start is to allow the Guelph team to catch a train for Hamilton, where they are scheduled to play a game the following morning.

A Wise Trout

Every fisherman knows that the trout, which is not wearing feathers, is a wily bird. However, our own Trout, at Riverside Park, on Civic Holiday, by fooling the Guelph players, on his sensational stunt between 1st and 2nd base, thus bringing home a run from 3rd, and, incidentally to 2nd, proved that it takes a wise fisherman to capture Trout.

Was Assessed $10.

At yesterday's police court, William Rose was charged with making an indecent exposure at the corner of Murray and Stewart streets. Rose pleaded not guilty. P. C. Sill said the offense was committed on Saturday afternoon. He had received complaints about the prisoner. He found the prisoner hiding under the bridge at the Creek. A resident of Stewart street testified to the exposure. Rose was fined $10 with the option of 30 days in jail.

"Sunny Jim" to the Rescue.

Yesterday morning a junk cart owned by a local Hebrew firm, was carrying a load of scrap iron along Hunter street. Just in front of the Oriental Hotel a wheel came off the wagon and the vehicle ran into the heels of the horses. Did the horses run? Not in a million years! They stood and placidly watched the broken rig until "Sunny Jim" Mason came along with a spring waggon and the load was jettisoned.

Lindsay Woman Burns Money

Toronto Star: An eccentric old lady in Lindsay burnt up $200 in bills of different denominations. She is said to have an hallucination that a suspicious character is always loitering around the house with intent to rob her. Did she make a present of the $200 to the banks, or to the government, or what did she really do when she burnt the bills? If she destroyed all trace of them, of course she was $200 out of pocket. Who gained that amount?

Had Himself Arrested

A young man from Montreal spent Civic holiday in the city. This young fellow evidently did not understand the potency of Peterborough whiskey. He got "plastered" so badly that on Monday night he ran up and down Water street calling for the police to arrest him so that he would make no further trouble. He was accommodated, and when sobered up, allowed to go. Yesterday he "fessed up and paid $2 for his inexperience with the power of Peterborough booze.

AUNT SALLY'S ADVICE TO BEAUTY SEEKERS

K. C. F. says: "My skin becomes so greasy every summer, and this so attracts dust and dirt that I have an awful time keeping my face clean looking. Can you suggest anything?" The method mentioned in reply to Eloise will overcome this condition.

D. N. A. writes: "How can I get rid of crowsfeet and wrinkles about the mouth corners?" Use a wash lotion prepared by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This tightens the skin, tending to disperse wrinkles, and its tonic effect is more than temporary.

Eloise says: "My freckles are worse than ever this year, made doubly conspicuous by a pallid complexion. Is there any cure?" Ask your druggist for an ounce of mercolized wax, apply nightly like cold cream, removing in the morning with warm water. As the wax gradually and harmlessly absorbs the affected cuticle, not only will the freckles vanish, but the new and younger skin which appears will have a healthy color. Probably you will need to continue treatment a week or more.—Woman's Realm.

SINGLE FARE TO HAMILTON.

In connection with the Hamilton Centennial Industrial Exhibition and Old Home Week, the Grand Trunk Railway System will sell round trip tickets at single fare, plus twenty-five cents, to Hamilton, Ont., from stations, Kingston, Renfrew and west in Canada, good going Saturday, August 9th, to Tuesday, August 12th, and at single fare from stations in Canada where the lowest one-way first class fare to Hamilton does not exceed $2.50 (minimum charge 25c.) good going Monday, August 11th, to Saturday, August 16th. All tickets will be valid for return until Wednesday, August 20th, 1913.

A Fool in an Auto.

On Monday morning as a young man was driving an auto car along George street, between Murray and McDonal street, he displayed two qualities. The first was the lack of common sense, and secondly, that he is born under a lucky star. He followed a street car for some distance, trying, and again hesitating to cross George street front of the street car. The motor man rang his bell vigorously. Still, this evident beginner in amateur chaffeuring tried to cross, and did succeed in crossing in front of the street car. The steps of the car, on which a Times representative stood, just missed the hind wheel of the auto by the millionth part of an inch. When a man, seemingly without common sense, will risk his life, his, or the other fellow's car in so foolhardy a venture an insurance company might do well to insure fools. Had an accident occurred, it would have been no fault of the motor man.

WEDDING BELLS.

McDonald—King.

The wedding was quietly solemnized at St. Luke's Church on Monday of Miss Geraldine King, daughter of the late Dr. King, of this city, to Mr. James Herbert McDonald, of Owen Sound. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Sawers in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The only outside guest was Mrs. Mulhern, of Renfrew. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald left on the 4.38 C.P.R train on their wedding trip.

Hayes—Kylie.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral at 7 o'clock yesterday morning when Miss Lenore Kylie, daughter of Mr. Martin Kylie, of East City, became the charming bride of Mr. Dennis Hayes, of Rochester, N.Y. Rev. Father Phelan officiated. Mr. Leonard Hayes, of Rochester, the groom's brother, was best man, while the bride was assisted by her sister, Gertrude Kylie, Miss Doherty, organist of the Cathedral, played the wedding march.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

Mrs. A. Cook.

The death occurred a few days ago in Revelstoke, B.C., of Mrs. A. Cook (formerly Miss Annie Kenner). The deceased, who moved to Revelstoke from here some years ago, was in the city last March. She leaves to mourn her death a sorrowing husband and three children, also four brothers and two sisters, of whom all are in the west with the exception of Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute.

Mrs. Joseph Condon.

Douro yesterday lost one of its most respected residents, in the person of Mrs. Joseph Condon, whose demise occurred in St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday morning, after an illness lasting over a period of two months. She was 66 years of age and has resided in Douro all her lifetime.

She is survived by one son, John, of Douro, and the following daughters: Mrs. O'Connal of Ennismore, Mrs. William E. O'Brien, of this city, Mrs. Daniel Delaney of Douro, Emma of Prince Albert, Johanna and Anna Stacia at home.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning from the late residence, Lot 10, Concession 6, Douro, at eight o'clock to St. Joseph's Church, and thence to St. Joseph's Cemetery, Douro, for interment.

INAUGURATION OF NEW STEAMSHIP SERVICE BETWEEN ST. JOHN, N.B., AND DIGBY, N. S.

BY PALATIAL NEW STEAMER "ST. GEORGE"

Passengers from Ontario points via Canadian Pacific Route are now afforded an unexcelled through service to Montreal, St. John, and the "Land of Evangeline" in connection with new steamship "St. George," which is now in operation between St. John, N.B., and Digby, N.S., daily except Sunday.

Passengers making this trip can leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m., arriving Montreal same evening; leave Montreal 7.25 p.m. and arrive St. John 11.00 a.m. next day, connecting with the fast steamship "St. George," sailing 12.30 p.m. (Atlantic Standard Time), arriving Digby 2.30 p.m., making connection with Dominion Atlantic "Flying Bluenose" limited train, arriving Halifax 6.00 p.m.

Returning passengers leave Halifax 10.00 a.m. via "Flying Bluenose," connecting at Digby with the fast steamship "St. George," sailing at 3.25 p.m. Connection at St. John with Canadian Pacific train, leaving 4.55 p.m., arriving Montreal following morning 8.30 a.m., and arriving Toronto same night at 7.10.

This new fast service affords passengers a delightful trip, combining rail and water with but two changes, at St. John and Digby, without the slightest inconvenience, thus enabling passengers to make a trip across the Bay of Fundy, famous for its great rise and ebb of tide, and passing the beautiful and historic "Land of Evangeline" en route to Halifax.

VOL. XL, NO. 189 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, AUG. 14, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS.

SULZER. NEW YORK GOVERNOR, WAS VOTED OUT OF HIS OFFICE, WIFE'S EFFORTS IN VAIN

Opponents Say He Is No Longer in Authority

DEMOCRATS STRONG FOR IMPEACHMENT—WIFE BRAVELY COMES TO RESCUE WITH REVELATIONS.

Albany, N.Y., Aug. 13.—Governor William Sulzer was impeached at 5.16 o'clock this morning by the Democratic majority in the Assembly of the New York Legislature after an all night session and after his wife had made an eleventh hour effort to save him at the risk of sacrificing her own reputation.

Organization leaders who had sparred for time all night in the fear that their programme of impeachment would be wrecked by lack of votes, welcomed newcomers to the Assembly Chamber, summoned from New York, during the early hours, and assured of victory by their presence, started a rapid fire of legislation with the adoption of impeachment resolution by a vote of 79 to 45.

Long articles of impeachment embracing the findings of the Frawley Investigating Committee in substance lay ready for presentation in the desk of Majority Leader Levy hours before the organization trusted its impeachment resolution to a roll call. With the adoption of this resolution, and the creation of a committee, headed by Mr. Levy, to prepare the articles a recess was taken, Mr. Levy and his associates without the formality of retiring to reappear within an hour and send the articles to the speaker's desk with a resolution that they be adopted.

Cease to Be Governor!

A roll call showed the adoption of the resolution by a vote of 79 to 32. A committee was appointed to acquaint the Senate with the Assembly's findings at the meeting of the Senate scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning. Majority leaders asserted their belief that with the presentation to the Senate of the articles of impeachment, William Sulzer would automatically cease to be Governor and Martin H. Glynn, Lieutenant, would assume his office and functions as acting Governor. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers entertained a different view.

With the adoption of the articles, and the appointment of the two committees, the Assembly settled down to further work. A resolution calling for the appointment of nine managers to conduct, on behalf of the Lower House, the impeachment proceedings was adopted, and Speaker Smith announced its membership

NEWMARKET CANAL COLLOSSAL BLUNDER

A Scandal That Cost Canada A Heap of Money

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 13.—The last has been heard of the notorious Newmarket Canal, better known as the Aylesworth Ditch. This remarkable work constituted what was technically described as the Holland River section of the Trent Canal. It was to connect the town of Newmarket with the Trent system, via the Holland River.

The canal was never anything but a joke, although a very expensive joke for the taxpayer of Canada. There was never the slightest excuse for undertaking the work as a business proposition, nor was there anything to justify it from an engineering standpoint.

Just to Spend Money.

The real object was to spend money in what was then a Liberal constituency, represented by a [illegible] of the Laurier Government. This object was attained. Much money was spent, but so great was the popular cry against the continuance of this folly that the Liberal Government was forced to move slowly. The attempts of Liberal Ministers to justify the work were ludicrous. It developed that even if the canal was completed there would be no way of getting water into it. It would be a dry canal. This however did not discourage the Liberal politicians who were boosting the project along and year after year the Government continued throwing hundreds of thousands of dollars into this ditch.

Stopped the Waste.

The Conservative party in Opposition vigorously condemned the Liberal Government in connection with the Aylesworth Ditch expenditure. When the Conservative Government took office the useless and wasteful expenditure of public money on the ditch was stopped. Now the machinery has been taken away and little remains to commemorate the folly of the Liberal ditch-diggers except a hole in the ground.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Fair and about the same temperature.

IMPROVE ROYAL NAVY TO SAVE THE EMPIRE

London, Aug. 13.—The Telegraph's naval correspondent to-day discusses the present practice of concentrating a fleet in home waters. A considerable portion of younger officers, he says, are unacquainted with any seas except those around these islands, the correspondent continues, from an Imperial as from a naval point of view the position is fraught with grave consequences. The navy cannot again adopt a policy of dispersion on lines followed in the past. There are neither ships nor officers nor men available, and if they could be secured the expense would be prohibitive, but we can and should have what Sir Edward Greydescribes as a respectable force in the Mediterranean. It should be of strength at least superior to that of Austria-Hungary. Beyond this more cruisers are needed on the shores of British Columbia and a larger squadron ought to be on the Cape station. Above all there should be an Imperial squadron provided jointly bythe Mother Country and the Dominions. This Imperial force should be cruising in distant waters visiting colonial and foreign ports under normal political conditions, but returning to the North Sea every summer to participate in the annual manoeuvres and always be available for protection of the Empire at large. This is the scheme which has already received the approval of the Admiralty. Its realization is delayed by the adverse vote of the Canadian Senate and by the fact that the present standard of British shipbuilding and shipmaking is inadequate. It provides the necessary margin for home waters, but the balance of ships, officers and men which will remain to assist in keeping the outer guard, will not suffice only with assistance of all the Dominions and possibly India as well.

Can the full naval responsibilities of the Empire be met?

It is on the evolution of some scheme of co-operation that future imperial naval defence depends, and not only this, but the professional standing of the Royal Navy itself.

WOMAN PUT SICK MAN IN ALLEY

Police and Medical Men Puzzled by Strange Case of William Sutton

Toronto, Aug. 13.—Fresh light is cast on the mystery surrounding the discovery of William Sutton in an unconscious condition in a lane on the east of of Tecumseh street, between Niagara and Wellington, yesterday afternoon at 4.20. Sutton, who resides at 200 Bellwoods avenue and who is a foreman at the Massey-Harris works, was chosen to sit on the jury last night at the morgue inquiry into the death of Mrs. Bracken and it was at first thought that his condition was insome way related to the case, but investigations seem to indicate that there is no connection between the two.

According to eye-witnesses, Mr. Sutton was dragged from the rear of 615 Wellington street west by Mrs. Hanwright, who resides there and a neighbor, Mrs. Hawley, who lives immediately opposite, and deposited in the lane at the back of the house. Mrs. Hanwright corroborates the story and states that she has never seen the man before, but she thought her husband knew him, as he had once worked at Massey-Harris'. Mrs. Hawley, she says, knew him, as he was a distant relation.

No Sign of Liquor.

Mrs. Hanwright also states that when Sutton came into the house he appeared to be somewhat shaky but there was no smell of liquor about him. The neighbors on the other hand, claim that there was a nasty sour smell emanating from the stricken man.

Sutton regained consciousness at 11 o'clock this morning, but was not in a condition to make a statement.

WEST GETS BIG ELEVATORS TO HANDLE INCREASING GRAIN

Government Intends to See That Shipping Facilities Are The Best

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 13.—Still another of the Borden Government's promises is being carried out, as they will all be carried out. Liberals whose leaders when in office made promises only to break them, find the Borden Government's rapid performance difficult to understand. The general public, however, understand the situation perfectly. They understand that the Laurier Government promised a lot at election times and did nothing and that the Borden Government has been making up for Liberal lost time.

An Illustration.

The case of the elevators is an illustration. The prairie provinces have been sorely in need of terminal elevators. They would have gone on needing them if there had not been a change of Government at Ottawa. There was a change of Government and the elevators are being provided. The Department of Trade and Commerce is on the point of commencing the construction of one at Moose Jaw and another at Saskatoon; it is mailing a call for tenders to every individual and firm that is known ever to have built an elevator.

Million Each.

It is expected that each elevator will cost about $1,000,000. Copies of plans and specifications can be seen either at the Department at Ottawa, or at the office of the Board of Trade Commission, at Fort William.

It is understood that the Board of Grain Commissioners has recommended the immediate construction of a third elevator in Alberta. The location will be determined before long.

CODY DIED VERY POOR

London, Aug. 13.— Samuel F. Cody the Anglo-American aviator, who was killed at Aldershot on August 7th died practically penniless. All the prize money he had won was spent by him in perfecting his machines and his wife and family were left in such a dependent position that the British Government is making an investigation with a view to providing for them in some way.

SLAYERS AFTER DR. SUN

Tokio, Aug. 13.— One hundred assassins are reported by the Japanese newspapers to have been sent to Japan to kill Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Huang Sing and other Chinese revolutionary fugitives, by Provisional President Yuang Shi Kai, of China.

The Japanese Government in consequence of these reports has arranged to give police protection to the leaders of the Chinese revolution who have sought asylum in Japan. It declares, however, that it will not permit Japan to be used as headquarters for Chinese plotters.

Unionist Leaders in Britain Say There is Nothing in Proposed Invasion.

London, Aug. 13.—I am informed to-day by the National Unionist Association and the Union Defence League, both of which would have a leading part in any such arrangement that they knew nothing about the proposal to send a band of messengers to Canada. The secretary of the Union Defence League thinks Mr. Stewart Woolley was misunderstood in the interview.

OUR "YELLOW" READERS

The Articles in The Times Do Not Please Mr. Soucie.

The Times is in receipt of the following letter:

The Times Printing Co., City.

Dear Sirs,—Please discontinue sending The Morning Times to my address, 236 Perry. I asked you to send it one month on trial, but I think it has been coming for more than that time. Please send me the bill at 429 George street, and I will settle

As I am a Roman Catholic, you will readily understand, how obnoxious to me some of your articles are. They no doubt appeal to the majority of your prejudiced "yellow" readers though.

Yours very truly,
T. J. SOUCIE.

Reply.—In Canada every man is entitled to follow his own particular religious convictions. No good Protestant who would deny his Roman Catholic fellow citizen this right should be regarded as a good citizen. The Times has no quarrel with Roman Catholics. It is the attitude of the heirarchy in political matters that we are unalterably opposed to. We have never written one line against the Roman Catholic "religion," and Mr. Soucie will look in vain to find a single word in this journal that is derogatory to his or any other religion. We may add that we object to any religious body seeking special privileges for their particular church, that is not accorded to other churches. Any observer of political history will show that our public men have been making concessions to the Roman heirarchy. Bargain after bargain has been made, adding appreciably to papal influence, and in no case was she receded. Take our school system for instance. She has claimed privilege after privilege, until at last the line had to be drawn. And the war is therefore on. To the public School system the Roman Church is bitterly hostile. It is regarded as an evil thing, godless and utterly offensive and immoral. Rome fears that if her children go to school with Protestants they will learn to look with some degree of tolerance on Protestantism. It insists that the simplest bible reading be excluded, and then she refers to our schools as godless, and works for their destruction and tries to establish in their stead schools controlled by priests and nuns, where papal supremacy is acknowledged.

We believe the time has arrived when the public press will be forced to give expression to the growing sentiment against the granting of further special privileges, and in taking this ground we believe The Times will be supported by all right thinking citizens, who regard civil and religious liberty as the greatest blessing that any country can possess.—Ed. Times.

DOZEN DETECTIVES SEARCHING NEW YORK FOR MURDERERS OF W. G. MARTIN OF TORONTO

BOY EXONERATED FOR KILLING GIRL

Will Stay In Employment of Farmer Where Both He and Victim Worked

Brockville, Aug. 13.—The inquest into the shooting tragedy on Saturday near Westport was held in the Westport town hall last evening.

The accident, as previously reported, was that Edith Hawkins, a young Barnardo Home girl 10 years old, on the farm of David Leacock, was shot and killed by a gun in the hands of Herbert Williams, aged 19, also from the home and employed on the same farm. The verdict of the jury was that the shooting was entirely unintentional and the boy was completely exonerated.

Various ugly rumors which had been current in the village were proved to be unfounded and the case was very thoroughly cleared up.

THE LINDSAY ASSAULT

Lindsay, Aug. 11.—McLaughlin, who received the treacherous and foul blows from a companion on circus night is, according to reports of his attending physician, Dr. White, gaining ground. The injured man joined the circus in Seattle two months ago and his home is in Roxboro, N. Y. The doctor thinks it possible for the patient to recover. The man is able to receive nourishment and is conscious at times. He converses some and has a vivid recollection of what took place on the eventful night, but becomes reticent when catechised as to who his would-be slayer was.

Lots of people criticize Uncle Sam for not interfering in Mexico who would be the first to blame him if he did.

CITY'S BOARD OF WORKS IN ROUTINE SESSION

The City's Board of Works met last night, Chairman Ald. Buller, presiding. There were also present Mayor W. H. Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, McIntyre and Gillespie.

A. H. Webb applied for a position as inspector of street paving construction—Received.

The Property Committee will be instructed to have erected at some suitable spot in East City a sign pointing the way to the Lift Lock.

A list of miscellaneous requirements and suggestions sent in by Ald. Johnston, who was absent, was referred to the proper channels for attention.

A list of miscellaneous questions and suggestions was referred to Ald. Anderson to look into.

The construction of the drain to serve the DeLaval premises will be proceeded with at once.

A sidewalk on the north side of Hazlitt street, to Dufferin street, will be temporarily repaired until a convenient occasion to advertise the laying of a concrete one with others properly petitioned for.

TRENT CANAL REPORT IS CONTRADICTED

An article appeared in our paper of yesterday referring to construction work on the Trent Canal, below Trent Bridge. One of the canal staff informed The Times that the article is incorrect. Had a channel been made, as suggested in the article referred to, it would have cost a very large amount of money. The information was given The Times by a gentleman actively engaged in the local steamboat business and thus was presumed to be correct. We are pleased, in justice to the canal authorities, to make this correction.

BYLAW AUTHORIZING PURCHASE OF REID INCINERATOR PASSES

Will be Erected at Once On a Site North of Townsend Street--Agreement is Signed--An Absolutely Odorless Method of Burning Garbage Etc

The City Fathers met last night in special session, and gave the bylaw authorizing the execution of an agreement with A. H. Reid & Co., of Toronto, for the construction of a 20-ton unit incinerator, its third and final reading.

The incinerator will be built at once on a site just north of Townsend street, lying between the Fuel & Cartage Co's sheds and the Creek.

Some fifty citizens petitioned against the incinerator being built on this site, but council considered it the best possible site available, and contend that as no odor whatever emanates from the incinerator to be erected, it cannot possibly prove a nuisance to anyone. They were of the opinion that no matter what site was selected for this incinerator, some objection would be forthcoming; hence they could do nothing else but act on their own judgment in the best interests of the community as a whole.

Crushed Limestone.

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with Messrs. Mitchell and Stothard for the delivery of crushed limestone from their quarry in Smith, passed its final reading. the details of this agreement were published yesterday morning. This limestone is recommended by the City Engineer as 50 per cent. better than the hitherto used on this city for road purposes. It binds in well and forms a road wearing surface which will wear twice as long as our present so-called macadam highways. The crushing and delivery of this limestone will average up about 18 cents cheaper per cubic yard than that at present on the roads.

BASEBALL

Decisions of Ump. Jacobson Gets Fans Going

At Riverside Park yesterday the Guelph aggregation were defeated by the Petes to the tune of 8—4. The Cook bunch were suffering from the heat, and aided by Umpy Jacobson used every possible means to defeat the boys, but they failed. The fans went wild at the decisions of Umps Jacobson, they were of a raw order and at one stage in the game McNeal was put out of the game for jogging his memory on a really bad decision. The Petes played a good game throughout and hit well when hits were needed.

Harry Brant in the third innings, first up, nailed the pill on the nose for a home run, and the crowd went frantic; Swartz was also present with the stick.

Penfold, the Petes new twirler, put up a good game, and although he got into many tight places, he always managed to avoid trouble.

Theodore Cook and Umpy Jacobson played well together, and although they were trimmed, credit must be given them for making a good try for the game.

Guelph had 13 hits, while the Petes made 12.

Bound and Gagged Robbed and Slain

MAN AND WOMAN SUSPECTED OF THE CRIME—DEAD MAN, WHO WAS A CARLTON STREET MILLINER, LEFT SUNDAY NIGHT.

LATER—A coroner's physician who performed an autopsy on Martin's body to-day gave it as his opinion that death was due to strangulation. It is the belief of detectives at work on the case that Martin was first murdered then dragged on to the bed where the body lay when discovered. A search of Martin's effects revealed nothing but a powder puff

Toronto, Aug. 13.- The police in New York believe that W. G. Martin, the millinery dealer from Toronto, found murdered last night in a furnished rooming house, was lured there to be robbed.

To-day they tried to trace Martin's movements on Thursday, and to find an old friend from Canada whom Martin spoke of meeting shortly before he disappeared.

On the theory that the murderer was familiar with the house where the body was found and gained entrance by a key without the landlord's knowledge they are looking for a "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson," who lived for a week in the room until they were put out by the landlord yesterday morning.

A Dozen Detectives.

Twelve detectives were assigned to the case to-day and the Chief of the Toronto police was asked to send information regarding the murdered man's habits and associates.

Early Monday evening Martin told Mrs. Anne Barrett, a local millinery buyer, that he had arranged to attend the theatre that night with this "friend from Canada." Mrs. Barrett said he intended to return to Toronto the following day.

Martin's body was found in bed bound and gagged. There was a bruise on the head and two stab wounds behind the ears. His pockets were turned inside out and his money and jewelry valued at several hundred dollars gone.

The Murdered Man.

The murdered man who left Toronto last Sunday night, is William Grieve Martin, milliner, 75½ Carlton street. His body was found in a house at 435 West 57th street, New York.

Mr. J. G. Martin, 48 Concord avenue, father of the victim, accompanied by Mr. W. L. Mortimer, left this morning for New York.

TERRIBLE DEATH DEVICE FOUND

Genius Jailed as Blackmailer--Could Have Terrorized The World

Salt Lake, Utah, Aug. 13. — Fate and the law have robbed the criminal of a tool with which he might have terrorized the world.

The tool was a tiny electrical spark which could be shot without wires, the far-reaching, unseen hand of murder and destruction.

W. L. Cummings, still a boy, who, since childhood, has studied electricity; a dreamy genius, impractical in a worldly sense, confiding and easily frightened, was perfecting a spark coil capable of throwing without wires an electrical spark 150 miles. His coil was not practical for commercial use. He hoped to adapt it to railway switch systems and in operating stock tickers on shipboard.

AT END OF RESOURCES.

He was at the end of his resources when a man—Cummings says his name is Charles Burge—asked him if he wanted to make some money. Cummings said he did.

"Then draw on the bottom of this letter," Cummings says Burge told him, "the picture of a suitcase containing dynamite, nitroglycerine and guncotton, and then arrange the wires to show how you could touch it off with your spark."

Cummings did as directed; then he read the letter. It was to Dorothy Bamberger, daughter of J. E. Bamberger, millionaire mining man, and demanded $1,000 or her life.

"Just look over the enclosed drawing and you will realize how helpless you are in our hands," it read.

THREAT FRIGHTENS HIM.

"Now," snarled Burge, "I've got you. If I don't get you, the police will; so you'd better stick to me and carry this through.

Frightened, Cummings consented. He said he would do anything that Burge directed. The letter was sent—as were others. Detectives caught him and he confessed.

Now he is awaiting trial. Burge, or perhaps it is another name now, has dropped out of sight. Just one more "job" has failed, and he has lost a "good thing"—a tool with which he might destroy every civilized community in the world.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 25c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 50c. Nugent's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaparilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

Pretty Lingerie Frock

One of the finest and softest of white lingerie stuffs for pretty frocks is white silk mousseline. In this model it gracefully lends itself to the girlish form. With the rich lace pattern embroidery and ball fringe, it is at once fashionable and unique. A fancy Pompadour girdle with sash ends, finished with wide bands of American Beauty satin is a most important detail to this Frenchy conceit. The dot upon the eye of the design, white satin button boots, and the ribbon hair bandeau fastened on either side with a ribbon rose completes a picture of ideal attractiveness.

Cleaning Combs

Combs should not be washed. The water is apt to split the teeth. Use an old, fairly stiff nail brush, working the bristles in and out, well, between the teeth until all dirt and fluff are removed. Then wipe comb carefully on a damp cloth.

Golf in Afghanistan

The Amir of Afghanistan has taken up golf keenly, says the Bombay correspondent of The London Daily Mail. He has had good links made in the neighborhood of Kabul. The natives have been much puzzled by the well-kept greens, but, recognizing that the game is a royal one, they have put the holes to practical purposes. They have got into the habit of placing petitions into the holes at night in the hope that they will reach the Amir when he is putting on the next day. But his Majesty's temper has apparently not been improved by the royal game. He resents this attempt to take advantage of his recreations, and has ordered that all such petitions are to be burned unread.

Goulding, Junior

George Beverley Olympic Goulding is the proud name which has been attached to the infant son of the champion walker of the world, George Goulding. The name "Olympic" was given the baby in commemoration of his father's great feat in winning the world's championship at walking at the Olympic games.

The Joy

The joy is in the doing,
Not in the deed that's done;
The swift and glad pursuing
Not the goal that's won.

The joy is in the seeing,
Not in what we see;
The ecstacy of vision,
Far and clear and free!

The joy is in the singing,
Whether heard or no;
The poet's wild, sweet rapture
And song's divinest flow!

The joy is in the being—
Joy of life and breath;
Joy of a soul triumphant,
Conqueror of death!

Is there a flaw in the marble?
Sculptor, do your best;
The joy is in the endeavor—
Leave to God the rest!

RED RIVER ROUTE

A Proposed Water Route From Fargo, N.D., to Hudson Bay

The latest scheme to obtain transportation to Hudson Bay, is by deepening the Red River, and establishing a navigable route from Fargo, N.D., to the Bay. Experts have been working on the practicability of such a project and it is believed to be possible to dredge out the shallow places in the river and make it possible for freight boats to travel with comparative safety. This work will be costly but once done should be a great boon to transportation to the Bay. It has been estimated that this water route to the Bay will be a saving in distance to haul freight of about 1,000 miles. This will be a great help to transportation from the Northern States. Winnipeg, which is the key to the West, will come in for a share of the benefit from this water route. At present boats travel from that city to Lake Winnipeg, but in event of the establishing of the boat route from Fargo to the Bay, this present water route will be much improved. The channel in many places is narrow and shallow, so it will be necessary to deepen in some places and broaden in others if a regular route for commercial freighting is to be established. This proposed route would mean much to transportation from Winnipeg and, if established, would be one more link between Western Canada and the Old Country markets.—Farmers Advocate.

Vanity Case in Fan

The liberal use of the vanity boxes on all occasions has been rather emparrassing to those conservative minded individuals who still cling to the belief that the toilet should be completed before leaving the house. It is permissible and seemingly a perfectly natural performance to brush the handkerchief across the face. One would never guess that by this innocent pastime the dust of powder was taking the shine from the face. The idea, ingenious as it is, can be easily managed. The glass powder holder is firmly imbedded in a lamb's wool powder puff with a button in the centre of one side. This button it attached by a buttonhole to a tiny square of linen which may be sewed to any handkerchief. The contrivance is in miniature, so that it is scarcely noticeable.

Another novelty of this kind is the fan of imitation ivory. The fan itself is a pretty little affair, and would not attract the attention for a moment if it were not for the tiny vanity box attached by white satin ribbon to the bone ring handle of the fan. This friendly little box has a mirror in the top lid and contains a tiny powder puff. The lid is on hinges and is very secure, so that there is no danger of leaving a trail of powder when using the fan.

EXTRACTING A SLIVER

None of the small accidents to which everyone is liable is more annoying than to have a splinter of wood stuck into the hand. Moreover, it is very painful if not promptly removed. If the wood of the splinter is soft, its removal is not easy, if attempted with a needle or other sharp instrument.

Steam may, however, be employed without inconvenience or pain, and is very effective. A wide-mouthed bottle, such as a milk bottle, should be filled nearly full of water as hot as the glass will stand, and the injured part placed over the mouth of the bottle, pressing down slightly and preventing any steam from escaping. This will cause the flesh to be drawn down, and in a minute or so the steam will extract the splinter, at the same time relieving all inflammation.

Trees in the West

One thing that the settler misses in certain parts of this gently rolling prairie is the tree. However, in another ten years' time even this will not be missed for we are conducting extensive experiments with many varieties of trees with a view to finding out those most adapted to the climate.

THE MONARCH OF THE ROCKIES.

Up to the present year, Mount Robson, the monarch of the Canadian Rockies, and the highest peak in that magnificent range, has only been conquered by one man, Rev. G. R. B. Kinney, of the Canadian Alpine Club, who succeeded in reaching the summit of this giant mountain 15,700 feet above the sea level in the year 1910, but this year, in connection with the annual camp of the Canadian Alpine Club in Mount Robson Park, several members of the camp, under the guidance of Conrad Kain, the best of the Swiss guides in Canada, have placed to their record the difficult feat of reaching the summit of this peak.

For those who are unaware of the location of this great mountain, the following will be of interest. Mount Robson lies only a few miles north of the valley of the Fraser River, to the west of Yellowhead Pass, through which the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway penetrates the mountain fastness on its way to the Pacific coast. It is visible from the railway, and it crosses the Grand Fork, a tributary of the Fraser, which runs right around the Western base of the great mountain. The view of mountain from that side is one of the most impressive in the whole range of Alpine scenery. The valley is only some 2700 feet above sea level, and the mountain rises straight, and in a sheer face of 11,000 feet, a face of black rock, ribbed with transverse bands of snow and lit up by a great hanging glacier on the eastern shoulder of the summit.

The whole of this territory has been set aside by the British Columbia Government as a Park Preserve, and it is now known as Mount Robson Park, covering an area of 1000 square miles. In this area the mountains are as high, and in many cases higher, than those of any one the Transcontinental routes, while the valleys are lower and wider, the above being one of great spaciousness.

The glaciers in this northern region are truly magnificent, and many of the individual peaks are remarkably bold in outline. There can be no doubt that the Upper Athabasca and Upper Fraser Valley, where it opens out into Yellowhead Lake or the Moose Lake, and the valleys of the Moose River and Grank Fork, all districts which have been opened up by the advent of the Grand Trunk Pacific, will become resorts of the climber and the lover of glorious scenery.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE.

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Gaelic Speaking Scottish Americans Locating in Canadian West

Among the recent arrivals into Western Canada was a most unique party composed of 35 Scotchmen, a portion of the Mackenzie clan, who migrated from Oklahoma. They all bear the name of Mackenzie, and are descendants of those members of their clan who came to the American continent with Lord Baltimore 200 years ago.

At that time they settled in the state of Maryland, and remained there and prospered as farmers for 175 years. Twenty-five years ago a portion of them attracted by the new territory which had been opened up in Western Oklahoma went into that state.

Norman Mackenzie, the leader of the party, states that they left Oklahoma owing to the failure of their crops for the past five years. They are fine looking men, all being typical Highlanders, tall and agile.

The peculiar thing about them is that they speak Gaelic perfectly but with a strong American accent which makes it difficult for their fellow countrymen, who come into contact with them, to understand.

Practical Hints in Care of Horses

For the treatment of horses while in the stable the following regulations are suggested:—

1. The best order of feeding is: Water, hay, water again, grain

2. Never give grain to a tired horse. Let him rest and nibble hay for an hour or two first.

3. Water the horses as often as possible; but let the horse that comes in hot drink a few swallows only.

4. Always water the horse after he has eaten his hay at night. This is important not only for his comfort, but for his health.

5. Do not forget to salt the horse once a week; or, better yet, keep salt always before him.

6. Give a bran mash Saturday night or Sunday noon; and on Wednesday night also, if work is slack. After a long day in very cold or wet weather a hot bran mash, half bran and half oats, with a tablespoonful of ginger will do the horse good

7. Keep a good, deep, dry bed under the horse while he is in the stable, day or night, on Sundays especially The more he lies down, the longer his legs and feet will last.

8. In order to do well the horse must be kept warm. Give him a blanket on cool nights in late summer or early fall, and an extra blanket on an extra cold night in winter

9. In cold rains do not tie up the horse's tail The long tail prevents the water from running down the inside of his legs.

10. Take off the harness, collar and all, when the horse comes in to feed. He will rest better without it

11 Never put a horse up dirty or muddy for the night. At least brush his legs and belly, and straighten his hair.

12. In hot weather, and in all weathers if the horse is hot, sponge his eyes, nose, dock, the harness marks, and the inside of his hind quarters when he first come in

13. When the horse comes in wet with rain, first scrape him, then blanket him, and rub his head, neck, loins and legs. If the weather is cold put on an extra blanket in 20 minutes Change the wet blanket when the horse dries. Do not wash the legs. Rub them dry, or bandage loosely with thick bandages. It is far more important to have the legs warm and dry than clean.

14. Examine the horse's feet when he comes in, and wash them if he does not wear pads. If a horse in the city is not shod in front with pads, tar and oakum, which is the best way, it is absolutely necessary to keep his feet soft by packing them or by wrapping a wet piece of old blanket or carpet around the foot, or by applying some hoof dressing, inside and out, at least three times a week.

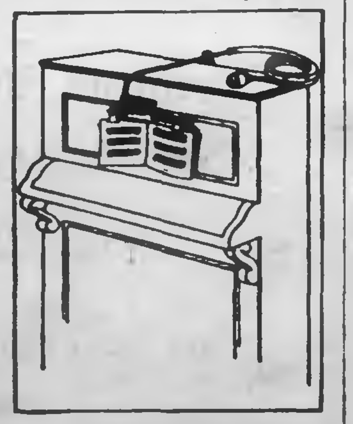
15. Speak gently to the horse, and do not yell at him. He is a gentleman by instinct, and should be treated as such. The stable is the horse's home, and it is your privilege to make it a happy one.

While city and country conditions are widely different, the proper care of a good horse is practically the same either in the city or on the farm, this being especially true of draft horses. These suggestions are, therefore, of great value to those farmers who love good horses and are anxious to give them the care they deserve.

SHEET MUSIC TURNER

Squeeze Bulb With Hand or Foot and Leaves of Book Turn

Any piano player will testify to the annoyance of having to turn a page of music in the midst of a difficult passage. In concerts it is necessary to to have some one else do it—that is, it was necessary before a pianist devised the apparatus shown here. The music rack has a series of horizontal arms at the top, each arm with a clip on it, and each clip is made fast to the top of a page of the score. These arms are swung from right to left through the agency of a pneumatic cylinder, and the pressure in the cylinder is caused by squeezing the bulb at the end of a line of hose. This bulb can be placed on the floor near the player's foot, and he or she can press it without taking hands from the keyboard. Or it can be held by some one standing near and squeezed at the performer's end. The page will be turned instantly, with no fumbling.



NO FUMBLING OF PAGES

WOMEN IN A DUEL

A duel with pitchforks took place at Dijon, France, between two women. They both worked in a biscuit factory and were continually quarreling. The women in their workroom, tired of the perpetual bickering, advised them to settle their differences by a fight. The two women armed themselves with pitchforks and fought in a lonely field. News of the duel soon spread, and the police hurried to the field, where they found one of the women lying unconscious with a wound in her head.

HOW GOLD PENS ARE MADE

Platinum Ore the Ingredient, and the Process is Something of a Complicated Matter.

Metallic iridium, used so extensively for the points of gold pens, is made from the powder obtained in the wet way from platinum ore by beating to a high heat in a sand crucible and then adding stick phosphorus. The iridium, which cannot be melted alone, is thus fused in the form of an iridium phosphide. To remove the phosphorus the phosphide is heated with lime and the iridium is left in the form of a hard, white mass. It is now so hard that it cannot be filed or cut and is broken up into small pieces for soldering to the points of gold pens These small pieces are ground to the right size on a copper disk wheel with emery or carborundum. It is said that an ounce of iridium will make from 5,000 to 10,000 pen points. It has also been found that the iridium thus prepared is practically as hard as the ruby. No steel tools can make any impression upon it. At one time much less expensive than platinum, iridium now is worth more on account of the demand for hard platinum, in which the iridium is the hardening agent.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CHAIR A LIFE PRESERVER

It Also Can be Used for a Washstand or Mattress

An Englishman has shown the fertility of his imagination by inventing a steamer chair that is also a life preserver, a wash stand and a mattress. The framework of the chair is like that of other steamer chairs without the foot rest, but the body of it is a roll of cork-filled canvas, swung loosely enough to give and afford a comfortable reclining seat. By turning the chair upside down, the inventor claims, it can be transformed into a very handy washstand, while by removing the canvas and laying it flat on deck or floor a fair substitute for a mattress is provided. All the passenger needs do is keep close to his chair. If the ship should spring a leak while he is sitting in the chair, or washing on the washstand, or sleeping on the mattress, he may safely leap overboard with the contrivance as its buoyancy will keep him afloat.

POLO.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 13.—The army polo team did not need its six-point handicap in a special match with the Wanderers at the Point Judith Country Club, its good team work earning a victory 11 to 4½. Rathborne of the Wanderers was the individual star, all the five goals made by his team being scored by him. Point Judith and the Philadelphia Country Club played only three periods to a tie score of 3½ apiece. Against the Magpies Point Judith had better luck, winning 3 to 2½. The Magpies in a later matched evened up for this defeat by beating the Philadelphia Country Club, 3½ to 2.

BASEBALL.

Chicago, Adg. 13.—Pitcher Ed Stack, recently obtained from Brooklyn in the trade for Ed Reulbach, made his debut in a Chicago uniform today and held Philadelphia to four hits, only two of which were bunched, and the locals won, 5 to 2. Manager Evers's men bunched hits behind bases on balls and an error and made their scores.

The local manager disputed Umpire Emslie's decision at second base when Knabe stole, and was ordered to the clubhouse.

Boston, Aug. 13.—Lively slugging, reminiscent of the early part of the season of 1911, featured some of the "big" league games yesterday. Among the long hits made were seven home runs, Luderus of the Philadelphia Nationals leading with two of them in a 16 to 3 defeat of Chicago. Becker aided his team in the Cubs' defeat with one homer, and the others were made by Hoblitzel of Cincinnati, Bodie of the Chicago Americans, Wingo of the St. Louis Nationals and Wilson of Pittsburgh. Two years ago the unusual amount of slugging was popularly accounted for by the theory that the balls were made with an extra live core. Later an experiment made by a National League umpire and a Boston newspaperman indicated that at least some of the balls then in use were over weight just enough heavier than ordinarily to make the hurlers unable to curve them much.

RING.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 13. — The manager of Freddie Welsh, the English light-weight champion, said it could be definitely stated that Welsh would be Willie Ritchie's opponent in the fight scheduled here for the championship on Labor Day. He said an agreement with the promoter, with the exception of a minor detail or two, had been reached.

A dispute is looked for over the weight and the selection of a referee. Ritchie is understood to favor a Californian for the third man in the ring, while the Welsh camp probably will insist on Charlie White of New York.

TENNIS.

East Providence, Aug. 13.—J. D. E. Jones and Stanley Henshaw of Providence retained the state tennis championship in doubles by defeating E. H. Whitney, captain of the Harvard team, and new Rhode Island singles title holder, and H. A. Mackinney of Providence, at the Agawam Hunt. The score was 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. Whitney, after winning the singles championship yesterday, showed a distinct reversal of form in the doubles matches and his playing was inferior to that of his partner. The winners played well together and made many placements. N. M. Voss of Boston captured the consolation cup, defeating E. L. Thurston of the Metacomet Club, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3.

BASEBALL.

Worcester, Aug. 13.—News reached here today of the death of John H. "King" Gaffney, who for 26 years was one of the best known umpires in the American and National Leagues. He died suddenly to-day in a house at 169 East 65th street, New York. Gaffney was born in Boston and came to Worcester when he was seven years old. He started his career on the diamond with the Live Oaks of Lynn and while with this club he threw out his arm which caused him to give up playing the national pastime.

Through the influence of Samuel E. Winslow, who was captain of the Harvard team, he was engaged during the season as an umpire of college games. His ability as an arbitrator became so well known that he was later secured to handle the indicator in the National League during the presidency of Nick Young. Later he accepted a similar position in the American League and when his eyesight began to fail him he sought a managerial berth.

He became manager of the Washington team and his popularity in his new berth continued to be as great as when he was a "ump." He won the title of "King" of umpires.

CAREFUL DRESSER IS KING GEORGE

But He Has Three Valets to Assist Him—Little Bothered About Visiting Tailor

King George has three valets—a chief and two assistant valets. The chief valet has been with his Majesty for the past twelve years. His duties are to superintend the care of the Royal wardrobes, to attend on the King in the Royal dressing-room and to take all instructions concerning the King's clothes which may be given him either directly by his Majesty or by one of the private secretaries.

His Majesty's clothes are kept in a large room adjoining the dressing-room. The walls of the room are lined with wardrobes which are divided into two sections—one section contains the King's uniforms, and the other his Majesty's ordinary morning, walking and evening suits of clothes.

Overnight, the chief valet is instructed regarding the uniforms, if any, and the suits of clothes which the King will require for wear the following day, and these are placed by the assistant valets in the Royal dressing-room. Before a suit or uniform is sent into the Royal dressing-room it is inspected by the chief valet, to see that it is properly brushed, ironed and ready for wear.

Makes Many Changes

The King, it may be noted, never wears the same suit two days running. As a rule, his Majesty would not wear the same suit oftener than once in the week, and when it had been worn about two dozen times it would be put out of the Royal wardrobes.

Kin[illegible] customarily rises at seven o'clock, when he takes a cup of coffee, which the chief valet brings him directly the King enters his dressing-room. His Majesty then has his bath, which is always a cold one; whilst the King is in his bath-room, the chief valet puts the links and studs into his Majesty's shirt, puts out an assortment of ties on the dressing-table, and places the boots or shoes the King intends to wear on a mahogany boot-stand, and then retires.

The King dresses himself without the aid of a valet, except when putting on a uniform, when the chief valet is generally in attendance. When the King travels, the chief valet superintends the packing of his Majesty's luggage, which is done by the assistant valets. A list of everything that is to be packed is made out by the chief valet, and on the arrival of the luggage at the King's destination the list is checked over by the chief valet, whilst the portmanteaus are being unpacked.

The King's chief valet is a well-educated and very well-informed man. He is a first-rate linguist, speaking French, German and Italian in addition to his native tongue, perfectly. He has travelled all over the world with the King, and is known and held in high estem by all the great European monarchs, from whom he has received during their visits to England many tokens of their esteem.

Ordinary New Clothes

King George rarely or never tries on a suit of clothes, and seldom is seen by his tailors who have the honor of his Majesty's custom. When the King desires to order any new clothes he informs the chief valet of the fact, who gets patterns for the King's inspection.

When his Majesty has selected the pattens, the chief valet gives the order to the tailor, and the clothes, when ready for trying on, are fitted on a dummy figure of the King.

The chief valet inspects the suit when it is fitted on the model, and gives the tailor all the necessary directions concerning it. A suit is generally fitted on the model three times.

At the first annual supper of the English Society in Scotland held in the Grand Hotel, Glasgow, Mr. J. Walmsley, who presided, urged on Englishmen resident in Glasgow to join the society, which was inaugurated four years ago.

Postman's Long Service

Mr. H. T. Lee, senior postman of Hartlepool, who retired on a pension after forty-one years' service, calculates that he travelled 160,000 miles, and delivered about 6,530,000 letters and parcels. He served under seven Postmasters.

Bandmaster of the Titanic

A memorial to Mr. Wallace Hartley, the leader of the Titanic band, in the form of an oil painting, "Outward Bound," representing a small boat with a waterman looking out to an ocean liner, was unveiled in the Leeds Art Gallery by the Lord Mayor. It is the gift of the professional musicians of Leeds.

Those Who Vote to Pay Rates

Sir E. A. Hambro, of Milton Abbey, Blandford, informed the cottage tenants of his estate that the time has arrived when those who are entitled to vote should pay their own rates, and that henceforth each tenant will be required to pay the rates on their cottages.

Value of Ancient Lead Pump

Three men were accused at Bromley of the theft of a lead pump said to be over 200 years old. The owner, Mr. E. H. Beckett, of Birmingham, said that he acquired the pump for museum purposes. Lead of the age of this pump generally contained silver. The men were committed for trial.

Too Many Picture Houses

"Are there too many moving picture shows in Dublin," was the question raised by the Lord Mayor in declaring open a new picture palace. His lordship said th' was the last function of the kind he intended to be connected with in the city, because he was firmly convinced that it was time for the municipal authority to cry "Halt!"

"The Metropolis of Squalor"

In the course of an address in Glasgow on the subject of housing, Professor Geddes described Aberdeen as a city of dignity and stately granite; Dundee a tragic city of despair; Edinburgh, the metropolis of squalor; while Glasgow was the metropolis of industry, at once a place of high initiative and a warning to the world.

Music as an Anæsthetic

Sir Charles Cameron, in presiding at a distribution of prizes at the College of Music, Dublin, told, midst laughter, of a case where instead of chloroform a patient being operated upon got a choir to sing for him, with the result that he was perfectly unconscious of the operation. Music, he said, was nice and effective in nervous diseases, but he excluded German bands.

Humor at the Board

An amusing resolution was moved but subsequently withdrawn, at a meeting of the Cork Board of Guardians, calling on all officials "who cannot prove their relationship with at least threee members of this Board, to resign immediately so that their places may be filled by our friends, as we are of opinion that this course will end all disputes and complaints in future."

Child Sleeping in a Box

At Banff, Scotland, James Farquhar, a farm servant and his wife were found guilty of ill-treating a child, aged five years, by causing it to sleep in a box in a cold, damp closet with an earthen floor. The box contained only a little straw for bedding and an old quilt for a cover. Sheriff Stuart passed sentence of a month's imprisonment on each.

The King and Sandwichmen's Banquet

Two thousand sandwichmen of London were entertained at a dinner at the Alexandra Trust, through a fund promoted by a newspaper. The King and the Prince of Wales had each sent a cheque for $50 towards the fund.

Public Statue by Countess Sculptor

A statue of Florence Nightingale, by Countess Feodoria Gleichen, is to be erected as a national memorial in front of the Derby Royal Infirmary, in her native county.

A Strange Fish

A curious fish, which at first sight looked like a whale, was washed up on the beach at Fortrose, Scotland. Its mouth was situated on the under side of a large rounded nose, and contained only six teeth, and these were on the under jaw. Side fins were entirely wanting. Its eyes—very small were situated in a line continuous with the mouth. In length the animal measured ten feet, its tail resembling that of a whale. The diameter of the body—measured at almost any part—was three feet. A fin, shaped not unlike a rudder, was situated on the back midway between head and tail, and measured eighteen inches in length, while two narrow fins two feet long were situated under the head. The color over the whole body was yellowish white.

NO OPERATION FOR GALL-STONES

No operation will be necessary for Gall-stones, Kidney-stones, or Gravel—SANOL, the German remedy discovered by a great German scientist, will surely relieve the agony of the sufferer from these complaints. It will also cure with equal certainty and promptness kidney trouble, lumbago, and all other diseases caused by the presence of uric acid in the system. It is also most valuable as a preventive for these diseases and will often prevent a serious illness if taken when the first symptoms appear.

Save the pain, danger and cost of an operation by using

SANOL

Relief will be rapid, the deposits will pass off rapidly and without pain. We have addresses and strong testimonials—some written from residents of Winnipeg, to the number of 300. We have 37 testimonials from one small Alberta town. We have a most convincing testimonial from one Winnipeg lady who passed several large gall-stones, after taking one bottle of SANOL. We are willing and anxious to furnish you with the addresses of these people.

REVEALED BY FINGER NAILS

How Observant Person May Judge With Absolute Certainty the Character of His Neighbor.

It is always amusing to speculate on the character of one's neighbor. A very simple aid in so doing is to watch the nails. If a man's or woman's nails are long and slender, you may be quite certain that person is not so robust physically, as the possessor of short, broad nails.

Whereas men and women with the long, narrow type of nails are inveterate visionaries, those having short nails are almost always conspicuous by the strength of their logical powers. It is the latter who make the best and most reliable critics.

A further and almost certain characteristic of long nailed people is their intense depreciation of themselves and their own efforts in any branch of work. The feeling almost amounts to pessimism with them. Such a point of view however, seldom worries those possessing short nails. In fact, more often than not rather the reverse is the case; they are inclined to be oversure of themselves.

BACK BROKEN, WALKS.

Waldorf Miller of New Rochelle, N. Y., who contrary to the prediction of physicians, has lived for nearly 19 months with a broken back, celebrated his Christmas by going out for his first walk in the streets since July 3, 1911, when he received the injury while driving. His case had received so much publicity that victims of similar accidents in all parts of the country sent him letters, to which he replied with Christmas greetings. A neighbor prepared an unusual present for him in the shape of a silk quilt with the names of 400 young women embroidered on it. Each girl embroidered her own name, and paid ten cents for the privilege, the money being given to Miller with the quilt.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions.

Duties.—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside of his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts Price, $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SEALED TENDERES addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Toronto Harbour Works," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Monday, August 25, 1913, for the construction of a Sea Wall, Breakwater, Ship Channel and Retaining Walls at the City of Toronto, in the County of York, Province of Ontario.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the offices of the District Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ont.; Harbour Commissioner's Office, 76 Adelaide St. West, Toronto; H. J. Lamb, Esq., District Engineer, Windsor, Ont., and J. L. Michaud, Esq., District Engineer, Post Office, Montreal, Que.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to five per cent (5 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, July 12, 1913.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—44297.

Women as Writers

The proportion of women in journalism is larger than in any one of the callings open to women except teaching. There are 30,098 journalists in the United States, of whom 2,193 are women, or 7 per cent. In law there are 1,010 women out of 114,703 in all in this occupation, and 7,399 among 184,226 practitioners in the medical profession. If the proportion of women were known in architecture and in the higher ranks of teaching, the comparison would be as favorable to journalism. It is only in the field of writing that the woman is paid on the same basis as the man, receives the same consideration and obtains as large a return. In every other field there is some discrimination against the woman, but a publisher pays as large a percentage on the novel by a woman as on that written by a man. Women have received some of the largest sums paid in fiction.

Cost of Crime and Disease

According to a blue-book on crime in Scotland, the cost of maintaining an ordinary prisoner is $125 per annum. A convict costs $185, and a criminal lunatic $245.

TOO MUCH BETTING IN ENGLAND ON ATHLETICS

Holway, American Sprinter, Says English Pros. Waste Time Fooling the Handicapper

Charles E. Holway, the American professional sprinter, who donned spiked shoes and competed in various countries, declares that if there was not so much betting in England there would be better athletes in that country. English professionals, he declares, waste time and energy trying to fool the handicapper and this spoils them in the long run. Holway has met and defeated some of the best professionals in the world and has much information concerning athletic conditions the world over. Some day, he says, Australia will produce an athletic team that will surprise the sharps. The climate there, he declares, is just suited for athletics and only the small population prevents it from keeping abreast with the countries, which enter teams in the Olympics.

Big Fine for Dope Fiend

A record fine for a "dope fiend" was that imposed at Montreal by Recorder Geoffrion on George Gervais. Gervais when arrested had two large packages of cocaine in his possession. He had been previously convicted of selling the drugs, and the Recorder imposed a fine of $500, or six months in jail.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

AUGUST 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Maine Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

NEW ELECTRIC HEATER

In Reality a Carpet Containing Heating Element

A novel electric heating system has been brought out by a Zurich firm of electrical engineers—namely the heating of a carpet laid upon the floor. It is claimed by the inventors that this is the most rational, effective, and economical method of heating, inasmuch as the surface with which the feet come into contact is raised to a predetermined temperature, as it is well known that if the feet are kept warm the whole body is comfortable. The device comprises a heating element which is run through the carpet, and which is attached by a flex and socket to a wall-plug. This heating element is flexible, and is protected by a stout covering to preserve it from wear and tear; it is also waterproof. The system is so devised that all possibility of overheating the carpet is avoided. The invention can be adapted to any size of carpet, from the cover of a footstool or a rug to a large carpet covering the whole floor of a room. The invention can also be applied with equal facility to a bed and to medical appliances where heat is desired, thereby dispensing with the hot-water bottle and other conventional devices. The average person might fear the danger of fire from such a system, but with this device all such apprehension is unfounded.

INSECTICIDE SIFTER

Scatters Dry Preparation and Lessens the Labor

For the destruction of insect pests that affect low-growing vines or bushes a New York man has patented the sifting apparatus shown in the illustration. It is designed for the use of insecticide in powder form and applies arsenate of lead, lime, slugshot, paris green compounds and similar preparations with equal facility. A cylindrical can with a perforated lower portion contains the powder and by a regulating device the amount of poison scattered can be governed. The old-fashioned way of spraying vines was to make a liquid solution and to cover an acre of ground required a great deal of unnecessary labor, owing to the weight of the water in the mixture and the fact that only a comparatively small area could be sprayed with one load. It is claimed that this sifter will spray an acre an hour.

NEW VEGETABLES

Potatoes and Grain 1800 Miles North of Edmonton

T. Stefanson, the Arctic explorer and discoverer of the white Eskimo, in a lecture at the University of North Dakota declared that various varieties of potatoes and several different kinds of grains are successfully grown by the Eskimos 1,800 miles north of Edmonton, Canada. The discovery of this vegetation, made by Stefanson on his last Arctic trip, has been a big revelation, as it has been popularly supposed that the vegetation line was far south of there. Mr. Stefanson also proved by his expedition that the Mackenzie river is one of the finest streams in the world for navigation. He travelled on this river for over 1,300 miles, even though he had been told that it was not navigable for any great distance. According to the speaker, the summer in the Arctic region is more feared than the cold weather on account of the mosquitoes. The thermometer goes as high as 105 degrees above zero in the summer and rarely falls lower than fifty degrees below in the winter.

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods acts, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has lands it has won its way, and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size, 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Ctarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

In the near future the Board of Water Commissioners intend to pass a by-law providing that on streets where the city proposes to construct pavements, property owners must give two months' notice of their desire to have the service laid from the water main.

Guelph Fishermen.

As the Guelph team do not seem able to get our own Trout by the gills, two of them went fishing in the Otonabee, below Rye's boathouse yesterday morning. Nefau, the Indian catcher, paddled, and Fryer, left field, fished. They landed a maskinonge weighing approximately 15 pounds. The team, who are at the White House, had the 'lunge for dinner yesterday.

Little Boy Drowned.

A little lad named Bayes, son of Mr. H. D. Bayes, of McGill street, while playing on the Lock street landing near the Otonabee river with some small companions, yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock, fell into the river. His screams attracted some neighbors who took the lad from the river in an unconscious condition. Dr. Scott was called and commenced resuscitation which after long and continued application proved of no avail.

An Indian's Narrow Escape.

Lindsay, Aug. 13.—In returning from Stoney Lake Regatta about 2 o'clock this morning, Messrs. Wm. Rosnigh, Ed. Robson and W. G. Hall heard faint shouts eminating from the woods between the channel and the shore, in the vicinity of No. 6 light house. After chasing around for a time a man was discovered in an exhausted condition clinging to a stump. A green canoe covered with weeds was near by but into which he was unable to creep.

WHEN FISHING WAS GOOD

Mr. Mark Spencely was in a reminiscent mood yesterday. He noted how he, some 30 years ago, was laying the foundation of the town hall at Chemong Indian village and was boarding with Mr. Dan Whetung, the present stage driver. He said that every morning Dan would go out for about half an hour and return with two or three lunge. Dan would have the lunge scaled and cleaned and in the frying pan half an hour after they were caught.

ANOTHER CAR LOAD ARRIVED

Alderman Duffus, the well-known automobile agent, has just received another car load of popular Ford cars. These cars have been made good in every case which accounts for the enormous sale they are having not only in Peterborough but also throughout Canada and the United States. The new 1914 prices now prevail which will still further increase the sales. Touring cars are now selling for $650 and roadsters for $600.

He Was False Prophet.

At yesterday's police court, Peter McRae pleaded guilty to having been drunk. He had been working in Douro and the "bright-lights" of the city were too much. He was fined $2, to be paid forthwith. It was paid. McRae yesterday had about $100 in his possession on arrival. He told one of the local police that he was here for a time, and added that he would have the station full of alcoholic celebrants by night. However, he alone was pinched.

Special Policeman Middleton of the Red Mill, made the arrest.

Omemee Mill Burned.

Omemee, Aug. 13.—The saw and shingle mill owned and operated by Messrs. Courtney & Son fell a prey to the devouring element of fire on Monday afternoon about two o'clock. The fire brigade were quickly on the spot with the hand engine and the bucket brigade were earlier at work fighting the flames which began on the west side near the shingle saw. The saw-dust and clippings of the yard and the building itself were as dry as tinder and burned as fiercely as matchwood.

SINGLE FARE TO HAMILTON.

In connection with the Hamilton Centennial Industrial Exhibition and Old Home Week, the Grand Trunk Railway System will sell round trip tickets at single fare, plus twenty-five cents, to Hamilton, Ont., from stations, Kingston, Renfrew and west in Canada, good going Saturday, August 9th, to Tuesday, August 12th, and at single fare from stations in Canada where the lowest one-way first class fare to Hamilton does not exceed $2.50 (minimum charge 25c.) good going Monday, August 11th, to Saturday, August 16th. All tickets will be valid for return until Wednesday, August 20th, 1913.

Local Foresters at Port Hope.

Yesterday morning at 9 o'clock the members of Court Stanley, No. 7680, accompanied by a large number of friends took train for Port Hope. The members of Court Stanley, in regalia and headed by the Citizen's Band, marched from their lodge room to the G.T.R. depot. Bro. West Edwards, in full forester's attire, with green velvet coat and high boots, marshalled the procession. At Port Hope a Forester's field day was held. Lodges from Belleville, Campbellford, Bowmanville and other places held a procession with several bands. Mr. Edwards, mounted on a horse, was Grand Marshall.

JUST ONE APPLICATION AND THE HAIRS ARE GONE

(Toilet Talks)

The discomforting hairy growths on lip or cheek vanish following the application of a paste made by mixing enough powdered delatone and water to cover the objectionable hairs The paste is rubbed off after 2 or 3 minutes and with it comes every trace of hair. The skin should then be washed to remove the remaining delatone and it will be firm and free from spot or blemish. No pain attends this method and rarely is more than one application necessary.

Rubbing pyroxin on eyebrows makes them come in thick and glossy, and short eyelashes will grow long and curly if a little pyroxin be applied at lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. Be careful and don't get any pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE.

Men were engaged yesterday at Hunter and George streets putting a new length of pipe in the gas works' main.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Archibald left yesterday for their home in Scotland, after a four-months' visit with their son, Mr. A. Archibald of this city.

Great interest is already being manifested in the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which is to open on Sept. 11.

Mr. Jack Pattie, of Chemong Park captured a 19-lb. 'lunge while out fishing on Tuesday morning on Chemong Lake.

Rev. F. J. Sawers has been notified from the Boy Scout Headquarters at Toronto, that there will be no Boy Scout camp at Toronto Exhibition this year.

W. H. F. Dixon, whose escapade in Port Hope with the Saddler girl, has been reported will probably be brought to Peterborough to face a charge of abduction.

The Steamer Stoney Lake yesterday ran an excursion under auspices of the Sunday School of that place, from Cold Springs, Otonabee to Gore's Landing.

Mr. Frank Montgomery has just completed some improvements about the hotel yard. He has erected an eight foot fence to the West of the property and placed 8 foor gates on both the West and North sides.

Ernest Young, who fell from the platform at the factory of the Wm. English Canoe Co. Saturday morning, and was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from a fracture of the skull, is still unconscious and his condition is critical.

Mr. McKeeley, of the Examiner staff, was in Millbrook yesterday. He reports that the potato bugs are so bad there that farmers and gardeners are shooting them with revolvers or surrounding the patches with copies of our E. E. C.

It would possibly be a libellous assertion to say publicly that yesterday's umpire favored the Guelph team. There is no hesitation in stating that whilst Jacobson may know how to play marbles, or ping pong, he has a whole lot to learn about baseball.

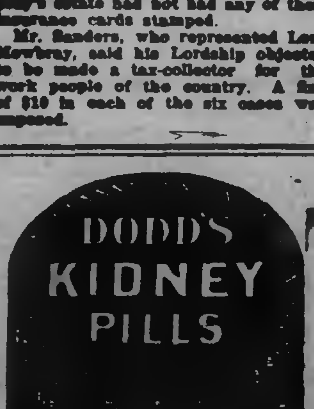
Insurance Act Cases

Lord Mowbray, Segrave and Stourton, of Allerton Park, near Knaresborough, Yorks, was summoned at Knaresborough Police Curt for failure to pay contributions as required under the insurance act. There were six separate cases. Evidence was given to show that the men, chiefly employed as bricklayers on Lord Mowbray's estate had not had any of their insurance cards stamped.

Mr. Sanders, who represented Lord Mowbray, said his Lordship objected to be made a tax-collector for the work people of the country. A fine of $10 in each of the six cases was imposed.



LARGEST PIPE ORGAN

The largest organ in the world is claimed for the new St. Michael's Church, which was dedicated at Hamburg in the presence of the Emperor of Germany. It is over 57 feet high and is divided into five stories. Its largest pipe is 37 feet long, has a diameter of 21 inches, and weighs nearly 1,200 pounds. The smallest pipe is 1 1-5 inches long. The organ is played on five different keyboards each containing 61 keys, and it has 32 pedals. There are more than 1,000 stops and buttons for controlling the tones. Two electrical motors, each of five horsepower, supply the air pressure.

IN TURKISH CHOLERA CAMP

The scenes of death and desolation and despair which are part and parcel of the kingdom of the god of battles seldom have been brought so vividly to the minds of peaceful people as in the terrible realistic pictures of Turkish cholera camps and in the dispatches of hardened war correspondents, whose souls sickened at the horrors they witnessed. There were several cholera camps, but the most dreadful examples of irremediable suffering and wholesale deaths, under conditions that made death a welcome friend, were seen in the main camp at Hademkeni, a short distance behind the headquarters of Nazim Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief, on the Tchatalja lines.

"The horrible scenes in the villages in the rear of the army pale altogether into insignificance when compared with the horrors of Hademkeni," wrote a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, "where the remnants of the army defeated at Lule Burgas were finally rallied. Three days ago I rode over the hills from the place where I was encamped, intending to visit Hademkeni. I mounted the last slope which hid the valley in which it lies, and then I was brought to a standstill by the awful babel of sounds which arose from beneath me. I was gazing into the valley of the shadow of death. There is a station at Hademkeni, and a train was in the station. It was black with the most wretched specimens of sick humanity seeking to escape from the dread specter. The large square in the center of Hademkeni resembled a successful fly-paper in midsummer. It was covered with the corpses of the dead and the writhing bodies of the living in all attitudes—some prone, some sitting, some kneeling, some constantly shifting, some with hands clasped in supplication. In some parts of the area the dead were piled in heaps; in others those still living were almost as closely packed. This shocking lake of misery was being constantly fed by rivulets of stretcher-bearers, bringing in fresh victims from the camps and forts, and by others who crawled in of their own accord, seeming to prefer to end their days in the company of their fellow men or else expecting to find succor."

Trying to Please.

"What makes you so sure that man is going to propose to Gladys?" asked Gladys' mother.

"I have told him the same story five times," replied Gladys' father, "and he laughs at it every time."—Washington Star.

Wonderful Nervous System

EARLY INDISCRETIONS AND EXCESSES HAVE UNDERMINED YOUR SYSTEM

The nerves control all actions of the body so that anything that debilitates them will weaken all organs of the system. Early Indiscretions and Excesses have ruined thousands of promising young men. Unnatural Drains sap their vigor and vitality and they never develop to a proper condition of manhood. They remain weaklings, mentally, physically and sexually. How you feel? Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, debilitating dreams, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks, careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, etc.

AN APPRECIATION.

A prominent citizen of Washington, D.C., who is sojourning at the Royal Muskoka Hotel, Lake Rosseau, writes to the Grand Trunk, through whom he made his arrangements, as follows:

> "I am well pleased with this place, which is just what I was looking for; climate superb, beautiful views, nice bathing, everything else satisfactory. Thanks for recommending it. The Royal Muskoka this year is popular, and everyone seems to be enjoying themselves."

During May and June, 1913, more live foxes were shipped through Saskatoon, Sask., than for many years, over $100,000.00 worth passed through this city inside of one month.

11 live beavers from Algonquin National Park of Ontario were recently sent to the Riverdale Park Zoo, Toronto, beavers being so plentiful at Algonquin Park as to require thinning out. Toronto sent 6 of the beavers to Dublin, Ireland, in exchange for 2 lion cubs valued at $500.00. The Dublin Zoo is noted for the fine lion cubs it raises.

While on a trip to Algonquin Park in May 1st, Dr. Skinner of Guelph, caught, among other good ones, a grey trout measuring 33 inches, and weighing 17 pounds.

THE TRENT CANAL NO LONGER WILL BE COMPLETED AT ONCE

A Record of Work by Hon. Frank Cochrane, The Hard-Working Minister

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 14.—Surprise not unmingled with amusement has been awakened all over Canada by the announcement that Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, intends to have the Trent Valley Canal a going concern by 1915. This funny little canal hitherto has been classed as an apparatus for carrying constituencies, rather than as a serious transportation proposition. It is nearly a hundred years since the proposal was first made to utilize the Trent waterway, Rice Lake, and Lake Simcoe as a short cut from Lake Ontario to the Georgian Bay. It is a great many years since operations were first commenced, and it is a good deal more than twenty years since the first excavations was done on the present canal. The Laurier Government spent millions of dollars upon the enterprise; it dug out the centre of the system; it tried to build a branch at Newmarket; and it quite omitted to provide either the Georgian Bay or Lake Ontario exit. Nobody in Canada expected the canal ever to be finished, as it was looked upon as a purely political expedient for spending money.

Cochrane Finishing the Canal.

Now comes word that Mr. Cochrane actually means to finish it and to allow real boats to ply upon it. It really seems contrary to the British North America Act, but this new-fashioned minister of railways and canals is so pushing the work that the Trenton end will be finished in 1914 and ready for use in 1915. He further is calling for tenders for the Port Severn section at the Georgian Bay end; the remainder of the work between Port Severn and Lake Couchiching will be advertised in three sections sometime this coming Fall, and here again it is hoped that the work on these sections may be completed in 1915. It will seem odd to miss the votes for the Trent Canal, but Mr. Cochrane seems to have made up his mind on the matter.

Work on the New Welland.

This example illustrates the vigorous way the minister has pushed forward the work of his department since he was placed in charge of it. For example, the New Welland Canal, after a vast amount of talk, is actually under way. The contract for Section number One has been let to the Dominion Dredging Company of Ottawa at rather less than $3,500,000, the date for completion being set at April 1, 1917. This section is three miles long and is one of nine, tenders for which will be called in succession with as little delay as possible between each. The total length of the canal will be twenty-five miles, and the difference in level between the two lakes, 325½ feet, is to be overcome by seven lift locks, each having a lift of 46½ feet. These locks are to be 800 feet long by 80 feet wide in the clear, and with thirty feet of water over the mitre sills at extreme low stages in the lakes. The width of the canal at the bottom will be 200 feet, and at first the canal reaches will be excavated to a depth of twenty-five feet only, but all structures will be sunk to the thirty feet depth, so that the canal can be deepened at any future date by simply dredging out the reaches. The new canal will in part follow the route of the present canal and will in part take an entirely new course. Harbour works will be undertaken at Port Colborne to ensure quiet water in the harbor.

HAILEYBURY GIRL SAVED "BY MIRACLE"

Lost and Without Food Five Days Little Child Will Soon Recover.

Cobalt, Ont., Aug. 14.—By nothing short of a miracle little Grace Cooper, a five year old child, who was lost since Friday afternoon on Burnt Island, midway between Ontario and Quebec, and about three miles from Haileybury, where her mother lives, was found alive and well yesterday afternoon, five days and three hours after her disappearance. The child was found by C. H. Burton and John McLennan, of Haileybury, on the east shore of the Island, about two miles from the camp from which she had strayed. Her head was resting on one log and her feet on another, and caught in this position she had evidently been unable to free herself.

"Will you come with me?" said Mr. Burton, when the rescuers discovered her. "No," replied Grace. "Will I take you to your mother, then?" and the child stretched out her arms and cried "Yes."

A gasoline launch arrived most opportunely, just as the child and her rescuers returned to the main party, and she was rushed back to Haileybury for medical attention with all expedition. Grace looks none the worse for her terrible experience, and Dr. Arnold says that all she requires is careful nursing.

How the child reached the other side of the island and was found alive is a mystery. The bush in many places is almost impenetrable to a strong man, and want of food and the wet weather, with the cold, might have caused the death of many a seasoned bushman lost for such a period

CONVICTS RISE UP IN MUTINY

New York, Aug. 14.—As a sequel to the $200,000 fire in the Sing Sing prison yards, 150 of the second and third termers, the most feared men in the institution, took matters into their own hands today and precipitated a mutiny which threatened for a time to result in a concerted attempt at jail delivery.

The new warden, James N. Clancy and Principal Keeper James Connoughton had to yield to the mutinous convicts. Several hundred windows in the prison house were smashed before the mutineers were corralled in their cells.

SURRENDERS TITLES FOR LOVE OF GIRL

Vienna, Aug. 14.—Prince Nikolus of Thurn and Taxis, who is closely connected with the Vienna Court through his relationship with the late Empress Elisabeth, has made a declaration here and in Munich, where his family resides at present, that he renounces all his titles and dignities.

A romantic love affair is the reason of this decision being taken by the prince, whose age is 28. He serves in the German navy as a first lieutenant. The prince told his mother, whose second husband is Prince Max of Ratibor, a short time ago, of his intention to marry a Vienna actress, Fraulein Rechberg. The family of Taxis refused to give permission, and the prince has now resigned his title, as well as his commission, and has received part of the large inheritance which will one day fall to him, to help in the foundation of his new life of a farmer in ThePrince Regent of Bavaria has given the prince the hereditary title of Baron Hochstatt. This romantic story will, it is reported, now find its conclusion in the marriage of the ex-Prince in England.

DETECTIVE NEWHALL IN VERY SPEEDY ARREST

That Detective S. H. Newhall is a live wire cop was demonstrated yesterday morning. He put two prisoners under arrest, with seemingly "the goods" on them, within 15 minutes after a series of thefts had been announced to the police.

One of the prisoners who gives Montreal as his home, has been employed by Barrie's Limited for about six months. A numder of mink skins were found to be missing and Mr. Barrie communicated with the Police Department.

Another report, that of missing instruments, came from Dr. Johnston, and the two cases were handed over to Detective Newhall.

The man, who was suspected of stealing the instruments is said to come from New York. He was shadowed and it was found that he was endeavoring to dispose of the mink skins.

Detective Newhall continued his investigations with the result that both men were arrested, and twenty four mink skins were found in the room where the suspected man boarded.

THE CHEMONG REGATTA WAS MOST SUCCESSFUL

Yesterday all the world (of Peterborough) and his wife were at beautiful Chemong Park. The attraction was the annual Shemong Regatta, held under the auspices of the Chemong Regatta Club. Scores of automobiles and many scores of other vehicular conveyances took hundreds of our citizens to the lake. Weather conditions were most auspicious. A golden August sun had its rays reflected by millions of tiny wavelets, stirred into gentle movement by the fall breeze. Gasoline launches loaded with bright eyed girls, whose faces reflected the excitement of the occasion, darted hither and thither; canoes and row boats loaded to the gunwales with the youth and beauty of Peterborough, including many of our fair cousins from Uncle Sam's domain, were also present.

The entries were strictly confined to amateurs. The Regatta Committee consisted of Messrs. H. J. Hill, J. E. Pattee and H. S. Matthews, Sec.-Treas. Every event was pulled off to the complete satisfaction of the thousands present.

During the evening a most enjoyable ball was held in the pavilion.

THE TERRIBLE NANAIMO RIOT GROWS SERIOUS, TROOPS EN ROUTE

Vancouver Island Miners Attack Police and Homes of Non-combatants

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 14.—The steamer Princess Alice, with 300 militiamen on board from Victoria was due at Nanaimo at an early hour this morning.

Government Aid Spurned.

Ottawa, Aug. 14.—No official cognizance has been taken by the Government as yet of the riots at Nanaimo and Ladysmith, B.C. The Department of Labor has already offered its services, and these were refused, while Hon. T. W. Crothers made a trip to the coast with a view to bringing about arbitration, but without avail.

If it were found necessary to call out the militia, this could be done by the Provincial authorities without any reference to Ottawa. The situation is being closely watched by the Minister of Labor to-day and if there is any possibility of bringing about peace he will do so.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 14.—That six strike-breakers had been killed at the Extension mines and a large number of Provincial police constables seriously injured, was the report grought to this city early today by officers who were despatched to the scene of the rioting in the coal areas of Vancouver Island.

Another report was to the effect that one man was killed and five wounded.

Strikers made an attack on the men working in the mines and the latter retaliated. All strikers, said to be fully armed, did not hesitate to use their weapons. Four hundred men took part in the rioting at the Extension mine late yesterday led by a prominent union man on horseback.

TAUNTS MEN LINED UP TO SHOOT HIM

Peking, Aug. 14.—The Chinese government has expressed its intention of providing handsomely for the mother of Mr. Grant, who was murdered recently by Mongols when on telegraph duty in Mongolia. Grant was a Scotchman who came from Stirlmorlie, on the Clyde. He behaved with great pluck, and when his capturers announced their intention of killing him he jeered at the Mongols because so large a number were found necessary to bind a single man. They said that they would soon stop his laughing and lined up 20 men to shoot him. Grant's last words shouted at them were, "You may kill me, but you can never frighten me."

JESSE ROOT GRANT SEEKS A DIVORCE

Goldfield, Nev., Aug. 14. — Jesse Root Grant, youngest son of former President Grant, filed suit for divorce today from Elizabeth Chapman. Desertion was the only allegation. They have two grown children. Mr. Grant has made Goldfield his home for the last six months.

WOMEN OF FRANCE FOND OF MEDICINE

Paris, Aug. 14.—The spirit of Guy de Maupassant would be much confounded if he could revisit today the Paris he loved. In his preface to "Manon Lescaut," he wrote that women were trying to force themselves into medicine and politics, "in spite of the experience of centuries which has proved that, without exception, woman is inexceptions to the rule laid down by work."

That was only twenty-five years ago, and, not to speak of many brilliant predecessors, Mlle. Juliette Boulanger has now carried off the Grand Prix de Rome for music, and quite a young "doctoress," Mme. Jeanne Tixier, in two open competitions, has beaten a formidable set of male medicos for the post to which she has just been named of resident surgeon and head of the Tours School of Medicine. She is the first woman to attain such a position in France. Nowadays there seem to be exceptions to the rule laid down by the experience of centuries according to De Maupassant.

MRS. SULZER ILL NERVES GIVE WAY

Albany, N.Y. Aug. 14.—Mrs. Sulzer's illness is so serious as to be regarded almost critical, according to announcement made to-hay by Chester C. Platt Governot Sulzer's secretary. Two additional specialists on nervous diseases were summoned from New York by telegraph this morning to attend her.

Mrs. Sulzer's temperature was 102 her pulse 110, her condition serious, and she can see no friends according to a bulletin issued at 12.30 by Dr. Robert Abrahams, the specialist summoned from New York last night to attend her.

ANOTHER NEW WHARF OPENED

Formal Dedication of Whitfield Wharf Yesterday

The formal opening of the new Whitfield wharf took place yesterday afternoon when the Government steamer Bessie Butler took down a number of leading citizens of the city and county, including Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Mayor Bradburn, Warden Garbutt, Reeve Howden, North Monaghan; James Kendry, Ex-M.P., T. E. Bradburn, Ex-M.P.P., E. A. Peck, M.P.P., J. H. McClellan, Ed. M. Elliott, and members of the County Council and the township councils of North and South Monaghan. After a delightful sail down the Otonabee River the party arrived at the wharf and immediately proceeded to business by electing Reeve Howden, of North Monaghan, chairman, who in a few words stated the object of the meeting.

The event was promoted by Mr. W. G. Howden, Reeve of North Monaghan, and members of the Council, whose desire it is to give expression to their satisfaction in the completion of a work which will be of great and lasting benefit to the people of that township.

Mr. Burnham said his attention was first drawn to the necessity of this wharf by Reeve Howden. Mr. Burnham then requested that the Council of North Monaghan should make the demand as it would then be clearly public work. This was done, and to the no small credit of the Superintendent, the work was completed within a reasonable time. He hoped that works of a public character for the convenience and well-being of the people would be obtained whenever necessary. He was always in favor of the management of public funds for the benefit of the public. Grants, subsidies, etc., to private individuals and companies he hoped were a thing of the past. Too much of the public resources have gone only for the indirect benefit of the people. There is room for great improvement in this respect. Good roads, agricultural and technical schools, stockholding subsidies, etc., etc., are what we want. Anything that aided the people in the transaction of their business like rural mail, parcel post, steamboat wharves, etc., were clearly a good thing.

The filling in of the approach to the wharf was done of the township, as well as putting the road in order leading up to the wharf. This work reflects great credit on those who were instrumental in getting it done.

Short speeches were also made by Messrs. J. A. Sexsmith, E. A. Peck, J. H. McClellan, and others, after which the wharf was declared open for business.

This wharf, as our readers already are aware, is situated on the boundary line between North and South Monaghan, and will be a very great convenience to the people in that locality as well as to steamboat men.

PEACH
JOHN HENRY FINN - YOU COME BACK HERE TO YOUR FAMILY!

NEGLECTING HIS FAMILY.

MARTIN WAS MURDERED OR IN TRAP BEFORE 7.30 P.M. MONDAY

Significance Attached to Young Man's Failure to Fill Appointment With Mrs. Barrett--Victim Was Prompt and Careful in Filling Appointments

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Mr. Martin's last trip to New York followed within a few days after his return from a previous trip.

To a friend he claimed that he was going there on a second occasion to represent a wholesale firm. The wholesale firm while admitting high abilities and personal integrity of the late Mr. Martin, say they have their own New York buyer.

If Martin had an engagement to go to the theatre with Mrs. Barrett, he intended to fill it. He was scrupulously particular in filling appointments promptly.

It was knowledge of his strong personal characteristic that aroused Mrs. Barrett's suspicion that all was not right when he did not arrive, and prompted her early appeal to the police.

A Reasonable Deduction.

The deduction is reasonable, therefore, that Martin was in the hands of his murderer or murderers before 7.30 p.m. on Monday night, when it was still daylight.

It is typically a New York crime, though the theory that it had a Toronto origin finds some support in facts unearthed. The butchery was performed with a crudeness that gives strong hope for the belief that the police will locate the man and woman particularly sought for. The cleverness of these rascals has a very thing veneer, but New York is a big city, and people can often loose the selves there quite successfully.

FALSE TEETH LEFT; OWNER IS MISSING

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 14—When the day man in charge of the power house of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway at Thorold went on duty this morning he found the night man James J. Burns, missing and no trace of him since has been found, with the exception of his false teeth, coat, vest collar and tie, which were left in the wash-room.

Burns who was alone in the power house was last heard from at one o'clock this morning when he answered a phone call from a freight conductor. For many years he has been an engineer on the Grand Trunk Railway, during which time he lived in Toronto.

HASSAN IS DEAD BUT DOES NOT NAME HIS MURDERER

Remained in Semi-conscious Condition Since Assault Ten Days Ago

Toronto, Aug. 14.—After lying in a semi-conscious condition at the Western Hospital for ten days, Hugh Hassan, the old man found near his tent in the Humber Valley, bearing evidence of a brutal assault, died at 8 o'clock this morning. If he knew who his assailant was he carried his secret with him for he has been unable to speak.

Seeking Murderer.

County Constable Simpson, who has charge of the case, is working on several leads in order to solve the identity of Hassan's murderer. One theory is that a woman was concerned in the crime, if she did not actually committ it, this being based on the appearance of a strange woman in the early morning hours at a house nearby, where she secured some clothing, her own having been literally torn off and she bore evidence of having been in a disturbance. She borrowed a skirt from the lady of the house, telling her that a fight had taken place in Hassan's tent, in which she attempted to interfere and was herself roughly handled. The description of the woman is very vague, however, and could be applied to a great many of those whom the police suspect. Up to the present, therefore, no arrests have been made. It was hoped Hassan would recover sufficiently to make an ante-moten statement.

Found By Children.

Hassan, who was 65 years of age, was in the habit of fishing near the old mill, living meanwhile in a little tent in the bush. On Tuesday morning last some little children playing in the bush, discovered him lying covered with blood, among the bushes. Constable Simpson had him removed to the Hospital.

EXPLOSION AT TORONTO WORKS ENGINES SHIFTED FROM BASE

Windows Were Smashed, Doors Blown From Hinges, But Total Damage Fortunately Not Large--Ammonia Ate Away Part of a Gas Pipe

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Planks were thrown 300 feet in the air, windows smashed, immense engines shifted from their base, and the smooth, even cement floor of the gas house building at the corner of Berkeley and Front streets so rumpled that it resembled Toronto Bay on a windy day, all the result of a nipple on a gas pipe wearing through and the gas exploded, to-day.

The pipe runs along beneath the flooring of the building and is used to carry ammonia. "Ammonia will eat away anything," said the Superintendent this morning. "And although we are constantly renewing these pipes, they will wear away in spite of all our attention. In this particular case it was a small nipple which wore through and allowed the gas to escape. An explosion followed. Our loss will be only the damage caused by broken windows, the replacing of the planks, and on the whole it is only a trivial one."

Fortunately there was no one standing over the planks which were blown away at the time of the explosion. If there had been anyone, they would have undoubtedly been seriously injured. The gas, following the line of least resistance, made its way under the flooring to the engine room, where it came into contact with some substance which caused the explosion to occur.

One of the workmen who was just about to enter the building, was knocked down and severely shaken up when the door which he was about to open was blown from its hinges. He was badly frightened, but, on realizing that he had not been injured, was able to resume his work.

NOTHING TO GOOD FOR PTE. HAWKINS

Montreal Will Give Him a Great Reception To-night.

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Private Hawkins, who won the King's Prize at Bisley, will be given a great reception at Montreal to-night.

Representatives from the various regiments will meet him at the Windsor station at 6 o'clock. The pipe band of the 5th Royal Highlanders will be present as a compliment to the Kiltie regiment to which the King's Prize winner belongs.

After the reception Pte. Hawkins will be entertained at dinner by Colonel Rose and the executive of the Z.R.A. To-morrow he will be shown around the city and every effort will be made to make his visit as pleasant as possible.

NUGENT'S SARSAPARILLA—PRICE FOR large bottle, 100 full doses, 35c., and well worth it, too. It's better to take no medicine at all than to depend upon cheap concoctions that are composed to sell at low price and a big profit just because there is a large demand for certain remedies at certain seasons of the year. There are so-called Sarsaparillas offered to us to sell to our customers at 75c a bottle that would bring us a larger profit than Nugent's Sarsaparilla sold at 35c. Nugent's Sarsaprilla purifies the blood, arouses the torpid liver, drives out all impurities, cleanses and tones up the system, and helps Nature throw off the dullness that comes from indoor life of winter. It arouses energy, brightens the eye, clears the brain, gives lightness to the movements. Nugent's Sarsaprilla is not the only thing you will find in this drug store. We make a specialty of Nugent's Remedies. Nugent Drug Co., 386 George St., directly opposite Cressman's store.

BASEBALL STORY

I figured as a principal in one of the funniest stories ever told in baseball, says Clarke Griffiths. Jimmy McAleer, then manager of the St. Louis Browns, and "Big John" Anderson, were the other two men in what was a tragedy as well as a comedy. The episode dates back to 1904, when I was managing the New York team of the American league.

When the St. Louis club arrived in New York for a series of four games, I decided to try to make a deal with McAleer for one of his outfielders. John Anderson, who could hit the ball as hard as any one, was the player I had by eyes on. I knew McAleer was very fond of Anderson's ability to hit, but I was also aware of the fact that on several other points Anderson did not stand so strongly with McAleer.

Prior to the start of the first game I made an attempt to put over the deal for Anderson. McAleer, realising that I wanted the player badly, held out for all the best of the transaction. Anderson played great ball in the first three games against us, which only helped to make it all the harder for me to acquire his services. It seemed as if Anderson was lost to me, when a baseball classic, happening in the ninth inning of the final game, made him a New Yorker.

At the start of the first half of the ninth, New York had the Browns 5 to 0, and seemed to have the game cinched. All at once the Browns began to hit the ball, and before I could realize what had really happened the score stood 5 to 4, the bases filled and only one man out.

At this stage of the game, Anderson, who was on first, stole second—with the bases filled.

When the smoke had cleared away, two men had been retired and the game was ours 5 to 4, when a moment before defeat was staring us in the face.

I looked over at the St. Louis bench and saw McAleer tearing his hair. "What do you say now, Jim?" I yelled.

"He is yours for nothing," replied McAleer.

That evening I got Anderson for the waiver price, simply because he made the mistake of trying to steal second with the bases filled. Four days before I had offered three times that much in vain.

Anderson by his hitting almost won the pennant for me in 1906.

ADVERSITY IS GOOD FOR THE YOUNG MAN

Professor Trotter Says Hard Times and Ill-luck Develop Manhood—Tennyson an Example

That adversity is good for youth, and in fact that it is almost an essential to strong Christian manhood, was the contention of Prof. Trotter, of McMaster University, Toronto. He declared that all young men should be the better for hard times and ill-luck in their early days. It was a discipline that served as a course of framing for weak characters to be made strong and virile. He spoke upon the ennobling effect of many of life's difficulties, touching upon what he described as the yoke of toil, the yoke of straitened circumstances and the yoke of sorrow. Tennyson, he held as an outstanding example of what hardships may do in the making of a strong striking character. Tennyson, he said, passed through many years of stern discipline in youth, and he passed through them triumphantly because he had a single purpose, the conviction of a calling to the life of a poet. The most of us have ideals or feel we have some calling decided for us, and this is our strength in trying times. But life itself is a vocation, and those who live it earnestly and nobly will attain a real ideal. Tennyson bore his yoke of toil, of hardships and of sorrow. For thirteen years he labored to give the world the immortal "In Memoriam." Engaged to be married at 24, he had the agreement broken at 27, since owing to the straitened circumstances which the death of his father six years before had given rise to he could not see how he could provide for a wife. Nor did his means improve until fourteen years later, when, at 41, he married the same young lady. The great poet-laureate's last effort, "Crossing the Bar," was given to us as the most conclusive proof that the life of hardships, poverty, toil and sorrow had moulded a character, firm and Christlike.

MAPS OF TEMPERATURE

Canadian Professor Makes Suggestions as to Overcoming the Ice-berg Peril

Professor Barnes of McGill University, Montreal, submitted to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, an interim report on his investigations of methods whereby ships may be warned of the nearness of ice or land. The professor regards the results of his work as highly satisfactory.

Professor Barnes has now for three years investigated conditions in the St. Lawrence, in the Straits of Belle Isle and along the Labrador coast, the Department of Marine and Fisheries supplying him with a steamer.

The concluding portion of Professor Barnes' report was as follows:—

"Very important results have been obtained indicative of methods which should be developed for equipping ships for avoiding ice and land. The experiments have been so decisive and reliable that I must strongly recommend that attention be devoted by the Government and by steamship companies towards adopting accurate temperature recorders on board ship.

"Again I must emphasise that it is to a study of the variations of temperature in the sea and not the temperature itself which will enable navigators safely to avoid ice and land at night or in time of fog. I would strongly recommend the Government to equip at once a ship to map out the isothermal lines around the coasts of Newfoundland, Labrador and the shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Straits of Belle Isle, for in so doing a chart could be prepared which would be of great assistance to navigators using these waters.

"Similar charts should be made all over the world, but this is a matter for international action and not for one Government alone."

Soccer in the States

Although soccer has been a popular game in the Western States for some thirty years, it was not until very recently that people in the East were able to see the real possibilities in the game. The standard of play has been improving lately, however, and there is hope that the United States will be able to send an amateur team to the next Olympic games to meet the crack British teams.

QUICK MARCH

A lonely and athletic learner takes up all by himself a telegraph key or a typewriter. He masters it fairly well by dint of dogged perseverance, but neither rapidly nor pleasantly. Just such another lad, no keener of brain, no swifter of touch, seats himself as a learner amid a class of twenty. Some of his neighbors are beginners like himself, but one or two of them are so proficient, are so accurate and quick, that they are slated for work at a railroad office next month. The newcomer feels certain that feats accomplished by younger lads than he is, may soon be achieved by himself. Emulation fires his blood, companionship quickens his pulse. He soon catches the knack of never lifting pencil from paper, of memorising at a glance a dozen words of "copy." Within six months this youth is a much speedier operater than his solitary friend, and he has had an incomparably better time. Beyond the stimulus of such teamplay, the whir and rhythm of machinery acts as a powerful spur. This comes out plainly in the experience of builders with concrete. Twenty years ago a little concrete was used here and there for foundations and culverts. To-day as a building material it is every bit as important as steel. Twenty years ago concrete was mixed with spades and shovels a hundredweight at a time. To-day it is poured from huge machines at the rate of a ton a minute. Foremen grey in the business declare that every laborer in their employ moves about twice as fast as did his predecessor a generation ago, when the work was wholly manual. Apart from the imperious call for food by a swift machine, apart from the speed of its output, its vast wheels and vanes grunt weird music which is a distinct quickener of pace. This is true of every factory and mill where machinery lifts its song. This is one reason why operatives the world over become steadily swifter of movement, more precise of touch, as chisels and saws give place to machine-tools, as electric motors supersede pedals, and a single huge turbine sings bass in a mighty chorus.—Winnipeg Free Press.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Without knowing the young people, we take it that the marriage of Charlie Rye and Miss Alice Bourbon in Lexington, Ky was a very happy blend.

Among the memories that a man cannot recall without a sense of humiliation is the time when he used to think that side whiskers improved his appearance.

Out in the West, the Liberal politicians, we are told, are going to torn out and work the roads. This is quite interesting, and we are sure that the spectacle of them working something besides the oublic will be worth seeing.

HERE IS AN INSTANCE.

The Globe says that: "The 'Canadian election agent, long identified with the fortunes of the Liberal party,' who is alleged by Mr. Whelpley to have said to President McKinley in 1899. 'Give me two million dollars to spend in the next Canadian election and I will guarantee the peaceful annexation of Canada to the United States,' probably never existed outside the imagination of some versatile Washington correspondent. All the golh and silver in the Treasury at Washington could not tempt the people of Canada to merge their nationality 'in the United States."

No, neither can the people of Canada be tricked into the sacrifice of their fisca, independence for the benefit of the United States at the bidding of the Toronto Globe and other Laurier organs.

WORK AND OLD AGE.

Here's to Canada's young-old men who refused to retire to a life of ease and inactivity because the finger of time points to old age, and the peaceful fireside. Lord Strathcona, at 93, after a life of activity that has brought him into touch with the great financial, commercial, and industrial enterprises of the country, and still presiding with courtly grace and dignity as Canadian high commissioner in London, is an inspiration. Sir Andrew Clark, the distinguished London physician, told Lord Strathcona some years ago that there was no reason why he should not live to a hundred years of age, "if only you keep on working," and Canadians will most heartily wish the prophecy may be realised.

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

When That Languid, Leggy, Easily-Tired Feeling Comes, Your Liver is Slow

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those full feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, langor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in clearing up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all other, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The name of that other great Canadian, whose name, in common with that of Lord Strathcona, epitomises the history of the Dominion of Canada, instinctively comes to mind in this connection. Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., at 92, further exemplifies and illustrates the part that moderation in living, a sustained interest in everyday affairs of life, and some work and play in the prolongation of life, few countries as young as Canada can produce two such "grand old men." But these two by no means exhaust the list of youthful old Canadians, who, after a lifetime of arduous toil, are still very live factors in the world of affairs. Sir McKenzie Bowell, newspaper man, publicist, ex-cabinet minister, ex-premier, at the age of 90, brings to the discharge of his duties the ripe experience of years well spent. In the realm of the church the Rev. Dr. Carman, as head of the Methodist church, at the age of 80, presides over the destinies of that great institution with a vigor and energy and keeness of intellect that would put many a younger man to shame. Then there is that great public benefactor, whose munificence has done so much for the cause of education in Canada, Sir William Macdonald, aged 81. Sir William still personally directs his own great business enterprises and gives much time to semi-public service. Canada is proud of her old men who refuse to be put upon the shelf. No two of toem probably would agree in their habits of living, but doubtless all would consent that work has with them been the greatest conservator of youth. Work, and the intellectual stimulus which is its natural accompaniment, is undoubtedly a determining factor in longevity. A living, active mind will do much to keep the body alive. The elderly man of active habits, who retires not only from business but from all kinds of employment, invites a rapid decline.

THE TRENT CANAL NO LONGER

All Aboard for Hudson Bay in 1914.

The Hudson Bay railway is another project which has been played with for years and which Mr. Cochrane is pushing vigorously. The first contract was let just before the Laurier Government went out. It was 185.5 miles and the amount was a little over $3,000,000. There was good deal of delay owing to the failure of the Bridge Company to throw the large and expensive bridge across the Saskatchewan at Le Pas. The bridge was completed in April last and since then very satisfactory progress has been made. On July 23, the contractors had reached Cormorant Lake Narrows at Mile 40 with the steel, and it is hoped to reach Mile 60 by August 25. Grading is well advanced and the contractors are putting up over a mile a day, and it looks like 150 miles of completed grading this Fall. There are twelve hundred men on the work. The late government left it an open question as to which port, Nelson or Churchill, the road should be built to. After a personal inspection Mr. Cochrane selected Nelson. Previous to his departure on the tour of inspection the contract for the second section, 68 miles, from Thicket Portage to Split Lake Junction was let for $1,800,000. Later the final contract from Split Lake Junction to Nelson 165 miles was let for nearly $3,700,000. The line is to be completed by December 1, 1914. The Minister is actively preparing for the opening of the railway by developing the terminals at Nelson. At present 180 men are employed on the work and it is expected that by autumn the number will have risen to 250. Five steamers were chartered this summer for the carrying of supplies and the following plant has been purchased this season: steel screw seagoing tug $43,250. steamboat "Katheleen" $10,000; one steel tow barge and two steel sectional scows, $18,500; dredging machinery, $29,000. There is being completed by the Polson Iron Company, Ltd., at Toronto, a $270,000 dredge. one of the most complete ever built in Canada. The same company has also to deliver the hull and machinery of a stern wheeled tug at a cost of $32,000. It is hoped that the harbor work will be sufficiently developed to be of assistance in the construction of the last section of the road

Transcontinental Pushing Ahead.

Work is being rushed rapidly on the Transcontinental railway. Between Cochrane and Winnipeg there is one lift of ballast over the whole line and half of the line is in excellent running condition. Except for a few soft spots which may cause temporary delay, the roadbed is in condition today to handle freight if necessary, and the indications are favorable for having the roadbed completely ballasted, temporary trestles and additional station buildings erected, and the entire line in good condition for operation by December 1, next. Between Cochrane and Quebec fifty miles of track are yet to be laid and indications favor the expectation that the track will be connected in November next, the steel bridges erected during the ensuing winter and the line through to Quebec ready for operation August 1, 1914

Quebec Has Fine Terminals.

Extensive terminal plans have been made for Quebec. The road will have ultimately its own entrance by tunnel to the site of the proposed Union Station, the present C. P. R. Palais station, the C. P. R. and Transcontinental railways having made a joint arrangement. Extensive shops will be located at St. Malo, and contract has been let for a large car ferry which will be used to transfer Transcontinental railway trains between Quebec and Levis until the completion of the Quebec bridge some years hence. The contract for the necessary dredging for the slips has also been let. In Quebec on the St. Lawrence side, the Transcontinental has secured three miles of water front and the Quebec Harbour Commission is already constructing docks on a portion of it. East from Levis to the New Brunswick boundary it is expected that the road will be completed by September next.

On the Grand Trunk Pacific on July 1st, there remained 372 miles of track yet to be laid in the mountain section. Mr. Collingwood Schrieber, chief engineer of the Western division, who represents the government, estimates that the road will be in condition for through operation by August, 1914

No Partnership on the Intercolonial.

Mr. Cochrane is making every effort to introduce more business-like methods in the management of the Dominion Government railways. The Management Board with its divided responsibility and necessarily slow action has been abolished and Mr. F. P. Gutelius, a man of first class reputation both as an operating and construction engineer, secured from the C. P. R. Since Mr. Cochrane assumed office there has been absolutely no political discrimination. Some criticisms have been offered by Eastern Liberals on account of dismissals that followed the change of government, but the fact is that over the entire I. C. R railway system of nearly 2,000 miles the dismissals have numbered very few more than were made on Prince Edward Island alone when the Liberals came into power in 1896

Much has been done in providing additional motive power and rolling stock, and a general grade reduction and double tracking is in prospect. The new terminal works at Halifax will be on a very large scale and are already under way, the first contract of $1,500,000, having been let.

The Prince Edward Island Ferry.

It remained to Mr. Cochrane to give effect to the agreement entered into with Prince Edward Island when that province entered the Dominion, whereby through connection was to be provided between the island and the mainland. A contract has been let for an ice-breaker car ferry costing $600,000, and work is actively in progress on the car ferry terminals at Cape Tormentine on the mainland. A day or two ago the contract was let for the Carleton Point terminals on the island there. The former contract will be for $1,000,000, and the latter for $850,000. It is hoped that the car ferry will be ready for operation before the close of navigation next year. When it is completed it will be necessary to change the railway on the island from the present narrow to the standard railway gauge. Additional railway connections will also be provided for the island.

Eskimo Inventors

A collection of Esquimaux inventions exhibited at San Francisco, substantiated the claim that the Esquimau is the most able inventor and skilled engineer among uncivilized people. In support of this, the collection included the first form of the oil heater and cook stove, water-tight boat, arch used for building purposes, and waterproof overcoats, as well as the most perfect types ever developed of the fish spear, spear thrower and harpoon. The smoking pipes form a link with Asia, and their carvings with prehistoric Europe.

FRANKNESS

Frankness is the art of saying things you honestly think exactly as you think them. To be frank is to be naturally straightforward. Look the other fellow in the eye. In the same manner as a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, so is frankness the only direct course between all people. Because nothing is wasted. The frank man is the man best to be trusted. Look the other fellow in the eye.

Profits in Cherries

Cherries, according to J. T. Bealby, owner of a commercial orchard on Kootenay Lake, are coming to be the most profitable fruit in the fruit growing industry, although involving possibly the most labor. Mr. Bealby's cherry orchards show a gross production of from $1,200 to $1,500 per acre. He states that one tree on his ranch has given an average of $70 worth of fruit every year for several years, and that $35 is a fair average for the entire acreage. After the first four years merely ordinary care is required with a little spraying and trimming. Apples, he says, give an average return of $350 per acre gross. Mr. Bealby purchased his ranch of 36 acres about six years ago, and has made a marked success from the start.

Mobile, Aug. 14.—Scout Dick Kinsella, of the New York Nationals, is in the city and will remain a couple of days for the purpose of looking over the Gulls. Kinsella is on his way back north from a trip through the Texas League and is on a still hunt for a catcher that will be of some use to the Giants.

While here Kinsella will look over the local team, especially Dave Robertson, who is the property of the Giants, out under option, the big fellow's work having attracted attention of baseball men all over the country. Scout Kinsella will probably leave Mobile, however, without seeing "Pug" Cavet, the crack lefthander, in action. "Pug" is suffering with an inflamed eye and it's hardly possible that he can work in the Memphis series. However, Cavet was in uniform before yesterday's game, and as he pitches and wants to work whenever there is any work to do, it may be that he will volunteer and go to the hill in one of the Memphis games.

RING.

New York, Aug. 14.—The world is not going to be greatly stirred over the news that Johnson and Langford are practically matched to fight in London within three months. The time when Jack Johnson can arouse public interest has gone by.

There's just one noteworthy thing about the match—it may eliminate Johnson forever from aposition that enables him to push forward into the limelight.

If it is "on the level" Sam Langford can whip Johnson, and will. There was a time when Johnson was too big, clever and well conditioned for Langford, according to all calculations, yet he wouldn't fight Sam for any amount of money. He's bigger, but he's fat. Dissipation has cut down his stamina. Training will be hard work, and the result of training won't be what it was three or four years ago.

Langford has just gone through a lot of hard fighting in Australia, where he eliminated big Sam McVey as a possible champion. He's at his best right now, and that best is pretty good, as anyone must admit.

It's likely that Johnson will change his mind about meeting Langford. If the prospect of a match with husky Sam didn't look good to him two or three years ago, and for a couple of years before that, it certainly won't be filled with pleasant anticipations now.

GOLF

Manchester, Vt., Aug. 14. — B. Warren Corkran of the Baltimore Country Club defeated A. G. McIlwaine, the seventeen-year-old golfer, from the national course, by 10 up and 8 to play in the 36-hole round of the tournament for the first president's cup at the Ekwanok Country Club.

Corkran was 8 up at the end of the morning round and won the first hole this afternoon. On the second and third, however, he lost, but was 9 up at the third. Going to the tenth McIlwaine played poorly and lost the hole and match.

In the afternoon play Corkran's outcard was 37. In four (byeholes not played.)

McIlwaine's out card was 39 in six.

One hundred players competed in the 18-hole handicap. M. R. Marston, of Baltusrol, got the gross prize with a card of 77. The net prize went to Sheppard Homans, of Englewood, for a card of 78 less 4.

TENNIS.

New York. 14.—Wm. Johnston of San Francisco, Cal., won the New York State lawn tennis championship in the singles, and becomes the successor of Maurice E. McLoughlin, also of California. In the final match of the tournament at the Crescent A. C. the seventeen-year-old boy defeated S. H. Voshell, of the Borough Park Club, at 6—4, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2. The point totals were 119 to 103.

Voshell is the only competitor in this tournament who has been able to win a set from the phenomenal youth. The New York player accomplished this mainly by playing the ball low on all of his returns and by working his service, a swift and deceptively bounding ball, for all it was worth. Johnston flasheh at the net however, whenever he needed a point, usually smashing so successfully as to score the close games.

John lost the third set mainly because he tried to outplay Voshell from deep court. Johnston will · in the tournament at Southampton, Long Island, next week.

TURF.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 14.—It was made known tonight that James B. Haggin's famous race horse and sire, Star Ruby was destroyed at Elmendorf farm. Star Rubby was 21 years old, was foaled in England, being by Hampton out of Ornament (dam of Scepter) by Den D'Or.

He was purchased by the late John B. Mackey for $5,000 when a two-year-old and brought to this country. He was trained by Green B. Morris and won, among other races, the Thornton stakes of four miles at San Francisco. The best of a number of good horses sired by Star Ruby was Africander, winner of $107,000. Quite a while ago Star Ruby had a bruise on the head which necessitated the removal of a part of the bone.

VALUABLE TIMBERS

Graham Island, Pacific Coast, Abounds in Fine Poles

Five thousand poles for use on the telegraph lines along the Panama Canal were cut from Graham Island, Prince Rupert. This was the first of the Graham Island timber that found a market and indicates the development of an important industry as experts are agreed that nowhere else could trees be found more adaptible, to the manufacture of poles in general and flag-staffs in particular. Some of the timber has not a branch for 100 feet up, while poles 8 inches at the butt and tapering to 4 inches at from 80 to 100 feet can be cut in any quantity.

SOME GOOD EXERCISES

Arm Movements and Deep Breathing Produce Results

Stand in front of a widely opened window, put your hands well back on your hips, fingers pointing forward, and take two or three deep breaths, gently exhaling in the same way.

It is wonderful how this steadies one's nerve. Try it some day when you are feeling inclined to weep hysterically and you will realise how effective it is.

It is very important that one should not overdo things in any case. This is where amateurs, exercising entirely on their own responsibility, generally go wrong. They think that by exercising a lot they will improve in health sooner. Never was there a greater mistake.

Begin gently. Don't try to do too much. One exercise repeated six times is enough at the start. Don't be discouraged if you cannot draw very deep breaths at first. You will improve gradually.

Never attempt to do breathing exercises immediately after meals. Wear loose colthes, for preference a loose dressing gown only, when doing breathing exercises. Do them regularly every morning.

Do them in the open air if you can. If not, do them in a room with the window wide open. When you are in the open air take good, deep breaths every now and then.

ANTIQUITY OF HYMNS

While hymns as we know them today are a comparatively recent innovation in church services, they are a very ancient institution, and existed long before the Christian era. Many important collections of hymns date back to about five hundred years before Christ, though, of course, hymns existed long before that period. Among the collections which have come down to us from then are the Sanskrit "Rig-Veda," a Chinese "Book of Odes," the "Buddhist Hymns," the Grecian "Homeric Hymns," and the "Odes of Pindar." "The Latin Hymns," or hymns of the western church, date from the fourth to the twentieth centuries, while the "Lutheran Chorales" date from the sixteenth century. The hymns which play so prominent a part in the services of the modern Protestant churches were not in wide general use until about 1860.

WOMEN GET FULL PAY

No Discrimination in Case of Norway's Postal Employes

For fifty years Norwegian women in the postal service have been paid the same salaries as men for the same work. Five years ago a Conservative Administration proposed lower wages for the women postal employes as a good way to reduce Government expenses. The measure was lost, and the question was allowed to rest in peace until last year, when another Conservative Administration again proposed to discriminate against women by making their rises in salary, after certain periods of service, lower than those of the men holding the same positions and with the same claim to advancement. The majority report of the committee that had the bill under consideration was in favor of its acceptance. But an election resulted in the return of a majority of Liberals to the Storthing, and the formation of a Liberal Cabinet. The new Postmaster-General sided with the minority report on the proposition, and a great many of the Storthing members also espoused the women's case. The final vote stood 80 against the bill to 30 for, and the women employes will continue to receive equal pay for equal work as heretofore.

KINDS OF BULLETS

Projectiles Have Changed From the Ancient Leaden Sphere

For more than three centuries, counting from the invention of gunpowder and the use of firearms, the bullets used in army weapons remained similar in form and composition to those used for shooting game; that is, they were round, and formed entirely of lead. Although the old spherical leaden bullet was the most ill-conceived and defective that could be imagined, it was only toward the second half of the last century that efforts were made to change the form. At first the diameter of the bullets was reduced, owing to the fact that the resistance of the air increases in proportion to the diameter of the projectile, but as it was necessary, nevertheless, to retain a sufficient weight, the power of wounding being in proportion to the projectile's mass, they were lengthened at the same time. Thus, instead of a sphere the bullet took the form of a cylinder, except the interior portion, which gradually was [illegible] more pointed.

NO OPERATION FOR GALL-STONES
No operation will be necessary for Gall-stones, Kidney-stones, or Gravel —SANOL, the German remedy discovered by a great German scientist, will surely relieve the agony of the sufferer from these complaints. It will also cure with equal certainty and promptness kidney trouble, lumbago, and all other diseases caused by the presence of uric acid in the system. It is also most valuable as a preventive for these diseases and will often prevent a serious illness if taken when the first symptoms appear.
Save the pain, danger and cost of an operation by using
SANOL
Relief will be rapid, the deposits will pass off rapidly and without pain. We have addresses and strong testimonials—some written from residents of Winnipeg, to the number of 300. We have 27 testimonials from one small Alberta town. We have a most convincing testimonial from one Winnipeg lady who passed several large gall-stones, after taking one bottle of SANOL. We are willing and anxious to furnish you with the addresses of these people.

AFTER THE FAKES

Mails of Canada Closed to Questionable Enterprises

The Postmasters-General of Canada and the United States are uniting in a crusade against mail order sharks who have been using the mails of both countries for fraudulent purposes.

Get-rich-quick men are, according to the post-office authorities, increasing in Canada at a disturbing rate, many of those who were driven out of New York, Chicago, and other cities across the line by the activities of the United States officials having turned their attention to Canada as a particularly ripe field for their line of endeavor.

Dry Batteries

Dry batteries can bt used in wet places and their lives lengthened by packing them in sawdust in glass jars and pouring melted paraffin over them after waterproof wires have been attached.

The Hot Water Bottle

When no rubber hot water bottle is available a good substitute can be made of a glass bottle or jar covered with paper or cloth to protect the patient from burning. Be careful that the bottles are not too hot, especially when using them about an unconscious patient.

A rubber hot water bottle filled with ice chipped so small that it can be put into the mouth of the bottle makes a good substitute for an ice cap.

WHEN GIANTS MEET

The Meeting of Jake Gaudaur and William Beach

In the opinion of many a follower of rowing, the greatest race ever seen for the championship of the world was that in which William Beach, the Dapto blacksmith, defeated Gaudaur ten years before the latter went back and took the title from Beach's fellow-countryman, Jim Stanbury. Both men were rowed to a standstill, and Beach's cutter went up alongside to take him out of his shell, as he was too distressed to finish. At that moment old Tom Green, who was in charge for Beach, looked over and saw that Gaudaur was "all in," too. "For God's sake," he cried, "paddle, paddle, that's enough." So, just staggering home, Beach retained his title, but never again could he be induced to make a match with the young Canadian who had given him such a terrible battle. Back to Australia he went, and eventually Gaudaur obtained the championship from Beach's successor, Stanbury. He had beaten the Australian in a regatta at Austin, Texas, previously, but the title was not involved on that occasion, and Stanbury fought hard, as long as he could, to stave off the inevitable. He knew Gaudaur was his master, and his defeat was foreshadowed when he went to bed the night before the race. Tom Sullivan, at whose Rutland Arms Hotel he stayed, wished him good luck [illegible] "Yes, I'm afraid Jim'll beat me."

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions — This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be The Largest in The History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton to Winnipeg.

GOING DATES.—AUGUST 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

ENGLISH HOLIDAYS WORTH THE MONEY

How They Make the Most of a Good Time in the Old Country

London Nation says: "England is remarkably well off in the matter of amusements, and the English beyond most people have the gift of extracting from life its last ounce of physical enjoyment. That is not, perhaps, their usual reputation. People talk of the French as the supreme merry-makers of the world, and regard us as a sombre people, who take our pleasures sadly. We have not, it is true, the delightful capacity of the Latins for extracting much out of little; ours is rather the opposite quality, which tends to reduce everything to its lowest denomination. But no one who really knows the life of the English people during the latter half of the year and the carelessly magnificent existence which the "upper classes" lead from the moment fox-hunting opens will deny that, given our peculiar standards, we know how to make the most of a good time. Holidays are in our blood.

"We are really and conscientiously a lazy people. The whole formation of English society makes indolence come easy, indeed, just as the famous actor is said never to rest except when on the stage, so as a nation we may be described as never strenuous except on holidays; then we are positive demons of energy. We shoot, fish, hunt, climb, walk, play golf and tennis with a zeal we scrupulously refrain from throwing into business. Easy-going when it is a matter of making money, we are enthusiasts in the spending of it; and the error, if it be, is one on the right side of the account. The money-making faculty is frequently, perhaps usually, linked with an abnormal lack of faculties in all other directions; the test of wisdom is to know how to spend it. We English, during the Summer holidays, spend it with open hands, but not recklessly. We get, if not a good return for it, at least the return we are aiming at. We build with it what is probably the too most elaborate, ordered and enduring fabric of enjoyment—of course of a rather vulgar kind—that is to be found anywhere.

"We have turned the British Isles into a veritable playground for the sporting rich. The twenty special trains that, on a single day left London for Scotland and the north, bearing the usual host of sportsmen and their families, valets, maids, chauffeurs, grooms, pointers and setters, were an astonishing commentary on our preserving pursuit of pleasure. No country in the world depends so much for its living on sport as Scotland. Millions of acres that 50 years ago were let at a peppercorn rent now bring in handsome sums as grouse moors and deer forests. The trail of the millionaire is over the entire country; the scale of living has been raised to the standards they set, and, except the sea and the golf links, they have seized and monopolized pretty nearly all the domain of sport that was once open to the impecunious man.

"Boating is another favorite of our people. Every riverside village and townlet has its annual regatta, and every navigable stream, in a normal Summer, is dotted with camping-out parties, while the smallest seaside resort has its race day for sailing boats, rowing boats, climbing the greasy pole, obstacle races, swimming races and so on. Yachting does not rank among the foremost of British sports, yet an immense amount of it is indulged in, and there must be some thousands of people who spend their holidays at sea in their own boats. A diversion which still holds its own is the walking or bicycling tour. We are not a people given to sudden crazes in the matter of sports; we are a country of old favorites, even in our [illegible]."

VALUE OF WINDBREAKS

Trees will not only enhance the beauty of surroundings and consequently the values of a farm, but will serve as a protection to crops, orchards, stock, and man if set out so as to form windbreaks. Fuel, posts, and poles will also be furnished in a few years for the farm. Windbreaks can be formed by a grove of trees, a narrow strip of timber or even a single row of trees set close together. The benefits derived depend upon the density and height of trees, which break the air currents and reduce the velocity of the wind. A belt of evergreen trees surrounding farm buildings and feed yards has a wonderful influence in moderating the winter climate by decreasing the velocity of the wind. Government study and measurements show that a narrow belt of evergreen trees consisting of only two rows, planted close together, and 40 feet high will reduce a 25-mile velocity wind at 300 feet to the leeward to five miles per hour. This reduction is equivalent to raising the temperature 10 degrees as it affects man and beast. This means more comfort for man, saving of fuel in the home, and of feed for the stock. Windbreaks also prevent the drifting of snow around buildings and feed yards. Studies and measurements show that there is considerable increase in yield of fields and orchards sheltered by tree growth. The drying effect upon the soil and crop is decreased by decreasing the velocity of the wind.

Your Bad Taste In The Morning Is Due to Catarrh

Destroy This Poisonous Disease Before Your Health is Seriously Injured.

Perhaps you haven't thought of calling those unpleasant symptoms that affected your nose and throat by any particular name—but it's Catarrh just the same.

When the attack is severe, your eyes are watery and look weak. Your breath is offensive, due to inflammation in the nose and throat.

At last science has discovered a real remedy, a new scientific marvel which acts like no other Catarrh remedy on earth. "Catarrhozone" operates on a new plan; it is a direct remedy, goes instantly to the source of the trouble. Its rich, fragrant essences and healing balsams are breathed in vapor form through a special inhaler and give instant relief.

Catarrhozone doesn't stop at the relief stage—it goes further—keeps on going till a cure is affected. Bad cases are cured, as you can judge from the following letter:—"Every morning for six months last winter I awoke with a bad taste, an awful breath and stuffed up feeling in my nostrils," writes Rob E. Rutland, of Regina. "It was simply an awful case of chronic Catarrh. Relief first came from Catarrhozone. I used that inhaler twenty times a day and took it to bed with me at night. I am cured, and by the use of Catarrhozone stay well. Now I am free from irritable throat trouble, coughs, colds, headache, or catarrh."
